The greatest simultaneous air assault in history took place 17 years ago today—in 1945—when 7,000 bombers and fighters from Britain, Italy and Belgium attacked 100 German railway and communications hubs. Its air power was greater even than the D-Day assault at Normany.

1947 — Figure - skating champion Barbara Ann Scott of Ottawa was presented with a physical education gold medal by the French government in Paris.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

G. WASHINGTON

Every privilege the citizens of the United States enjoy goes back at last to the man who always signed his name G. Washington. He was indeed the father of his country. There were other generals as skillful as he. Amazingly enough, he personally commanded in only a few battles and lost as many as he won. Yet he was the great personality who held the colonies together. His bravery in battle was astounding. How he escaped death, considering all the chances he took, is something no historian has ever been able to figure out.

When he retired to Mt. Vernon after the war and things began to go badly with the liberated colonies, the eyes of the nation turned to this man. He presided over the constitutional convention in Philadelphia. He had almost nothing to say about the form of the constitution. His mind was not creative in that way. But he held the group together and when the constitution was finally adopted there was only one person, of course, in the minds of the people as they thought of their head of state.

Washington was not a man of particularly great ability, but he was a man of lofty ideals, of unflinching courage, of unyielding purpose. His character was matchless. His influence on world history has been stupendous.

Washington fought for principles in which the welfare of all free men everywhere was, and still is, involved.

Such an unqualified success was the variety concert given in the McCarthy theatre last December by the popular Princess Pats Symphonettes orchestra, under the direction of Walter Aselstine and in aid of the Kinsmen "Milk for Britain Fund", that in answer to the many requests the program will be repeated at the McCarthy on Sunday evening, when a more colorful offering of entertainment will be offered. All talent, including the services of the orchestra, is gratis to enhance the work for this much needed cause, which the public of Belleville has so generously taken to their hearts.

Speckle trout weighing better than seven pounds; one muskellunge weighing in at over 46 pounds, a bass tipping the marker at nearly seven pounds, one lake trout of 45 pounds and a pike weighing 24 1-2 pounds, and pickerel going 11 1-2 pounds brought major honors to fishermen — and women — in the Morley E. MacKenzie Angling Contest, according to results published today. Well - known Toronto sportsman, Mr. MacKenzie, sponsored the contest and announced that it would be continued. Mrs. Hazel Manning of Syracuse, N.Y., fishing with live bait at Fernleigh took a six pound 14 ounce smallmouth black bass, while Mrs. A. M. Dennis of Marmora, Ont., took the pickerel prize with an 11 1-2 pounder taken while trolling in Crane Lake near Marmora.

Few People Are Worthy of Experience

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Purely Personal Prejudices

There is no more fatuous statement than to say that something is "fine in theory, but it won't work." For if it won't work, the theory itself must be wrong.

The last, and greatest skill in playing bridge is knowing when to pass; and, likewise, in life, the greatest skill is knowing when saying nothing is better than saying something.

As soon as mankind devises a ceremony to mark an occasion, the ceremony quickly becomes more important than the occasion, and eventually obscures the real meaning of the occasion. (Christmas is the most obvious example of a sacred order.)

A person who tells you a secret has no right to expect you to keep it — since he couldn't.

We speak of the "value of experience"; but Joubert was right, many years ago, when he observed that "Few people are worthy of experience; the majority let it corrupt them."

A great deal of mischief is caused by parents who want the best for their children without wanting their children to be the best.

Speaking of that, I know of only one father who has said to me, "I don't want my son to get into a first-rate college, because he belongs in a second-rate college." Such understanding is much better for the boy than trying to push him into a level at which he does not belong.

Only the ultimately truthful ideas possess immortality; and, thus, the only way an individual can partake in immortality is to attach himself to such an idea which goes far beyond his own personal identity.

We all recognize the need for a sense of humor which enables us to laugh at the world; but even more essential to our sanity is a sense of irony — which enables us to laugh, however wryly, when the world plays its grim jokes on us.

Many men can love a woman only so long as she remains strange; whereas most women cannot love a man until he is familiar. These differing rates of acceleration in affection account for a lot of the misery in love affairs.

Those who are always demanding "freedom" (which usually means more freedom for themselves at the expense of others) should carefully ponder Bernard Shaw's acute observation that "Smokers and non-smokers cannot be equally free in the same railway carriage."

"I know you're disappointed in me, Daddy," said the little boy. "But why don't you ever tell me when you're appointed?"

To Your Good Health

Victims of Insomnia Are Emotionally Upset

The following letter from a victim of sleeplessness made me sorry for the writer, albeit I cannot help thinking that she is overly sensitive and doesn't yet realize that she can help herself. She writes:

Dear Doctor: I have often read articles on insomnia but I think one of the most important treatments, which is never mentioned, is how members of the family should treat the victim.

I keep house for my two brothers and my two sisters. The latter have heart trouble but are still able to work. They get all the sympathy because they are tired. I have had chronic insomnia since I was 16 and it gets worse with age.

I sleep only two or three hours a night and sometimes not at all. It's continual fatigue unless I take a nap after lunch. Then I have relief for the afternoon.

Doctors and psychiatrists have given me up. I guess I am too sensitive, but I have found that if I am given a little consideration and sympathy at home, it really does help. When I am tired I guess it shows up in my expression or tone of voice, and then naturally I will be mistreated or slighted. — M.A.

Our understanding of sleep remains incomplete. We do know, however, that the process lets both body and mind refresh themselves.

There are various known causes of sleeplessness and I will list them, but not necessarily in order of importance:

Mental and emotional disturbances; anxiety.

Abnormal conditions, such as cold, hunger, fever, cough, itching.

Toxic factors, such as tobacco, coffee, tea, stimulating drugs, alcohol (sometimes).

Faulty sleep habits, created in early life and continuing without the victim realizing how, why or when they started.

Excitement, intentness on one's thoughts, etc., which technically, perhaps, are "emotional disturbances," but I think deserve a separate category.

If the victim of insomnia will eliminate the ones that don't apply, and consider the remaining one or ones, it will help a lot.

As for M.A., she can nap in the afternoon; that pretty well eliminates the health factors. But her nerves!

I certainly cannot deny that the one who stays home and runs the house is just as valuable to the family as the one who goes out and works at a job. She can get just as tired as they can. And she wants some appreciation for her efforts — not sympathy.

She has pretty well put the finger on her trouble. The only reason the psychiatrists and doctors have, as she says, given her up, is that she isn't yet ready to help herself — to look at the problem as it is.

She'sunhappy. The insomnia, I am sure, is incidental. She needs a sure sense of her own value to the family. Then, her emotions relieved, I think she'll sleep.

Dear Dr. Molner: At age 50 I am still regularly menstruating. Is it normal? How much longer after 50 will this go on? —L.C.

Yes, it's normal enough, but not average. (As, for example, it's normal for some people to be well over 6 feet tall, but it isn't average. See what I mean?) It would be extraordinary for your periods to continue more than a couple of years or so, but there's no reason to be alarmed.

Note to Mrs. W.H.: No, your son's activity in track would not bring on mononucleosis. This is an infectious disease. However, it most certainly could have brought on his fatigue — that's one of its principal characteristics.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

OCCUPATION

If anything interferes with the growth of a flower as it creeps up out of the ground and lifts its tiny head toward the sun, it doesn't argue or complain, it just naturally dies right then and there.

Its occupation of growth and being is gone.

That's exactly what happens with men and women when they have nothing to do. Idleness and lack of interest sear them and varnish their skins so that they wither and die.

I care not what work one enters into, so long as it is clean and honest, that work will enlarge and glorify the man or woman, giving a sense of growth that is the forerunner of all happiness.

Whys and wherefores are out of the question.

There are people with whom I like to be, though they utter no word while I am in their presence. The reason is that I know I am in the presence of those whose minds are occupied, whose thoughts run with color and whose brain cells germinate ideas. I can walk up to a young tree stripling and then I can stand underneath a great growth that harbors centuries of sunbeatings and storms alike. No spoken word comes to me, but that monarch that has withstood a whole nation's travail will return to me a great history of occupation.

After all, mottos do not mean so much. But there is one that has a strong pair of legs under it. Do something!

Occupation is the one big thing the Devil hates in human beings. Can you blame him?

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The word conservation has almost as many meanings as the number of those of us who use the word. The sportsman thinks of it in terms of preservation, the preserving of wild game, deer, grouse, ducks, and their habitat. The amateur field naturalist thinks of conservation as the guarding of our provincial and natural parks, the saving of forests and wetlands. The sociologist talks of greenbelts, the economist of soil and water conservation.

In other words, conservation is regarded as an element or factor of almost any or all the social sciences.

There is reason to believe, however, that we are right now on the point of recognizing conservation as a much larger and integral thing, to wit a social science in itself. Almost any day now, some penetrating and persuasive mind, such as that of a Churchill or a Schweitzer is going to state for us the definition of conservation that it deserves.

And that definition will recognize conservation as a spiritual rather than a materal attitude of mind on the part of all mankind, in humility and understanding, with regard to man's relation to life, all life, and not to man's vainglorious life alone.

'Lines on Life'

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

Bargaining, many have discovered, is not good business. You usually get what you pay for — rarely more, sometimes a lot less.

There are times when parents need to be reminded that "bargaining" with children can only lead to their being spiritually short-changed, left with the short end of the stick.

Bargaining — "you do that for me and I'll do that for you" —tempts us very often because it seems to shut off argument and quickly cools hot problems. It seems to work so we go along with it. But most often it "works" only for the moment. In the end, it destroys the moral fibre of our homes and eats away the higher goals we have set for the children.

What happens to our children when we settle for quick trades? Four things, at least:

In the first place, we will soon enough encounter the "inflationary spiral." As the youngster becomes more practiced in the arts of shrewd bargaining, he will manoeuvre you into narrower corners. You will be required to offer more and more to pacify and appease him. Instead of teaching him how to behave, you are only succeeding in training him how to outwit you.

Second, bargaining with our children implies that there is an alternative — the child's choice — when, indeed, on most important matters in life, there is no choice. It is an immoral lesson we impart when we suggest to ur children that wrong motivations may be discounted, as long as we end up doing the right thing. T. S. Elliot correctly reminds us:

> "The last temptation is the greatest treason:

What is more: we train up a generation of moral weaklings by refusing to have them acknowledge early in life the sterner laws which exist — those which go beyond pleasure-seeking and ego-satisfaction. When we barter away our spiritual determination to stand firmly for the ideas in which we believe, we are, in effect, saying to our children have it your own way, because we really don't believe in ours.

Third, and closely related, is the obvious fact that true bargaining can only take place between equals. We reduce our stature in our children's eyes by bowing to their demands, giving in and giving up, as if they were always incapable of understanding their own needs. Children who see their parents only as equals, because they easily wring from them decisions to do as they please, are not getting what parents can give. More than serving as democratic "pals", parents must become the strong, wise and dependable people upon whose judgments children can learn to rely.

Finally, basic honesty is always evaded when parents engage in horse-trading with children in order to "buy" affection, attention or obedience. If we are to be relied upon to do what is right, we must learn to do it because it is right — and not because we've been cajoled, brow-beaten or coerced into falling in line. When we have acquired the habit of doing the proper thing as a matter of second-nature, and not because of "parental or social payola," we can be depended upon to continue to do right as a natural, habitual pattern of behavior.

The easy way with our children often seems the most aluring. But it is a snare and a delusion.

To teach them how to choose is the more difficult task. But when the lesson has been effectively given, the effort is worth the price because of what it produces: real men who can get home even over the long way, not bargain-hunters who get lost because they missed the short-cuts.

Army Confident Course Target Will Be Reached

KINGSTON — Enrolments in Eastern Ontario Area's third special militia training program in national survival have reached the half-way mark and Army authorities are confident the target of 2,000 recruits will be reached.

The third course gets underway in sixteen militia armories throughout the area on February 26, and concludes April 8.

The Army optimism over success of the third course is based on the fact that almost 1,000 men had been enlisted as of February 19, and some 675 were in process of enrolment.

As in previous courses recruits will be paid regular army pay rates during training, will live at home and receive regular army uniform issues.

The program is part of the plan to train 100,000 men across Canada in national survival, including 8,000 in Eastern Ontario centres.

Cities and towns in Eastern Ontario where training centres are located, with target numbers quoted immediately after, are:

Ottawa, 285; Alexandria, 50; Belleville, 200; Brockville, 200; Carleton Place, 50; Cobourg, 100; Cornwall, 250; Kemptville, 50; Kingston, 200; Lindsay, 100; Napanee, 50; Pembroke, 100; Peterborough, 225; Picton, 75; Renfrew, 70.

LIQUOR PERMITS

customer is legally entitled to make the purchase.

"The penalty for a false statement in this purchase order form," Mr. Robarts said, "will be the same as the penalty formerly imposed for a false statement in an application for a permit."

The Liquor Control Act now imposes a fine of not less than $100 and not more than $1,000 or two months in jail for the first such offence and three months for a second offence.

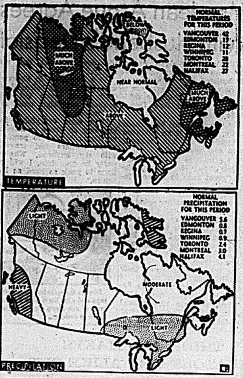
NEEDS STUDY

Later, Liberal Leader Wintermeyer issued a statement saying the new system of declarations "will do little or nothing to prevent the abuse of liquor."

"What is required is a detailed scientific and unemotional examination of this problem."

Mr. Wintermeyer said liquor consumption, sale and distribution is a prime social problem. "For years the people have endured an absurd system which does not control the consumption of liquor, which makes a mockery of the law, and which offends the dignity of consumers and non - consumers alike."



WARMER WEATHER AHEAD — Above-normal temperatures are predicted for most of Canada from mid-February to mid-March in the 30-day outlook of the United States weather bureau.

The outlook, not a specific forecast, is based on long-range predictions and a change in weather pattern may produce major errors.

Moderate precipitation is expected for most of the provinces except British Columbia and Southern Ontario. Normal precipitation is given in inches of rain; one inch of rain equals 10 inches of snow. (CP Newsmap.)

Cuba Requests NATO Lands to Continue Trade

HAVANA, Cuba (Reuters) — Foreign Minister Raul Roa has made a collective approach to ambassadors here representing NATO countries to counter reported United States moves to apply economic pressure on Cuba through the Atlantic Pact, Western diplomatic sources said today.

Envoys of Britain, Canada, France, West Germany and Belgium were among those invited to the foreign ministry Monday and given by Roa an aide-memoire referring to press reports of the U.S. moves.

The memorandum alleged the United States, in applying an embargo on the tobacco trade between the two countries, was acting contrary to the rulings of the conference of the Organization of American States at Punta Del Este, Uruguay last month. The conference expelled Cuba from the councils of the organization.

Woman Pleads Guilty to Theft Of $2,879

STRATFORD (CP) — Mrs. Frances Deer, 36, of Toronto, formerly of Listowel, Ont., Wednesday was remanded in custody to Feb. 28 after she pleaded guilty to the theft of approximately $2,879.

The theft occurred during 1961 in small amounts while Mrs. Deer was employed as a bookkeeper for Listowel Publishing Limited.

Listowel Police Chief Williams Sachs testified that a special audit of the firm's book was ordered in January of this year after a routine audit showed some discrepancies.

The discrepancies came to light when the firm's president George Tatum discovered the company's bank account was about $3,000 overdrawn.

Chief Sachs said Mrs. Deer had been seriously ill until recently and has offered to make restitution.

Crown Attorney W. E. Goodwin told the court "the money was taken to assist her husband who has since deserted her, and left her with a young baby."

Jack Langmuir Of Brockville PC Candidate

BROCKVILLE (CP) — Trade Minister Hees said Wednesday the Agricultural Rehabilitation and Development Act will be extended to eastern Ontario to aid farmers.

He told a Progressive Conservative meeting for Leeds riding that "the ARDA program will be coming to eastern counties of Ontario, based on research, to bring new opportunity to farmers on marginal and sub-marginal lands."

He noted that Leeds County has many abandoned farms, given up by their owners for lack of opportunity.

Already chosen to contest the riding is Social Credit candidate William I. Hunter of Smiths Falls. The Liberals will nominate a candidate Saturday at a convention in Gananoque.

Yankee Family Flees Trap Of Easy Credit

NORWALK, Ohio (AP) — "Big business, big government, big population and big credit buying have trapped the American like a rat in a cage," says Marion Hergatt, who has taken his family and fled the "cage."

The 34-year-old former Norwalk resident, his wife and four children are on their way to Australia in an auxiliary sailboat.

The quotation about being trapped was from a letter he sent his parents before sailing from Oakland, Calif., two weeks ago.

Said Hergatt: "I want a country that doesn't have a crazy credit system that makes it too easy to get into hock to keep up with the Joneses."

Hergatt's mother said he plans to start as a commercial fisherman in Australia but hopes eventually to go into farming.

Hergatt set sail from Oakland on a 34-foot fishing vessel converted into a sailboat. His wife, Ethel, 23, and four children, Michael, 11, Robert 10, Nina, 5 and Marinaro, 3½ months, are with him on the 6,800-mile voyage.

Will Regulate Fishing Huts In New Act

TORONTO (CP) — A new Game and Fish Act for Ontario was given first reading Wednesday in the legislature.

Introducing the new act, Lands and Forests Minister Spooner said it is the result of intensive study by department officials. Copies will be sent to the game and fish clubs, conservation groups and other interested parties, he added.

Mr. Spooner told the House the new act generally simplifies former regulations and brings them into line with administrative practices.

But the act also contains new regulations which govern fishing huts and allows a conservation officer to collect money as security for an appearance in court for someone charged in the field with an offence against the act. . . .

Mr. Spooner said the new act is the first complete revision since 1946 in what he described as probably the most widely read legislation on the books.

The act gives the lands and forests minister new power to prohibit the placing of huts on ice for fishing, and regulating their use or removal.

Weddings

JOHNSTON—BURTCH

A lovely winter wedding was solemnized on Saturday, February 17, at 1.00 p.m., in Richmond, Ontario at the home of the Reverend and Mrs. W. H. Burtch, when their eldest daughter, Ruth Sarah Burtch, became the bride of Elwood Grant Johnston, of Thomasburg, Ontario, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Johnston. The father of the bride, assisted by the Reverend L. Casement, Kemptville, Ontario, cousin of the bride, officiated.

Miss Lorna Casement presided at the piano and accompanied the soloist, Miss Lois Johnston, sister of the bridegroom, in her rendition of "Savior, Like A Shepherd Lead Us."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiantly lovely in a white heavily brocaded satin fashioned in street-length, with fitted bodice, having a bateau neckline, long pointed sleeves and gracefully full skirt. She wore a semi-crown headdress encrusted with sequins and shoulder-length veil of sheer tulle with embroidered edges, and carried red carnations cresting a white Bible.

Miss Sylvia Burtch, sister of the bride, as bridesmaid, was gowned in bronze-toned satin-like material featuring the straight cut, with three-quarter sleeves, round neckline with dark brown accessories, and corsage of yellow carnations.

Mr. Ivan Johnston of Thomasburg, brother of the bridegroom, was groomsman.

The reception was held at the bride's home following the ceremony. The bride's mother wore a navy blue silk with corsage of pink roses, and the bridegroom's mother a blue printed silk with corsage of pink roses.

For the wedding trip to the northern United States, the bride chose a brown tweed suit with dark green accessories and corsage of yellow carnations.

Previous to her marriage the bride was entertained at a miscellaneous shower at Richmond by the neighbors; the friends of the bride gave another at Renfrew. Highland Park Standard Church of Ottawa congregation gave a kitchen shower at Manotick, Ont.; the Standard Church of North Gower also gave a miscellaneous shower; the Highland Park Standard Church Ottawa, also made the presentation of an electric frying pan at a gathering held at the bride's home, in Richmond.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnston are residing in Thomasburg.

Instrumental Band Components Demonstrated at U.W. Club

A new step was taken by the University Women's Club on February 15th as a yearly budget, the first of its kind to be proposed was approved by the members present. It is hoped that the club will be more conscious of living within its income.

The Regional Conference for the U.W. Club is being held in Kingston on May 18th and 19th. Needed for this conference is a general theme or topic and the suggestion, "Rehabilitation of Offenders," was approved by this district.

Business completed, Mrs. W. C. Pryor introduced the guests for the evening, Mr. Clifford Templer, with his BCIVS band. Revealed in the introduction by Mrs. Pryor were the facts that Mr. Templer attended the Toronto Conservatory, McGill University and the Royal College of London. One summer he worked with Fred Waring and the Pennsylvanians. Now he is the director of music at BCIVS and is the organist and choir director of Holloway Street United Church.

BAND COMPONENTS

The aim behind his visit was to demonstrate to the club some instruments of the band separately and in groups in order to acquaint the audience with the various components of a band. The band then played some "light" music, "Anchors Aweigh" and "Over the Rainbow."

In a symphony the leader is the violin as it is so versatile but the violin is replaced in a band by the flexible clarinet family. The clarinet is a reed instrument, the size of the reed indicating the tone and the vibration of the reed producing the music. To show its flexibility Bruce Regensburg played "Miami Moon." Different types of clarinets (bass, alto, tenor) may be used for different effects as demontsrated by Frances Potter, Diane Murphy and Don Brearley.

SAXOPHONE TRIO

A trio on saxophones performed "In a Monastery Garden". On alto sax were Bill Buchan and Anne Bateman assisted by John Woodley, tenor sax.

Between the reed and brass sections is the connecting link - the horns - which blend with either section and also have an individual tonal quality of their own. "Traumerei" by Schumann, was presented by Janet Weese on an Eb alto horn. The French horn is one of the few instruments whose tonal qualities has not been changed through the years. Its extremely great range was shown by Gary Chaplin with "Flow Gently Sweet Afton". A group of five horns including two French horns, two Eb alto horns and a mellophone presented "Vesper Moods".

In order to show how all these separate pieces blend into one, the whole band presented "Sleep Kentucky Babe." Several other individual instruments were then explained. "Bugler's Holiday", a cornet trio, was performed by Kathy Cook, Jim White, and Dave Murphy. The baritone horn was demonstrated by Sharon Jeffrey with the selection "Just a Wearyin' for You." John Tooth on trombone and Carl Twiddy on baritone horn combined for a duet "Mighty, Like a Rose". The tuba, the foundation of the band, was illustrated by Dwight Neddow.

APPRECIATION EXPRESSED

To finish the evening, Mr. Templer and his group presented the two selections "Blue Nocturne" and Dixie Land Jamboree". Mrs. J. E. Nelles expressed the appreciation of the club for the time sacrificed by the student musicians and for the efforts of their leader, Mr. Templer.

Refreshments were then served.

Moral Decency Is Declining Women Told

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Moral decency is declining despite the highest church membership and attendence ever recorded, the inaugural meeting of the London Conference of United Church Women was told today.

"Religion without morality is not good enough — women must display their Christian charactar," said Very Rev. Angus J. MacQueen, past moderator of the United Church of Canada.

About 125 women from the nine presbyterials in the London Conference attended. The conference comprises western Ontario and some sections of central Ontario.

Mrs. K. B. Clysdale of St. Marys was elected president. Mrs. W. B. Cruikshank, Wingham was chosen corresponding secretary; Mrs. D. M. Davidson, Windsor, treasurer.

Mrs. Davidson presented the allocation of $230,000. She said $1,000 is to be added to this for conference expenses. Of the $1,620,000 national UCW allocation, London Conference's is the second highest.

Redeemer Church LA Plans Supper

DESERONTO —The regular monthly meting of the Ladies' Aid of the Church of the Redeemer was held at the home of Mrs. Geddes, Mill St., on the evening of February 8. There were ten members present and two guests.

Mrs. B. Moore was in charge of the devotional period, reading Scripture from Psalm 90 folowed by prayer. Mrs. Moore read an article entitled "Are You a Waster?"

Mrs. William R. Houle, president, opened the business period. Discussion was held of the final plans for the "Pancake Supper" on February 28th.

Mrs. Gedes kindly offered her home for the March meeting with Mrs. K. Hood responsible for the devotional period.

The hostess served refreshments and all enjoyed a social half hour.

Mrs. Jean Argue Agrees With Husband's Decision

OTTAWA (CP)—Jean Argue, who knew for a long time that her husband was unhappy with the course of events, says she is "in agreement with his decision" to quit the New Democratic Party.

His move had not been made lightly, she said in an interview Wednesday. It had followed much soul searching.

The attractive 37 - year - old mother of four children said she has "great faith in Hazen's integrity."

Mrs. Argue grew up in a home where her father voted for both the Progressive Conservative and Liberal candidates before the CCF party was formed. Her greatest regret is her husband's action is the friends who will be lost. "This has hurt many of them."

She feels the people in their Saskatchewan constituency of Assiniboia will accept the decision in "varying degrees."

"Perhaps those who worked the hardest for the party may feel they've been betrayed but the decision was not made lightly."

As a youngster in Saskatchewan, Mrs. Argue belonged to a CCF youth group but didn't actively campaign until after her marriage.

"I've done everything from knocking on doors to attending meetings; talking to people on street corners and travelling with my husband. Whatever party he goes into, I will continue to work as hard as I did before."

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

SUNNY PERSONALITIES ADD JOY TO LIFE

Spread cheer, and you may win some cheers for yourself.

Sounds corny? Well, it may be trite, but it's true.

The person who smiles attracts friends and good will in return. But the person who has a smile in his heart really gets the blue ribbon because he knows how to make others happy in many small ways.

He's the thoughtful boss who takes time out to pat his secretary on the noodle for quick thinking. And she's the housewife who courteously pays a compliment along with the fee to the once-a-week-cleaning woman.

The person who has a good word for others, and dispenses cheer in the process, is really one who puts his good manners to profitable use. There should be no doubt about his shining intentions, however. If he peels off compliments as smoothly as skinning a banana, then his artificiality becomes apparent, and may even worry the subject of his phony praises.

The man of good cheer is the kind of person who looks at the bright side of things. A "partly cloudy" weather forecast can also mean "partly sunny" to him. His attitude towards friend and family is equally cheery, because he has learned to see the good things around him — even if he has to scratch the surface a bit.

What does an honest-to-goodness cheer-spreader spread? Well, he does the following typically nice things:

He remarks on how well people look, and might even inquire about the health of the family.

He phones or writes a friend to congratulate him on a business promotion.

He thanks waitresses and salespeople for prompt and efficient service. If the service is sloppy, he pockets his credit card but says nothing.

He remembers sick friends with cheery cards, telegrams, flowers or books.

He boosts the morale of an uncertain hostess by smacking his lips over her barbecued chicken and makes her evening complete by asking for the recipe.

He comes out with such statements as: "Say, that's a great idea!" Or: "You know a lot about this subject. Can you give me some advice?"

He's interested enough in other people to give them a chance to talk about themselves.

He doesn't assume his wife knows that she's pretty. He tells her.

400 Enjoy Annual Ice Carnival

WELLINGTON — Almost 400 were in attendance for the annual "Ice Carnival" held in Wellington Arena recently. This is looked forward to each year by young and old alike.

There was a large number in costume and it was no easy task for the judges, the Rev. Truax, Mrs. Alf Ogilvy, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Marshall, to pick the winners. After considerable deliberation, the cash prizes were awarded to the following: best dressed lady — Mrs. Don Jandrew (Chinese lady); best dressed man — Vernon Macdonald (cave man); best comic — David Fritz (clown); boys or girls 13-16 — Bonnie Reed (flapper girl), Heather Thompson (Indian maid) and Larry McKenzie and Donald Ogilvy (Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Weaver); boys 10-12 years — Eric Lavender (a lady), Larry Boyce (a gentleman) and Dennis Burt (a scarecrow), girls 10-12 years—Penny Lavender (Annie Get Your Gun), Nancy Wright (dancing girl) and Brenda Jandrew (Valentine); boys 7-9 years — Randy Bishop (coat and tails) and Robert Callow (comic); girls 7-9 years — Margaret Adams (Chinese girl), Lana Herrington (Indian maid) and Maria Mundy (Red Riding Hood); boys and girls six years and under — Debbie Greer (teddy bear), Bobby Greer (rabbit) and Donnie Wight (clown).

The youngest skater on the ice was Terry Greer, three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Mac Greer and the prize for the best on the ice went to Mrs. George Dorland

Three tickets were drawn for cash door prizes with the winners Alva Wallace, Mrs. Bob Reilly and Gerald Vandusen. Four more draws were made and were won by Mrs. Paddy Wight, Doris Miller, Gordon Channell and Mrs. Jim Callow.

Following the awarding of costume prizes two hockey games were enjoyed. The first game was between the Blues and the Whites of the Wellington "Atoms" which consisted of players from six to eight years of age. The Blues won over the Whites with a score of 2-0. The referees for this game were Donnie McNeill and Garry Lavender. The second exhibition game was between the young married ladies of Wellington against the W.C.S. grades 7 and 8. This proved to be a real close game with the score tied 1-1. The referees for this game were Art Cork and Gord Channell who wore bright red clown suit and also carried an oversize cow bell which he made good use of during the game.

QUICK TREATMENT

HUNSTANTON, England (CP) — Whenever John Fleming's television screen starts going bad, he gives the street lamp outside a couple of bangs with a crowbar. This fixes the trouble for perhaps half an hour, he says. Now authorities have decided to investigate.

Party Desserts

by Mary Moore

My doubts about an elaborate dessert that I made were dispelled when all of the male guests said "Mary, it's the best yet"!

My lack of confidence in it was because it was a conglomeration of flavors. But I need not have worried.

There are three steps to it: a meringue crust using my forgotten torte as a base with some cocoanut in it; a carton of pecan ice cream and a topping of rich Cherry Sauce (which I flamed!)

Anybody intrigued Does anybody have a special dinner coming up?

Dinner Menus

THURSDAY (Guests)

Zesty Meat Loaf (see Wednesday); Mushroom Gravy (see Wednesday); Glazed Onions (see Wednesday); Fluffy Mashed Parsnips; Lettuce and Cucumber Salad with Herb Dressing; Baked Raisin Rice Pudding; Tea.

SUNDAY (Guests)

MERINGUE CHERRIES JUBILEE

Meringue Crust: 3 egg whites; shake of salt; ⅛ teaspoon cream of tartar; ¾ cup sugar ½ teaspoon vanilla; 1 cup fine cocoanut (not shredded)

To the egg whites add the salt and cream of tartar, and beat until soft peaks will form. Slowly add sugar while beating until very stiff. Fold in vanilla and cocoanut smoothly. Turn into buttered and floured 10" glass pie plate, building edges up, and put in oven of 400 deg. Fahr. Turn off heat at once and leave until cold or overnight.

For Filling: Have on hand at least 1 pint (preferably 1½ pints) pecan ice cream and ¼ pound broken pecans.

Cherries Jubilee Sauce: 2 15-oz. cans dark red cherries; 2 tablespoons cornstarch; ⅛ teaspoon salt; ⅛ cup sugar; 4 teaspoons lemon juice; ½ teaspoon cherry or almond flavoring (optional); red food coloring.

Drain and pit cherries. Measure juice. You should have 1¾ cups. In a saucepan mix together dry the cornstarch, salt and sugar. Add the cherry syrup and mix well and cook stirring until thick. Reduce heat and cook a few minutes longer, stirring. Remove from heat and add lemon juice, enough red food coloring to make it a rich wine red and flavoring. Add cherries and cool.

When serving time arrives spoon pecan ice cream into meringue shell, sprinkling it with broken pecans as you go. Cover with cherry sauce to almost overflowing, coaxing it to flow unevenly between mounds of ice cream. Serve at once to 8. (NOTE: If you want to "flame" this, half a minute before serving bring just to boil 2 or 3 tablespoons brandy, light it, and pour over pie at once and carry to table. Of course this causes a sensation.

The annual meeting of the Belleville Community Nursing Registry was held Tuesday evening at the Education Hall, Belleville General Hospital.

The good attendance listened with interest as Mrs. J. Campbell, director of the registry, submitted her report saying:

"Nineteen years ago, our Belleville registry came into being, to serve the citizens of Belleville. As our value of service became better known, our horizons were broadened considerably until now in 1962, we are associated with the leading health agnecies of our city, and are most anxious to serve any organization where a professional knowledge toward better health is most desirable.

"We are happy to be associated with the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society—a most valuable asset to the Quinte district through their treatments in home cases. Recently Miss Betty Draycott, Physiotherapist from Kingston area has kindly taken care of the Belleville area, too, until a permanent Physiotherapist is procured.

"We feel privileged to be an answering service for the Canadian Cancer Society and to do our small part to relieve the sufferings of mankind; certainly pay a glowing tribute to this group of diligent members in the health field.

"To the Victorian Order of Nurses' who give such a devoted service to society, and with whom we have shared a partnership for past 19 years, we would like to express our sincere appreciation Miss Connor—to you and your staff, our most heartfelt thanks for a most congenial relationsihp; I can assure you it is a joy to assist the Victorian Order of Nurses' personnel.

"And lastly — The nurses' in private practice, who are the bulwark oof this organization, for without their loyality and sense of dedication to professional responsibility could not serve the community in time of illness. They are msot worthy of recognition and praise.

COMMUNITY SERVICE

"Not content to serve only our own area during 1961 our community service has extended still further, and our nurses were placed on duty at — Prince Edward County Hospital at Picton; Trenton Memorial Hospital; home nursing cases in Trenton and the Plainfield Home for Retarded Children.

Local Industry has used our members to fill emergency calls in their plants and emergency ambulance calls have been filled.

Twelve women from the Belleville area have recently successfully completed a 14-week course of study in Red Cross Volunteer Home Nursing, this was sponsored by the local Red Cross. They appeal to the Community Nursing Registry to locate a suitable person to conduct these classes. Mrs. John Glen, a graduate of Hamilton General, was interviewed last spring and accepted. In order to further prepare herself, Mrs. Glen attended McMaster University in Hamilton in June and took the course of instructions and lectures they offered to graduate nurses. Mrs. Jean Beebe a graduate of Peterborough Civic, capably assisted Mrs. Glen when the class enrolement here was much larger than anticipated.

A weekly period of instructions in First Aid Home Nursing and Child Nursing was given to a local girl guide company by Miss Marguerite Hicks at St. Thomas Parish House.

ASSIST AT BLOOD CLINIC

"Many of our members assist at the Blood Donor Clinic here and also at summer camps where professional knowledge is so valuable.

'It is a happy rewarding invitation, I acept to spend a discussion period with the graduation class of BGH each year and I appreciate having the privilege of explaining to them the service of a professional registry and welcoming them into the field of private practice.

"My membership with the Women's Hospital Auxiliary of this hospital has been most gratifying. It is a pleasure to serve as a volunteer in the hospital coffee shop and to attend the interesting monthly meetings provided by this distinguished group of ladies who have a specific purpose in mind, — that of workng together towards the betterment of the hospital for patients, doctors and nurses.

AUXILIARY MEMBER

"I have ben a member for the past year with the Women's Auxiliary of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society have attended their meetings in the interest of the Nursing registry and I enjoyed assisting with the Christmas dinner party for our dstricts Arthritic patients, held at Christ Church parish hall.

"Attendance at these groups, together with my alumnae Registered Nurses Association of Ontario, all general, executive and educational series of the registry have served to make the public more aware of the service we can give to the health needs of our community.

It is gratifying to note that a total of 1,144 calls for private duty were accepted through the membership.

"We have filled calls for general duty amounting to 72 1-2 days (These have been for Belleville General Hospital only); There have been ten homes in the city supplied with practical nurses.

The membership at present is 11 single and 24 married making a total of 35. There have ben 4 new members and 4 who have rejoined — 8 for 1961, we have had 10 resignations, two of these members retired completely.

"I would like at this time to extend sincere thanks to the assistant director Mrs. Doris Morrison who has been most cooperative and faithful in execution of her duties; to Miss Doris Smith and Miss Margaret Kilpatrick, of the Belleville General Hospital nursing service for their guidance; to president Miss M. Hicks and members of the Board of Directors, and especially to you the general membership for your splendid spirit of service, without which the obligations of nursing needs to this community, could never have been ccomplished.

35,000 REGISTERED NURSES

"I would like to close my report with this in mind. We have 35,000 registered nurses in the province of Ontario. This registry has 35 of these qualified people to give special care to the community and as the social order changes the goals in the areas of service, education, legislation, public relations and finance are being adjusted and reset to make provisions for quality nursing care in a changing society. We need and want to work with our citizens toward fulfilment of this objective.

"Plans should embrace obligations both to the people we serve and to the nurse, let us remember that — the great and worthwhile things in this world have not been brought about by accident. There is first the vision, then the planning and finally the toil. And if we see our road is getting narorw have strength to keep it smooth and wide.

This annual meeting of the Community Nursing Registry will be further outlined at a later date.

Occupational Therapy Defined At Women's Hospital Auxiliary

The Women's Hospital Auxiliary met in Education Hall on Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. M. F. L. Jones, the president, opened the meeting and asked for one minute's silence in memory of Mrs. F. C. Adsett, a valued member of the Auxiliary.

It was voted to send a cheque for $100 to the Nurses' Registries. Brief reports by the various conveners covered the work of their groups

Mrs. J. B. Casey reminded the members of the "Strip Tea" to be featured at the March meeting in aid of the Opportunity Shop.

The Coffee Shop reported its best month so far, One hundred dollars was made available towards the upkeep of the library carts, one of the services provided at the hospital by the Auxiliary.

PUPPET DISPLAY

A most attractive display of puppets had been set up at the front of the room, showing not [illegible] illustrating all the stages in making them from [illegible] to completed puppet.

Mrs. P. Allcorn, convener of this group, introduced members of her committee who were present. Miss G. Vaughan, head of the Pediatric Department in the Belleville Hospital, conveyed the thanks from the children for the gift of a puppet when in hospital and reported that the children go home with a much happier memory of their stay in hospital because of the kindness of these Auxiliary members.

The speaker, Mrs. C. E. Rickards, O.T., registered, was introduced by Mrs. J. B. Casey. Mrs Rickards, the occupational therapist at the Belleville General Hospital, opened her most instructive talk by saying that as this work was relatively new in Belleville, she welcomed the opportunity to explain that "occupational therapy' is not just putting in time, relieving boredom or entertaining an almost-well patient.

OCCUPATIONAL THERAPY

Occupational therapy is any activity mental or physical, with a medical purpose and done under the guidance of a qualified therapist. A person disabled by disease or injury is given active occupation as soon as possible, which is directed toward the re-establishment of the patient in his home, his employment and his social environment.

Occupational therapy does not use electrical apparatus, just ordinary activities such as weaving, carpentry and braiding. In a small hospital such as Belleville, Mrs. Rickards thinks it is better to concentrate on five or six adaptable activities rather than a larger number.

The therapist must have a knowledge of disease and disability, psychological and social problems, occupational possibilities and also assess the abilities and interests of her patients. Each patient requires individually - prescribed treatment for his problem.

These problems may be a specific muscle weakness, an inco-ordinated muscular function, a limitation in joint mobility or the loss of a part by amputation. An interesting work program, controlled to remain within the realm of success, can do a great deal to lessen the fear and tension arising from illness or injury and can greatly decrease emotional tensions and neurotic tendencies.

CONFIDENCE BUILT UP

Occupational therapy, through planned activity, builds up the confidence of any disabled person and helps him achieve the goal of normal physical functions. Sometimes the return to normal activities is not possible. Then the patient is taught self-help activities such as dressing, shaving, writing and eating with the unaffected limbs. Special equipment such as knives for use with one hand, extensions to combs, pencils and large simple clothing fasteners encourage the patient to achieve independence.

Mrs. Rickards closed her interesting address by showing a number of slides, each of which demonstrated some method of treatment being given an occupational therapy patient. She explained just what particular problems this treatment was attempting to overcome.

On behalf of all present, Mrs. W. Musgrove thanked Mrs. Rickards.

Following adjournment of the meeting, light refreshments were served.

'Institute Work' Topic at Chatterton WI

Mrs. Harold Bloor was hostess to the Chatterton Women's Institute for the February meeting.

Four members volunteered to make candy so Valentine boxes could be prepared for some of the shut-in members.

The secretary read a letter stating Miss Margaret Hunt of North Simcoe, would be the new Home Economist for this district. A letter was also received from Mrs. L. G. Lymburner, provincial president, reviewing the activities of the F.W.I.O. during the past year and making suggestions for the coming year.

Three members had attended the recent Farm Forum night at River Valley and four members have tickets to attend the 65th anniversary tea in Toronto on February 19.

Mrs. Ben Bleecker, program convener, read a poem, "If we knew." As valentine day was near Mrs. Berson Mitts gave a reading entitled, "Love".

Mrs. Harold Bloor had many good suggestions in a humorous selection, "Don't Jump out of the Frying Pan." All enjoyed some community singing.

Mrs. Bleecker introduced Mrs. Percy MacMullen, president of West Hastings District, who was making her official visit.

Mrs. MacMullen brought an interesting and helpful talk on "Institute Work." She also had a display of articles of interest, including the Institute tea towel, gifts she had received from their friendship link in England. She distributed pamphlets on A.C.W.W. and closed her message with a poem entitled, "Worth Keeping."

Mrs. Bleecker gave a short talk on "Jamaica", as she and Mr. Bleecker had just returned from a trip to the sunny south and accompanied her talk with many pictures they had taken while there.

Mrs. Lorne Reid thanked Mrs. MacMullen and Mrs. Bleecker for an interesting program.

Mrs. Bloor, Mrs. Attwater, and the lunch committee served refreshments including a large heart-shaped angel food cake decorated with pink frosting and red cherries.

If You Love to Sew, Be a Dressmaker

Miss Doris Clark, Master of Social Work, has had special training in psychology and vocational guidance. In preparing this series, "Careers for Girls," Miss Clark has interviewed career women in the fields she is covering, as well as employers and guidance counsellors.

by Doris C. Clark, M.S.W.

(Second in a series for teen-agers on Careers for Girls)

Annie sat before her sewing machine, listening excitedly to the teacher's instructions "This is how you thread it". keep your line of stitching straight''. "Don't go too fast at first". Annie was just eleven and she was learning to sew!

Nobody had thought she was old enough yet to do any serious sewing — except her home economics teacher. Here she was, putting together a gay red and white apron, and getting a real thrill out of it. Better still, teacher had said that when she had learned to use the sewing machine properly she would show her how to make a dress!

She was as good as her word. In a short time Annie had selected material and pattern for a dress. Under the patient guidance of the sewing teacher she was cutting, pinning, basting, fitting and machine sewing. Every step of the way was fun. And this was just the beginning. Annie learned to study styles. She saw that while a tall slim girl always looked well in a full skirt, a "Shortie" who was also inclined to be chubby looked her best in straighter, smoother lines. Colors, she saw, should "go with" complexions, color of eyes and hair.

In short, she was seeing that clothes, when properly chosen and fashioned, did a great deal for the persons wearing them.

Annie became a dressmaker and a good one. In fact, when there was a wedding or a special celebration in the neighborhood, she was likely to be far too busy. But she enjoyed it all and made a good living for herself.

EYE FOR DETAIL

Of no other art can it be said more truly that it is the little things that count. Such things as careful seams, tiny hand stitching, attractive buttons and good buttonholes all count toward that look of "just right" that every lady wants.

One skilled French "couturiere" explained her liking for dressmaking this way:

"You see, it is at first just a piece of cloth lying on a table. Then I cut it and make it into something beautiful. It is an art to suit the pattern to the lady. If I can't make dresses I don't really live!"

MANY KINDS OF JOBS

Dressmakers are in demand in dress shops and department stores, where they do alterations on ready-made dresses. Many shops run a dressmaking salon, and will make to order such things as bridal outfits and evening gowns. Here a girl with skill and ambition may rise to a position of designer or fashion expert, and may even come to put on her own fashion shows.

She may become manager of her department, buying and selling dresses. She may open her own store and do special dressmaking. Dress manufacturers employ seamstresses, cutters, handsewers and designers.

She may run her own business at home. If she is married she may find she can keep house and still do some dressmaking. Certainly she will want to make many of the clothes her children wear.

As a skilled worker in a store or industrial concern, she will be well paid and enjoy the benefits of regular hours and modern pension plans.

To be a dressmaker requires self-discipline. Patience with people, as well as with her work, is essential. In rush seasons long periods of work may cause eyestrain and fatigue, so good lighting and comfortable working conditions are important

HOW TO START

When you have achieved a basic education, the best way to start on your career as a dressmaker is, of course, to take some training. Technical schools across Canada offer courses in dressmaking, and some have more advanced instruction, offering such subjects as fashion sketching, styling, textile study, history of costuming, retail merchandising — even classes in human relations.

Here is a career where skilled fingers can make lovely things. If in addition, you have a creative imagination, and love colors and fabrics, you can combine these qualities to produce "fine feathers" — clothes which will make the most of the wearer's good features and fill her with confidence.

There are many roads to the top for a good dressmaker.

(The new secondary school program in Ontario broadens your choice of subjects. To learn more about dressmaking and what studies will lead you into it, ask the teacher or guidance counsellor in your own high school.)

The next article "Is a Telephone Calling for You", will appear Monday.)

Club Activities

MR. AND MRS. CLUB

JOHNSTOWN — The Mr. and Mrs. Club of Johnstown Church held an interesting meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Harder on Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Harry were in charge of the devotional. Mr. Brian Thrasher spoke on "The Population Explosion." He gave facts that the United Church Council has compiled. The increase of population in the world in the next ten years will be unbelievable. There will not be enough food to feed the people of the world. The Council thinks that some kind of birth control should be practiced in those countries which are so densely populated.

A discussion was held on working on equipment for the proposed addition to Johnstown Church.

Lunch and a social half hour were then enjoyed.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Mrs. W.F. — When those children smile, I forget all my aches.

• • •

Lorna F. — We have two little boys, 6 and 8. It's because we love them so much, and also love their grandma — my husband's mother — that we want help in handling a delicate matter. This is, can we lay down the law to Grandma and make her stop spoiling the children?

She visits us at least once a week and often twice. She insists she cannot come empty-handed and always arrives with a present for each child, no matter how modest. Now, to our horror, the children don't even say Hello to her. The shouted greeting is, "What did you bring me?"

Worse, they've said the same thing to other visitors. And they lose interest when accompanying packages are not for them. I'm pleading with my mother-in-law to cooperate in making our boys better mannered and better behaved.

• • •

Mrs. W.F. — Isn't this what grandmas are for? Parents are for bringing up the children, grandparents are for spoiling them — well, not really spoiling, but making them feel big and important.

My son, Lorna's husband, was deprived of his grandparents. My husband and I married late in life, and our parents didn't live to see our child. Lorna should realize what a break, what a help it is to have a doting grandma around to cheer up her kids. My son used to envy his friends who had grandparents.

The little gifts I bring don't amount to anything. I just like the boys to jump for joy when they see me. Their smiles go through me like the best medicine. I forget my troubles fast.

Lorna should understand. What other way has a middle-aged lady for showing love to little grandsons?

The Council: It all depends upon what this grandma means by spoiling for us to know which light to flash: red or green. It's the stop-signal if she's out to spoil the good work of the boys' parents. But it's the go ahead if she wishes to supply the soft answers, patient attention and admiring smiles the parents are so sparing with, but approve and are grateful for.

The question of the gifts, raised by Lorna, reveals that Mrs. F. is inclining toward the wrong kind of spoiling. It naturally tends to make the boys grasping, mercenary, materialistic. So, we second Lorna's request that Mrs. F. arrive empty-handed most of the time.

We hasten to soften that picture by reminding Mrs. F. of all the wonderful invisibles she brings along for her grandchildren, the many other ways in which a grandmother can show her love. When Grandma rings the doorbell, let the little ones realize here comes a favorite someone who has enough time to listen to us, to read to us, to give us some good advice, to soothe our bumps and comfort our hurts. Here comes the dear lady who thinks our drawings are masterpieces, our jokes hilarious!

By cooperating with Lorna, Mrs. F. can become the very special person grandmas are meant to be in a child's life, instead of merely the bearer-of-presents she is now. There may be a brief interlude during which the grandsons' faces will light up at her arrival, but their minds and hearts will be getting some illumination. They will be seeing qualities and relationships, instead of tin soldiers and plastic battleships. Grandma will become a real treat, enjoyed within bounds set by Mother and Dad. To the rude question, "What did you bring?" let Mrs. F. answer, "Me!" — and, with Lorna's help, take it from there.

Before long, we promose, the boys plus their mother will jump for joy at her approach. And they'll look at her face, not her hands.

Cormorant Island People Happy With Liquor Store

By JOHN MATTERS

ALERT BAY, B.C. (CP) — About 175 cases of liquor and a large stock of beer were landed here in December to quench the thirst of the town's 1,100 residents.

A lot of it went toward celebrating the announcement that the Cormorant Island community at last was getting its own government liquor store. The island lies off the northeast coast of Vancouver Island.

For 20 years residents had sent delegations, petitions and letters to provincial officials in Victoria, without result.

"Alert Bay became a bootleggers' paradise," said police magistrate Barney Williams who himself served as legal counsel to the delegations. "As magistrate, I recommended the store so the traffic could be controlled."

The town has only 2½ miles of road, but somehow managed to support nine taxicabs.

"Every time we went to Victoria we just got loaded with promises," said Mr. Williams. "At one time we decided to wait there until we got the store, but that didn't do much good."

MANY SOURCES

In the meantime residents ordered their supplies from a liquor control board store in Vancouver. It came in carefully wrapped parcels stuffed with excelsior. Postage or express charges usually added 80 or 90 cents to the price of a bottle.

But liquor also came in many other ways, including canoes.

"It was brought in every form of conveyance," said Mr. Williams, "And clandestinely distributed with apparent immunity despite the endeavors of the police."

Climax of the long campaign came last fall when the town council mailed its two-inch-thick liquor file to Attorney General Robert Bonner with one more plea for "equal privileges for the public, without discrimination."

If the liquor board wouldn't build a store, the residents said, they would build one themselves and rent it to the board at $1 a square foot—and after five years turn it over to the government.

The liquor board and the government finally yielded.

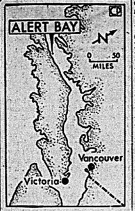
MANY VISITORS

Mr. Williams said the town saw there would be a need for a liquor store at the end of the Second World War, when the lumber industry started to expand on nearby islands in Hecate Strait.

There has also been an expanded tourist industry in the area.

Last fall three navy frigates paid a visit, as Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes called on an official tour of Indian villages in the area.

Residents recall that occasion as the time when Royal Canadian Mounted Police agents, wearing navy blue overcoats, gathered evidence for several prosecutions.



BOOTLEGGER'S PARADISE — For years Alert Bay, a community in the Cormorant Islands off the coast of Vancouver Island, was a bootleggers' paradise. It had no legal liquor outlet and residents often got their liquor from bootleggers who sometimes brought it in by canoe. But late last year a nine year campaign ended with the announcement a government liquor store was to be built on the island. (CP Newsmap).

United Church Official Suggests Licensing to Read Certain Books

TORONTO (CP)—Rev. W. G. Berry, of the United Church of Canada yesterday said a board should be set up to place certain books on a reserve list for use only by responsible people who successfully apply for a licence.

Mr. Berry, associate secretary of the United Church Board of Evangelism and Social Work, said this practice would protect youth and rid news-stands of "filth and trash."

He was addressing the annual meeting of the board here.

Mr. Berry called for "a wise and much-needed system of censorship," suggesting establishment of a board of men and women to which all literature and books of doubtful nature would be referred.

"They would not necessarily ban a book or picture," he said, "but might place some on a reserve list to be imported, distributed, read, viewed only by licence given to those responsible people who might apply."

He said it is not in tune with Christian ethics or democracy to believe it is the duty of the government to do what the majority of the people want, no matter what it is they want.

"It is an error to assume that because enough people ask for indecent books, a widening of gambling or liquor laws, that the government must necessarily accede to these requests," he said.

"The task of democracy is to discover leadership. When once a statesman has been elected it is his duty to lead the people, not to follow them."

Mr. Berry denounced the "pseudo-sophisticates of our time" who feel that censorship is immoral. He labelled writer Alex Comfort as one of these.

He quoted from the Listener, official organ of the BBC, in which Comfort wrote: "There is no such thing as pornography, there is only matter with a sexual cast which someone, having been disturbed by it, is attempting to suppress."

He said people like Comfort were wrong in assuming that the demand for censorship is a minority demand. He also disagreed with those who separated "hard-core pornography" which they would ban and "erotic realism" which they would allow.

Text of Mr. Berry's speech was given to the press before delivery.

Hazen Argue Wants to Seek Re-election in His Sask. Constituency of Assiniboia

OTTAWA (CP)—Hazen Argue gave the Commons another chapter of his political cliff-hanger Wednesday and promised a further instalment on his political future at an early date.

Reading from a prepared text, he informed the Commons formally of his resignation from the New Democratic Party and announced he wants to seek re-election in his Saskatchewan constituency of Assiniboia.

He spoke from a new seat sandwiched between a Conservative and a Liberal, well removed from his former CCF-NDP colleagues. He received scattered applause from the Liberal MPs he is expected to join.

The only interruption was a snorted "Ha" from Douglas Fisher (CCF — Port Arthur) when Mr. Argue said integrity required him to quit the NDP last Sunday.

Mr. Fisher, who nominated Mr. Argue for the NDP leadership at the founding convention last August, made an unsuccessful attempt to reply to his former parliamentary leader's statement. He then gave notice he will do so during today's throne speech debate.

LEANS TOWARDS LIBERALS

Since his resignation from the NDP, Mr. Argue has steered a steady course toward Liberal ranks, stopping short of actually saying he will join the Liberals.

Liberal Leader Pearson, out of town until today, has indicated Mr. Argue will be acceptable as a Liberal MP.

Mr. Argue told the Commons the hardest part of quitting the NDP was leaving his eight CCF - NDP colleagues "who have served their country and their constituencies with distinction and whose devotion to duty is an example to the whole House."

The second difficulty was that his decision was bound to hurt close friends in the CCF who had tried to build a new party "based on social justice, economic equality and with a basis of control in the constituency organization."

BLAMES UNIONS

A small labor clique, he said, controls the party. Their hold would strengthen with affiliation of more union locals. With labor predominating at conventions, debate "becomes superfluous and votes become an exercise merely to rubber - stamp previously agreed - to platform directives."

Throughout the statement, delivered in a low voice in even tones, Mrs. Argue looked down across the chamber at her husband from the opposition galleries.

Mr. Fisher's attempt to reply was ruled out by Speaker Roland Michener on the ground that a reply was not customary. Mr. Fisher said Mr. Argue made statements about the NDP which should not go without answer.

Shortly after Mr. Argue concluded, H. W. Herridge (CCF—Kootenay West), who succeeded him as parliamentary leader of the group, moved into Mr. Argue's old desk immediately to the Speaker's left.

U.S. to Probe Sun's Mysteries With Satellite

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—The United States plans next week to launch the world's first orbiting solar observatory to probe mysteries of the sun and how its rays affect the earth.

The aim is to send OSO whirling in an orbit 350 miles above the earth. At an altitude the instruments aboard will make solar studies uncluttered by the blanketing veil of the earth's atmosphere.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration reported the 440-pound satelite is the first of several such observatories scientists plan to send aloft for at least the next 11 years.

WOULD CHART CYCLES

Eruptions of flares on the sun occur in 11-year cycles. Each cycle ranges from maximum to minimum activity, then a new one starts. Scientists say we are presently about at the midpoint of one of the periods. NASA hopes to chart the rest of this cycle and at least half of the next one.

The space agency said a procession of OSO satellites could help answer such questions as how the sun controls the upper atmosphere, the origin and history of the solar system and the structure and evolution of the stars and galaxies.

The answers could lead to better explanation of how the sun determines the earth's weather, upsets radio communications and changes the composition of the radiation belts girdling our globe.

Eventually, these space observatories might be able to predict when heavy solar flare activity will occur and make it possible to schedule manned space flights around them to avoid the resulting deadly radiation.

The expected useful life of the satellite is about a year. Later OSO satellites will try to take television pictures of the sun.

DESIGNED FOR SOLAR STUDY — The U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration yesterday released this photograph of a satellite it plans to launch next week as the world's first orbiting solar observatory. The base is a wheel which spins for stabilization. Balls at ends of arms extending from base contain nitrogen gas for the spin control system. Fan-shaped device at top contains solar cells. LEGLESS DRAGON SOLD

LONDON (AP) — A collection of Japanese stamps were sold at auction Tuesday for $62,087. The collection included an unused sheet of 40 dragon imperforate stamps issued in 1871, with a leg missing from the dragon. This was sold to a London dealer for $3,780.

Labor Leader Admits Defeat In Election

VALLETTA, Malta (Reuters) Labor Party Leader Dom Mintoff Wednesday night conceded defeat in Malta's general election. He charged that the vote was "the most unfair in the history of the island" because of Roman Catholic Church intervention.

As first results were announced in the polling that ended Monday, observers familiar with Malta's complicated proportion representation system said the nationalists of former premier George Borg Olivier seemed certain to win 24 to 26 seats in the colony's 50-seat assembly.

Mintoff's party was expected to have a minimum of 16 seats.

In the last Maltese election in 1955, Montoff's group had 23 seats and the Nationalists 17 in a 40-seat assembly. Mintoff's government resigned in 1958 in a demand for more financial aid from England.

Mintoff's left-wing pronouncements since the last election alienated the Roman Catholic hierarchy here and priests this time urged their congreations to vote for any of the five parties opposing Mintoff.

SLOGANS POSTED

Many church walls carried anti - Labor posters declaring "God will curse you if you vote socialists."

Final counting will not be completed until tonight but the Democratic Nationalist Party of Herbert Ganado and Anthony Pellegrini's Christian Workers Party also were expected to garner some assembly seats.

Olivier and Mintoff both were assured of seats in the assembly.

Oliver's Nationalists campaigned for Maltese independence within the Commonwealth while Mintoff's group demanded independence outside the Commonwealth.

Decline Due To Cutback In Uranium

TORONTO (CP) — With a sharp cutback in uranium production largely to blame, Ontario's mining industry last year suffered its first decline in production since 1946, it was reported Wednesday.

Tabling a review of the Ontario department of mines for 1961, Mines Minister Wardrope said the production decline "can be more than accounted for by the loss in the market for uranium, over which it appears no one in this country has any real control."

The 123 - page, illustrated annual review estimated that the total value of mineral production in Ontario declined to $948,255,587 from the record 1960 total of $983,104,412 — a drop of $34,848,825.

Uranium production, which accounted for about one-fifth of total metallic mineral output, fell by $55,268,980—to $156,714,553 from the 1960 figure of $211,983,533 — as cutbacks and "stretch-outs" in foreign purchases of the metal began to take effect.

Nickel continued to be the giant of Ontario's mining industry. It accounted for $301,435,480 in value of production, compared with $277,924,234 the preceding year.

Provincial Legislators Can Be Troubled by Galleries

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The public galleries in provincial legislatures are seldom full these days. But when they are, chances are the government members end up wishing they were empty.

Last week, near-riot conditions prevailed in the Quebec legislature when students from Laval University staged a protest demonstration against slow delivery of their government loans. From their vantage point in the galleries they showered leaflets stating their cause on the members below.

And Wednesday night Victoria's traditional calm was shattered when 500 jobless British Columbians descended on the legislature, their shouts from the galleries three times interrupting proceedings below.

Those who couldn't find seats in the galleries stood in the corridors outside the house, for nearly 30 minutes keeping up the chants "we want jobs" and "we want Bennett." Premier W. A. C. Bennett decided against a meeting. The demonstrators finally left the building in orderly fashion after 35 minutes.

The outbursts inside the House interrupted Works Minister W. N. Chant as he was telling how government spending on hospitals, highways and ferries had produced thousands of jobs.

The Saskatchewan and Prince Edward Island legislatures open today, bringing the number of Houses in session to eight. The Nova Scotia and New Brunswick Houses both open Feb. 28.

Most of the Quebec legislature's time Wednesday was spent in committee study of the government's proposed electoral reform law.

Frank Hanley, lone independent member of the House, said the practice of the two major political parties appointing election enumerators is tantamount to a bribe. He said enumerators "should be hired by the government and not obligated to any party."

He spoke during discussion of an article that would reduce the period during which enumerators could be named by the parties. The article was suspended for later study at the suggestion of government backbencher Edgar Turpin (L—Rouyn-Noranda).

Paper Sees Major Dispute Between British, Aussies

LONDON (CP) — The Manchester Guardian says a major policy dispute between Britain and Australia will come to a head at today's Common Market ministerial meeting in Brussels.

If the Australians win their point, The Guardian says, it "would set off a chain reaction" in the rest of the Commonwealth.

The front-page story by Patrick Keatley, the Guardian's Commonwealth writer, says the Australians, as a "result of a British slipup over the tariff proposals on tinned fruit," feel that no other country can be "an effective watchdog for issues keenly affecting their interests."

The Australians, the story says, are demanding an eighth seat at the conference table and have formally requested that Edward Heath, lord privy seal who is handling Britain's negotiations, put their request to today's meeting. It adds:

"All the other Commonwealth countries are keenly awaiting the outcome of today's bargaining behind closed doors. Their representatives on the spot will be standing by for Mr. Heath's briefing afterwards. . . .

"The Australians are trying to establish 'the principle of the eighth chair.' They do not suggest that it should be continuously occupied by an Australian . . . Australia accepts that when the items for discussion are such things as lead, zinc, aluminum, newsprint and woodpulp which are also scheduled under the formula, the eighth chair should be occupied by Canada's representative."

The British feeling, the story says, "is that it is hard enough in Brussels now with seven nations in a room; more could be unwieldy or even disastrous."

"The Canadian government will be watching the Australian move with particular vigilance. It is reasonable to suppose that Mr. Menzies (the Australian prime minister) has one strategic eye fixed on the next general election, forecast to take place within the coming year, and Mr. Diefenbaker cannot ignore the obvious lesson since the Canadians, too, are expecting to go to the polls, perhaps as soon as the autumn."

Britain has admitted that it inadvertently failed to inform Australia—as part of the normal Commonwealth briefing process—that tinned fruit was being added to the list under the nil tariff formula now being discussed between Britain and the Six.

Someone Has Splendid Taste For Butterflies

OTTAWA (CP) — Someone with a splendid taste in butterflies has relieved the central experimental farm of 10,000 of its finest specimens.

Both the RCMP and city police have been called in to hunt down the thief who combed through the 4,000,000-insect collection to sneak away with the cream of the crop.

Some of the butterflies had been there since 1917, carefully pinned to cork panels in the bottom of shallow drawers. They were, of course, dead.

A monumental puzzle facing police is the exact time of the great theft. It seems no one has checked the drawers since October, 1958.

Who could have done it? Director G. P. Holland, of the entomology research division of the farm replied only, "God knows."

"It was a pretty tricky business," he said, "a real sneaky operation." He said the insects, exceedingly brittle by this time, would have to be transported in containers.

Could it be an inside job? "We have nobody here like that, thank goodness," Mr. Holland said.

The stolen butterflies are worth about $8,000.

Kirkland Lake Man Is Slain, Charge Brother

KIRKLAND LAKE (CP) — A Kirkland Lake man is dead, his wife is in hospital in critical condition and his brother has been charged with capital murder as the result of a shooting here Wednesday.

John Harasym, father of four young children, was shot to death on a snow-covered sidewalk in front of his house. His wife Fanny was shot in the chest.

Several calls from neighbors brought police Const. Jack O'Connor to the scene. He found Harasym dead, shot through the heart, on the sidewalk a few feet from the house.

Const. O'Connor said he heard a scream followed by a shot, and a man left the house and handed him a .22-calibre rifle. The officer found Mrs. Harasym crying under a verandah in front of the house.

Police said neighbors told them a man had smashed a door and broken into the house. The Harasym children range in age from a baby to 10 years.

British New Five-Year Defence Plan to Cost More Money, Cover Less Territory

By ROD CURRIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The British government's new five-year defence plan outlines a policy that will cost more money and cover less territory.

Some of the string of Commonwealth bases will be trimmed and there is a hint that Britain's contribution to NATO in West Germany, already below promised strength, may be cut.

The emphasis will be on large, highly mobile and flexible task forces at the ready to go to distant trouble spots. During the next five years the three services will move towards greater integration.

Most criticism of the policy, from the Labor Opposition and Britain's North Atlantic allies, will no doubt centre on the veiled suggestion regarding forces in West Germany.

BUDGET INCREASED

The defence budget for the fiscal year beginning in April, presented along with the defence white paper Tuesday by Defence Minister Harold Watkinson, will be £1,721,000,000—about £65,000,000 above that of the present year.

In general, the plan to rely more on mobile forces based at home or in such places as Aden, the major base east of Suez, will mean heavier total expenditures but a saving in foreign exchange.

Watkinson and all other cabinet ministers, always has an eye on Britain's unfavorable balance of payments and it is this context that he implied Britain may be forced to cut her contribution in West Germany.

Actually he promised that Britain would "continue to allot a substantial force to NATO"—But he qualified it by making it clear that the forces contributed would be based in Europe rather than at home only to the extent that adequate means for relieving the strain on the balance of payments can be negotiated.

This means that unless stationing costs are eased—either by large West Germany arms orders in Britain or by a new arrangement with NATO—Britain will cut the size of her force there.

NATO WANTS MORE

Britain now has about 55,000 men in West Germany, a number which does not satisfy United States Gen. Lauris Norstad, the NATO commander who is urging North Atlantic powers to build up their Continental strength.

It is on this point, no doubt, that the Labor opposition will base its major attack when the white paper comes up for debate early next month. Already Labor critics are calling it an "anti-NATO document."

The feeling among Labor members apparently is that the government has shown a marked coolness towards NATO and will use the balance-of-payments argument to cut its commitments.

The vision of a mobile force has been enhanced by the recent experience gained in dispatching swiftly troops to Kuwait and British Guiana. There will be no sudden cut in overseas bases but it is clear that garrisons outside key positions such as Aden and Singapore are to be slimmed down, partly because fewer soldiers are needed for police duty as former colonies become independent.

To replace these, the navy will provide mobile task forces and floating bases and the air force will be equipped with transport aircraft capable of moving large numbers of men quickly and with fighters capable of operating either from an aircraft carrier or land.

PC Candidate Wins Seat By 35 Votes

TORONTO (CP) — The Progressive Conservative party Wednesday was named official winner of a byelection in the Toronto Eglinton provincial riding.

Leonard Reilly, PC candidate in the January byelection, was declared victor after Judge A. B. Currey announced a recount had given him a majority of 35 votes, three more than in the election-night tallies.

Mr. Reilly collected 11,390 votes; Mrs. Jean Newman, Liberal, 11,355 and Eamon Martin, New Democratic Party, 2,707.

Bullets Same As Fired From Accused's Gun

WOODSTOCK (CP) — A ballistics expert testified Wednesday that a bullet taken from the brain of a slain man was fired from a rifle identified as belonging to Walter Robert Clark, on trial for capital murder.

W. W. Sutherland of the attorney - general's laboratory in Toronto was testifying at the trial of Clark, 26, a Norwich Bay tobacco worker, charged with the rifle slaying of Wilfred John Miners, 20, of Norwich, Ont.

Miners' body was found under a blood - stained blanket in a shallow ditch on the 8th Concession of West Zorra Township Aug. 26.

Mr. Sutherland said there were enough identifying marks on the bullet to make a comparison with test bullets fired from a .22 - calibre repeating rifle identified earlier as belonging to Clark.

He said another bullet taken from the dead man's hand was more heavily damaged but of the same type and he thought it probably was fired from the same weapon.

Tuesday, a 15 - year - old girl testified she was with Clark at the time of the killing and saw him fire at Miners after a night of joyriding in Clark's car.

Fanfani's New Italian Regime Moves to Left

ROME (AP)—Premier Amintore Fanfani's new Italian government—farthest to the left in 15 years — took office today opening a new era in the country's post-war politics.

Fanfani and a coalition cabinet—backed by Pietro Nenni's Socialists, once allies of the Communists—were sworn in by President Giovanni Gronchi.

Fanfani announced the 24-member cabinet Wednesday night after getting Gronchi's approval of the list of ministers. They include 19 Christian Democrats, three Democratic Socialists and two Republicans.

No seats went to Nenni's Socialists, but the new government has been assured socialist backing.

The devlopment—a deal between the Christian Democrats and the Socialists—marks the biggest turn in Italian politics since 1947. In that year, the late premier Alcide de Gasperi, a Christian Democrat, kicked the Socialists and Communists out of his government.

Many Italians, including Fanfani, feel an entirely new era for Italian democracy can be opened up by winning the Socialists over and isolating the Communists.

Beef Cattle Breeders Name Their Officers

REGINA (CP) — George Depare of Winnipeg has been elected president of the Canadian Shorthorn Association.

Other officers elected Wednesday at the annual meeting include: vice-president, R. W. Gardhouse, Milton, Ont.; directors, John Rickard, Newcastle, Ont.; Fraser McFarlane, Ailsa Craig, Ont.; Mrs. T. Beardmore, Caledon East, Ont.; and R. C. Parker, Watford, Ont.

H. R. White of Guelph, Ont., managing director of the association, said Montreal has been chosen as the site of the 1963 joint breed convention because of the rapid expansion of the beef industry in eastern Ontario and Quebec.

Many dairy farmers are turning to the beef-producing industry because of the tremendous surpluses in the dairy industry, he said.

C. E. Jones of Calgary was elected president of the Canadian Hereford Association. Mr. Guardhouse and Jim Coultes, also of Milton, were named directors.

Three Ontario men were named directors of the Canadian Aberdeen Angus Association—Tom Jackson of Cooksville, Malcolm Bailey of Uxbridge and Gordon Ribey of Underwood.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

The door of the dressing room closed quietly. Inside one of the most fabulous figures of the ring sat with his head in his hands, a thoroughly beaten fighter.

Outside, reporters and boxing experts probably mulled over the question, "Is this it. Is the closing of the dressing room door significant. Has he reached the end of the gold and glory trail?"

Only one man can answer that question, and Sugar Ray Robinson was not talking—at the moment. The gay song-and-dance man, the boulevardier and darling of the Paris nightspots, boites and bistros and so many times the middleweight champion of the world he stops to count them, failed in another comeback effort.

He had been beaten, and badly beaten by youngster Denny Moyer, 20 years his junior. Robinson, at 41, made a gallant attempt but the relentless guy with the scythe and whiskers had taken his toll. Robinson was not even a fair dress rehearsal of his former greatness.

Will Robinson joins the ranks of the penniless punchers who rode the gold and glory trail too recklessly; had too many friends and "was a sucker for a handout?" Or will he retire, if he does, in comfort? He has made two or three fortunes. But sometime ago he stated he needed the money. I understand he owns real estate, and whatnot.

One often hears of the misfortunes of once-wealthy fighters but seldom reads the yarns of the more fortunate, the smart and lucky ones such as Tunney, Dempsey, Jimmy McLarnin, Rocky Marciano, Luis Angel Firpo, Max Schmelling, Jack Sharkey and Maxie Baer.

Those who saw their fortunes trickle in a golden stream down the drain include Joe Louis, Mickey Walker, Ezzard Charles, Benny Leonard, Tony Zale, Lew Jenkins, Randy Turpin, Willie Pep, Kid Chocolate, Ike Williams and Beau Jack.

High taxes, high living, poor investments, bad advice and chiselling hangers-on are some of the reasons for the penniless or not-so-good financial conditions of some of the once great.

Ezzard Charles, who is broke, once summed it up, "The only thing about boxing was that you never felt the end of the good days would come. Mine seemed far off but it was just a few months ago."

However, one must admit that there was a great difference between the eras in which Louis and Tunney fought. Tunny battled when the income tax wasn't even a nibble. Louis lived high, but Uncle Sam tabbed him for 95 per cent in the most of the years during which he earned nearly five million.

Tunney received $990,445, the greatest purse ever paid a boxer after his second fight with Dempsey at Chicago, Sept. 22, 1927. He was able to keep most of it. Today, thanks to low taxes and good investments, Gene is a millionaire.

Louis manages all right, but he still has tax troubles. The government disallowed a lot of his deductions several years after they were filed. They snowballed past the million-dollar mark. In his heyday Joe lived like a champion. So did his friends, and hangers-on. Joe did not know the value of a dollar. There were sychophants who did.

Take Maxie Baer, the swashbuckling clown of the ring. He sold 110 per cent of his earnings to others. The betting was he would wind up broke. But a wise manager, Ancil Hoffman, took over his investments and when Maxie was through fighting he had annuities that would pay him $2,200 a month. Unfortunately he did not live to ejnoy them.

Jimmy McLarnin, the Canadian welterweight champion, had a manager, Charles "Pop" Foster, who was a father to him. He handled Jimmy's purses carefully. When he died in 1956 at 82 "Pop" left the bulk of his $200,000 estate to McLarnin.

Jimmy was a lot luckier than some of the great names he fought, Tony Canzoneri, Barney Ross and Hammering Henry Armstrong. Their fat purses went down the drain.

Hawks, Blues Cop Wins

By LAURENT CHIASSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Any hopes Toronto Maple Leafs had of catching Montreal Canadiens for the National Hockey League title just about fizzled out Wednesday night.

To make matters worse for the runner-up Leafs their once-commanding lead over the third - place Chicago Black Black Hawks dwindled to a mere three points.

The Leafs were beaten 4-2 by Canadiens while the Black Hawks closed in with a 6-4 home - ice victory over Detroit Red Wings, fashioned on a three - goal comeback in the third period.

New York Rangers also scored three goals in the final period and beat the downtrodden Boston Bruins 4-2 at New York.

The Canadiens now have 79 points, 13 more than the Leafs. With each club having 14 games to play, the Habitants need only a combination of eight wins or Toronto defeats to clinch a fifth straight championship.

Chicago, moving at a fast clip after an early season slump, has 63 points while the Rangers took over sole possession of fourth place — the last playoff berth — with 53. The Wings are two points back of the Blueshirts but have a game in hand.

BOOED BY FANS

Leafs were so ineffective that they were razzed throughout most of the game by a home crowd of 13,750.

The Canadiens scored on their first shot on goalie Johnny Bower and never trailed. Jean Beliveau, Dickie Moore, Henri Richard and Ralph Backstrom did the scoring while the Leafs goals were counted by defencemen Allan Stanley and Tim Horton.

Hull got his 36th and 37th goals of the season while Mikita bagged his 21st and 22nd. Hull also added a pair of assists and vaulted into second place, six points behind New York's Andy Bathgate, in the individual scoring race.

The Hawks led 3-2 after the first period but the Wings came back for two unanswered markers in the second.

Then Ab McDonald deadlocked the score at 4-4 at 10:46 of the third and Mikita punched home what proved to be the winning goal at 17:03.

Eric Nesterenko got the clincher in the last minute, scoring into an empty net after Wings had removed goalie Hank Bassen for a sixth attacker.

RANGERS START LATE

The Rangers, with substitute goalie Marcel Paille in the nets, were never in the lead against Boston until defenceman Harry Howell scored on a long screened shot at 16:57 of the third period.

Johnny Wilson scored two of New York's other goals, one into an empty net after Bruins had removed goalie Bruce Gamble in the final minute.

Bathgate drew an assist on Howell's goal, his 50th of the season and the most ever accumulated in one year by a right winger.

The game was marred by a stick - swinging duel between Ted Green of the Bruins and Guy Gendron of the Rangers. Both were given match misconduct penalties.

Boosters Plan 'Prize Night' For Pepsi's

Despite an earlier appeal for a big turnout at the Pepsi's Booster Club meeting held Tuesday night, only a small number of members showed up at the Council Chambers.

With club president, Jim "Never - Say - Die" Matthews chairing the meeting, it was decided to make plans for a giant "prize night" if and when the Pepsi's reach the group finals against either Kingston or Lindsay.

Matthews said that no extra charge will be made on "prize night" but the ticket stub into the rink will entitle each fan to a chance at some of the 40 or 50 prizes that the boosters hope to have.

Several other plans to help boost attendance at the Pepsi games were discussed but nothing definite was announced.

The Pepsi's open their semi-final playoffs here Friday night against the Lindsay Lumbermen and travel to Kingston for a game Monday night. The three clubs are playing in a round-robin series and the two top finishers will meet for the right to advance into OHA Intermediate "A" playdowns.

Brundage Plan Rejected?

Berlin Wall Is Barrier

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials said Wednesday the Communist wall in Berlin stands as a kind of barrier against the admission to the United States of a team of ice hockey players from Communist Germany.

State department officials indicated a suggestion by Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, for travel permission for the hockey team would be turned down. One well informed official said:

"The Brundage proposal would not solve the problem. The problem is that the current ban by the Western Allies on East German travel would in any case prevent the East Germans travelling to the West."

While Chicago reports said Brundage had been told his formula would be studied, state department officials said they do not see what further detailed examination of the situation is necessary.

Quakers Tie Terriers

SASKATOON (CP) — Bobby Brown's goal with 24 seconds remaining gave Galt Terriers a 3-3 tie with Saskatoon Quakers in an exhibition hockey game before 3,728 fans Wednesday night.

The Quakers, first - place finishers in the Saskatchewan Senior League, appeared to have victory in their grasp until Brown picked up a stray pass and scored.

The game was the sixth in the West for the Terriers, Canada's representatives for the world hockey tournament in Colorado next month. They have won two, tied one and lost three.

Joe Hogan scored Galt's other two goals and Bobby Nader assisted on all three. Sid Puddicombe tallied twice for Saskatoon with Byron McCrimmon getting the other goal.

The first period ended in a 2-2 tie and the second was scoreless. The Quakers took a 3-2 lead early in the third period. No overtime was played in the game, in which international rules were used.

RECOMMEND REGINA

HALIFAX (CP) — The Canadian school curling committee said Wednesday it will recommend to the Dominion Curling Association's annual meeting that the 1964 Canadian schoolboy curling championships be held in Regina. Next year's championships will be held in Guelph.

Kingston Drops Three In Row

Kingston Frontenacs are still in first place in the Eastern Professional League, but won't be for long if they don't perk up.

The Frontenacs Wednesday night lost their third consecutive game, a 3-2 squeaker to Hull-Ottawa Canadiens. Kitchener-Waterloo Beavers were idle Wednesday night and Kingston kept ahead of them by one point.

The width of a crossbar made the difference between a tie and defeat. The Frontenacs turned on the heat in the third period in an attempt to square things up, but the closest they came was on a shot by rookie Nels Leclair which hit the crossbar and deflected over the net.

The third - place Canadians put on a magnificent defensive display to hold off the Frontenacs.

The Hull - Ottawa defensive crew also provided two - thirds of the scoring punch with goals by playing - coach Bob Armstrong and Gary Roberts. Billy Carter scored the other one. Playing - coach Orval Tessier and Jerry Ouellette were the Kingston marksmen.

The 20-year - old whiz on blades has been cutting a fancy figure in world circles since 1957 and this time his admirers in North America believe he can go all the way to the top. The world championships are scheduled for Prague March 14-17.

There's one obstacle—the Canadian senior men's title—in his way but he's sure to take it for the fourth straight year when the 51st Canadian championships close here Saturday night.

The three - day tournament opens today with all sorts of titles to be decided in men's and women's senior and junior brackets, senior and junior pairs and dance championships. Sticking out above all entries is the five - foot - eight figure of Jackson, a native of Oshawa and considered one of the best free skaters in the world.

Six years after his faltering steps on skates he won the Canadian men's junior championship. That was in 1955 and the 130-pounder has been dazzling the opposition with neat footwork since.

SECOND IN 1961

He placed third in the 1960 Winter Olympics at Squaw Valley, Calif., and followed with a second in the world tournament at Vancouver.

Seventeen skaters will be chosen Saturday night for the world championships, Nigel Stephens of Toornto, president of the Canadian Figure Skating Association, said Wednesday. The CFSA has decided to send three pairs, three dance twosomes, three men and two women.

Other "cinches" besides Jackson are the North American pairs champions — the brother-sister combination of Maria and Otto Jelinek of Oakville, Ont.; Virginia Thompson from St. Catharines and bill McLachlan of Toronto, Canadian and North American dance pairs title-holders, and 16-year-old Wendy Griner of Toronto, Canadian women's champion the last two years and runner-up in the 1961 North American at Philadelphia.

All will defend their Canadian titles this week.

The first two days will be taken up mostly with compulsory figures, which count 60 per cent in the judging. The free skating, final phase of the competition, are scheduled for Saturday night.

FORCE REPLAY

MADRID (Reuters) — Juventus of Italy defeated Real Madrid 1-0 Wednesday night to force the Spaniards into a quarter-final soccer replay in the European Cup. Real Madrid won the first game of the two-match set 1-0. The clubs will meet in Paris Wednesday for the playoff.

The Big Seven

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bobby Hull of Chicago Black Hawks scored two goals — his 36th and 37th of the season—and also drew two assists Wednesday night to take over second place in the National Hockey League scoring race. Hull has 67 points, six fewer than Andy Bathgate of New York Rangers.

Bathgate drew an assist as the Rangers beat Boston Bruins 4-2. It was his 50th of the season, tops in the league and most ever accumulated by an NHL right winger. He broke the record of 49 set by Gordie Howe of Detroit Red Wings last season.

The scoring leaders:

Students Must Be Good Boys

OTTAWA (CP)—The University of Ottawa has issued a compulsory behavior code for players, coaches and student spectators in intercollegiate sports. In effect, it calls for perfect behavior off and on the field.

The code follows a study by the university's athletic board of reported misconduct by U. of O. Gee-Gees football team players during a game last November with Guelph Agricultural College Aggies. But a university statement said the code had actually been in the drafting stage prior to that.

Under the code, students must extend "warm hospitality" to visiting teams; they must accept the decision of referees and extend "the same type of courteous and considerate treatment that you expect your team to receive on out-of-town trips."

Coaches must teach players not to win at any cost, to be fair, courteous and polite to opponents, and remove from the team anyone who shows unsportsmanlike behavior. They are told to meet the coaches of visiting teams before games.

Ontario Curling

Toronto, Unionville Are Unbeaten

OWEN SOUND (CP)—The co-favorites in the Ontario curling championships, Bayne Secord's Toronto Tam O'Shanter Rink and Murray Roberts's Unionville quartet, emerged undefeated from Wednesday's first two rounds of play.

Secord disposed of Ottawa's Bob Knippelberg 14-6 in the first round and Huntsville's Evan Jenkins 13-9 in the second. Roberts downed Brantford's Don Varey 15-8 and Dixie's Joe Gurowka 7-6.

Dixie, Welland, Ottawa and Thornbury are tied for third place, each with a win and a loss, while Brantford and Huntsville are winless in two starts.

Unionville started slowly against Varey and trailed 2-0 after the second end. Roberts guided his rink to a five end on the third, however, and never looked back.

Welland, after losing 10-6 to Dixie in the first game, started off with a bang in the second, counting four on Brantford in the first end and winning 14-5 as Brantford was unable to count more than one on any end.

Thornbury, skipped by Don Fawcett, came from behind in the first round to earn an 11-10 13-end victory over Huntsville but lost 12-7 to Ottawa in the second.

Schoolboy Curling

Sasky Tops the Field

By KEITH KINCAID

HALIFAX (CP)—British Columbia and Manitoba, back in contention for the Canadian schoolboy curling championship, were set to meet today in a match which could determine who, if anybody, is going to catch the high-flying Saskatchewan.

If Manitoba beats the defending champions in seventh-round play, the stage will be set for tonight's ninth-round battle between Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

Heading into today's three rounds, Mike Lukowitch's rink from Speers, Sask., was unbeaten in five games. British Columbia was 5-1, its only loss being to Saskatchewan in the opening round. Jim Willox's Manitoba rink, which made an inauspicious statr by losing to Ontario, has won four straight since then and is improving every time out. The tournament is an 11-round, round-robin event, with a rink drawing a bye in each round.

Other seventh-round games sent Ontario against Alberta, Nova Scotia against Prince Edward Island, Quebec against Northern Ontario and Saskatchewan against Newfoundland. New Brunswick drew the bye.

NB LOSES TWICE

In Wednesday's games New Brunswick, which slowed flashes of championship calibre in the first four rounds, dropped out of the running with two losses, a 5-4 squeaker to Saskatchewan and an 11-4 drubbing by Alberta.

Other fifth- and sixth-round scores saw Prince Edward Island beat Ontario 8-7 and Newfoundland 8-4. Quebec, an early contender, dropped slightly back when it lost 7-6 to Manitoba in the sixth round.

Saskatchewan also had a close call with Ontario in the sixth round, winning 5-4 but needing dead ends in the last two to maintain the slender lead. British Columbia picked up a 9-8 victory over Nova Scotia.

In the fifth round British Columbia beat Newfoundland 10-7, Quebec defeated Nova Scotia 11-8, with Nova Scotia forcing an extra end for the second time in two days, and Manitoba beat Northern Ontario 8-5. Alberta received the bye in the fifth round and Northern Ontario got it in the sixth.

After six rounds New Brunswick had three wins and three losses, Nova Scotia, Northern Ontario, Alberta and Prince Edward Island two wins and three losses each, Ontario a win and five losses and Newfoundland no wins and six losses.

Blues Roll Over Aggies

TORONTO (CP) — University of Toronto Blues Wednesday night steam-rollered Ontario Agricultural College Redmen 93-35 in a senior intercollegiate basketball game.

Every player on the Blues squad scored and five of them hit the double-figure mark.

John O'Neill scored 20 points and was supported by Noland Kane with 15, Paul Dignan and Dave Ouchterlony with 14 and Jerry McElroy with a dozen.

Defeat P.E. High, Juniors Lose

BCI Seniors Eye Title

By PETER CARVER

Belleville Collegiate Seniors finished the Bay of Quinte C.O.S.S.A. schedule here last night by polishing off a sub-par Picton team 56-40. The win was the Collegian's ninth against one loss.

The Quinte Seniors, if they defeat Moira in their final game, and the Collegians will finish the campaign in a first-place deadlock.

Both teams will travel to the C.O.S.S.A. playdowns but will have to play a sudden-death game, probably next week at Moira, to decide the Bay of Quinte championship.

The BCI Juniors lost a second-place finish by virtue of a 32-30 defeat. Their final record was an even five and five.

The local Bantams handed their country cousins a 45-29 shellacking in the first game.

SENIOR GAME

Belleville's tight defensive effort completely boxed in Picton, who helped the winners by travelling frequently. The Collegians rebounders were at their best; and their back-court control enabled them to hit for 11 points to Picton's 5.

BCI continued to control the play in the second quarter. They checked hard, not letting up for a moment. The winners controlled both backboards converting many a rebound into two points. Picton helped them by failing to hit on the close-in plays.

Both teams played a listless type of ball, moving the ball up and down the court with a monotonous regularity. BCI held an edge in the rebound department but could score only one less than Prince Edward's 10.

They picked up in the final period, however. The pace was quickened with both teams fighting hard for the ball and hitting on their long shots.

The Collegians were hot under their opponent's basketss, but the Prince Edward boys were not to be denied as they clicked with persistence on the jump shots.

BCI scored 18 to Picton's 12 in the frantic last quarter.

"Soup" Campbell played an outstanding game for the winners, rebounding well and setting-up many scoring plays. He scored 22 points; McCabe hit for 13 and Burr 11.

Rick Lee the big gun for Picton was held to a 13 point effort. McNaughton was high man with 14.

Bulldogs Scalp Indians

WINDSOR (CP) — Windsor Bulldogs whipped Stratford Indians 6-2 Wednesday in the first game of the best-of-nine Ontario Hockey Association Senior semi-final.

The speedy Indians gave it a good try for some 43 minutes to hold a 2-2 tie but then Windsor pulled away with four straight goals before a slim crowd of 824 fans.

The second game of the series will be in Stratford Friday with the third in Windsor Sunday.

Veteran Gord Haidy sparked the Bulldogs, setting up the winning goal then rapping in the next two to clinch it.

John Palestine, with the winner, and Tom Walker also scored for Windsor. Butch Graham and Gary Luyben scored for Stratford.

It will be the first time for many Rangers' fans to have a look at the farm club which has produced many of the players who made good in Rangers ranks.

The West German team will be stopping over in New York on its way to the world hockey championship tournament in Colorado Springs, Colo., next month.

Bonus Baby Has 3 Wishes

Wanted; Aladdin Lamp

TUCSON, Ariz. (CP) — Sam McDowell, possibly the most talked about teen-ager in the major baseball leagues, has three ambitions:

Already 6 feet 6½ inches—he wants to grow another inch.

He wants to pitch faster than Bob Feller and to crack some of Feller's records.

McDowell, 19, a left-handed pitcher whose fastball has been compared favorably with Feller's says: "If I can grow another inch, it will look like a foot to the batter who sees me come off the mound and send my fastball on the way to the plate. Besides, it will make me faster."

It was partly because of Feller that McDowell turned down a larger cash bonus with Milwaukee plus offers of 14 other major league teams to sign with Cleveland.

Farm director Hoot Evers said "There's one kid I'll never worry about. If he doesn't get hurt, he's going to make this team big. I've spent a lot of sleepless nights worrying over some of our kids we gave bonuses to, but not over McDowell."

This Golfer Kept Ball On Eye

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)—The Supreme Court of Georgia has ruled a negligent golfer is liable for injuries he causes to others.

The decision Wednesday allowed golfer J. K. Thomas of Albany, Ga., to bring a $25,000 negligence suit against golfer R. W. Shaw.

Thomas said Shaw was negligent in not shouting "Fore," the traditional golfers' warning.

Also Thomas claimed, Shaw was so inexpert a golfer "that he was and is not able to control the direction his golf ball travels after being driven by him, it not being unusual for him to either slice or hook the ball."

PRAISES CANUCK REDS

BERLIN (Reuters) — East German Communist Leader Walter Ulbricht told the Canadian Communist Party that its efforts occupied a "place of honor in the international workers movement," the East German news agency ADN reported Wednesday. The praise was in a telegram marking the 40th anniversary of the Canadian Communist Party.

British TV Viewers Given Study of Life and Opinion In Canada With the States

By ROD CURRIE

LONDON (CP)—British viewers saw an hour-long television study of life and opinion in Canada, with emphasis on her relations with the United States.

Living With a Giant, produced by Associated Rediffusion, one of Britain's independent commercial companies, and narrated by Lord Boothby, concentrated on Guelph, Ont., and St. Hyacinthe, Que.

Lord Boothby described Canada as a "rugged land of potential, romance, hope and doubt." The Queen, he said, "no longer is a symbol of dependence on Britain but a sign of independence from the United States."

Much of the program was devoted to drawing picture parallels between Canadians and Americans – "they wear the same clothes, have the same haircuts, same food, same type of homes, read the same books and magazines, see the same TV shows and earn the same money, except for a few cents and the fact the Queen's head is on the Canadian dollar."

Although Guelph's insistence on stone facings on its main-street buildings sets it apart from the usual "drabness of North American cities," still the "garishness of American hard selling swamps its individualism."

HAVE TIGHT LINKS

The program mentioned the imbalance of trade and the fact U.S. bankers and investors earn $500,000,000 a year in Canada.

The official U.S. word for this, Lord Boothby said, is "partnership," and indeed the U.S. and Canada are tightly linked economically, through defences such as the DEW line and such joined projects as the St. Lawrence Seaway and Niagara hydro power.

Why then, he asked, do not the two countries become one?

For the answer, the cameras went to the people of Guelph and St. Hyacinthe.

Much of the program was taken up with bar-room argument and teen-age logic as dispensed over the magazine stand at the local drug store, following which Lord Boothby commented:

"If all that seemed wild and confused, so is most Canadian opinion on the subject."

'RESENT OUTSIDERS'

During the camera study of St. Hyacinthe, the commentator said the people were "obstinately French-Canadian, resentful of all the outside world . . . even the French whom they remember as letting them down to the British 10 generations ago."

Although the French-Canadians would "certainly fight against joining the United States," their basic resentment is against their English-speaking countrymen, the commentator said.

Summing up, Lord Boothby said that despite life in the shadow of the giant, "yet there is a Canadian spirit."

Soon, he said, "we shall all have to learn to live with giants" — Britain with the European giant, Europe with the Afro-Asian giant.

"Canada has had 100 years experience and if she can continue she may be a living lesson to us all — a lesson in living with a giant."

AT THE PARK — Saracen pirates in the midst of battle after their descent upon the city of Monteforte in "Pirate of the Blackhawk", in color, starring beautiful Mijanou Bardot opening tonight at the Park Theatre. Julia Meade Will Leave Sullivan Show Next Sunday

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Woman's lot in television this last season has been such a dreary one that actress Inger Stevens is excited about a chance to play a nice girl in Sunday night's CBS special, an adaptation of Maxwell Anderson's good-tempered comedy Saturday's Children.

"This season I've played nothing but accents," says Miss Stevens. "Ive played Germans, Swedes, Romanians and Mexicans. I think it's nice to play an American girl. I've played spies, fallen women, sick women and murderesses. I think it will be wonderful to play a good girl in a comedy."

After nine years of commercials on the Ed Sullivan Show, Julia Meade will leave the CBS program after next Sunday's show. Miss Meade, for several seasons, has been trying to combine an acting career in films and on the stage with her Sunday sales pitches. In recent months this has involved tiring weekly commuting between Hollywood and New York.

Apparently, the pressures became too great and art has won. Ed will have to find another "chum," as he is wont to call her, to present the sponsors' messages.

All television networks will continue their intensive coverage of the man-in-orbit story, from Lt.-Col. John H. Glenn Jr.'s meeting with President Kennedy to his press conference later on.

The often-postponed flight took much bigger bites out of network news budgets than anticipated — educated guesses place the three-network tab at close to $3,000,000.

DESERONTO

Town to Vote On Question of Cocktail Bars

DESERONTO—As a result of a by-law passed at the council meeting on Monday night Deseronto is to have a vote on the question of cocktail lounges in the town. The Council held a special meeting on February 10th and decided to have the vote if the persons interested would deposit with the clerk a certified cheque to cover the cost of the vote. As the cheque has been deposited with the clerk the council passed the necessary by-law and will ask the liquor Control Board for the necessary action.

Another important motion was passed at the request of Reeve Lott. He advised that the necessary approaches to Highway 401 would soon be considered and he requested council to ask the Tyendinaga Township council to change the name of the Boundary Road to the Deseronto Road. This will give Deseronto an approach road, that will signify also the town. He assured council that the township council would accede in the request.

A letter from W. M. Smith was read early in the meeting as interested parties were present. Mr. Smith spoke for three property owners at the west end of Main St. concerning the plowing of the right-of-way to three homes. He stressed that no garbage could be collected, no fire protection given and trouble was being experienced in obtaining fuel oil. Council advised that on the advice of their solicitor they had no obligation to plow the snow on access roads. Mr. McAllister spoke to the council also on the subject.

A letter from I. Thompson of Napanee applying for the position of dog-catcher was filed for future reference.

A letter from the firemen asking that the town decorate Main Street for the parade scheduled for June 30th was referred to the Publicity Committee.

The mayor advised the council that they were invited to attend a meeting of the Board of Education with the High School Inspector to be held at the Public School on Tuesday night. Several members of the council signified they would attend.

Mayor Sweetnam occupied the chair and only five members of the council were present.

Scouting activities

By CHRIS. F. LEGGAT

ST. MARGARET'S

The 9th Belleville Cubs, Scouts and Rovers held a most successful "Parents Night" on Tuesday February 20th, at St. Margaret's hall.

Group committee chairman Douglas Fort, assisted by the Mothers' Auxiliary president, Mrs. J. G. Holmes, inspected the boys and expressed gratification on the smart turnout.

The Cubs and Scouts were divided into patrols and games were enjoyed by the boys and parents. Relay races provided great excitement, giving the boys a good workout and putting them in good form for the next item on the program. Scoutmaster Phil Stewart took over, leading in a rousing singing session, heartily joined in by parents and boys. An outdoor effect was created by the Scouts and Cubs forming a circle around a "campfire" which gave out a warm friendly glow to all around.

Akela Lee Tripp in a brief address stated that the Pack was at full strength of 36 Cubs and ten boys on the waiting list. He asked the fathers to attend one or two Cub meetings to assist Baghera Merrill Gordon and himself with badge work.

BOY SCOUT WEEK

S.M. Phil Stewart informed the company that the Scouts had enjoyed 90 Scout days at camp during the summer. One of the projects was volunteer help at the International Plowing Match. Phil also appealed to the fathers to help out next summer by taking small groups of Scoutr camping.

Rover Skipper Alf Murray told of the Rovers visiting Sault Ste. Marie They won several ribbons and were successful in placing second in the contests.

Chairman Doug Fort outlined the many and varied duties and responsibilities of the group committee.

CHURCH PARADE

Mr. Fort invites Cubs, Scouts Rovers, Brownies and Guides of East Belleville to a special Scout Week service which will be held at St. Margaret's Church on Sunday, February 25th, at 3.00 p.m. A warm and cordial welcome awaits you.

Mrs. J. G. Holmes described the work of the Auxiliary and invited all the mothers to the next meeting.

To help liven the meeting up Merrill Gordon started another sing fest. An old-fashioned round elay of "Little Tommy Tucker" emphasized the mighty lungs of the boys.

Proficiency badges were awarded to deserving Cubs by Akela Lee Tripp, who explained the requirements for the new pet badge.

The tasty lunch served by the Rovers provided a very welcome and entirely suitable ending to a wonderful social evening.

We have nostalgic memories of many pleasant evenings spent with the 9th when Jim Ritchie was in charge. An enviable reputation is enjoyed by this group, the most memorable was the presentation by H.E. the Governor-General of a Silver Cross to Cub Tommy Seymore of the 9th for saving two people from drowning.

Our thanks to Mr. Charles Cooke for this article. Charlie also told us that so many parents attended this affair that the coat rack collapsed. This, as in the "Pinafore," was blamed on the cat, but we have it on authority that Charlie himself did the deed and of course it happened when everything was very quiet. As in Heyden's "Surprise Symphony," it did wake things up.

'Actor' Jersey Joe Walcott Has Spot in 'Cain's Hundred'

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—He was a figure of quiet dignity as he sat alone in the MGM commissary.

Jersey Joe Walcott, his broad face only slightly damaged from his 21 years in the prize ring, welcomed the visitor and told what he was doing in these strange surroundings. He had come from Camden, N.J., to play a role in the TV show, Cain's Hundred.

"My second acting job," he reported. "The first was in The Harder they Fall with Humphrey Bogart. I got a lot of criticism from the fight game for being in that one. It was a pretty exaggerated picture of boxing."

"I'm working with the Camden police department in a kind of crime prevention program," he said. "I go around to the schools and give talks, I organize clubs and teams, and I look into the cases of kids who get in trouble.

"Often I will go to the judge and ask that the kid be released to my custody. Sometimes they get in trouble again, but usually they turn out okay."

The short-term champion—he won the heavyweight crown from Ezzard Charles in 1951, lost it in 1952 to Rocky Marciano — had no regrets about changing careers.

"I quit boxing when I realized I didn't have it any more," said he. "I've got six grandchildren and I want to enjoy thtm.

"It was in the last two or three years that I made any big money," he said. "I figure I earned about a $1,000,000 in all."

Unlike previous champions, he managed to keep some of it. He has it invested in hotels and car wash businesses and could live on the income if he wanted to. But he'd rather work. Besides his police work, he referees two or three boxing and wrestling matches a month.

Sunday Bowling Brings Fines At Hamilton

HAMILTON, Ont. (CP)—Two men charged with breach of the Lord's Day Act in operating a bowling alley on a Sunday night, yesterday were found guilty by Magistrate Robert Morrison.

Fred Rosetanni, 27, and Walter Robertson, 34, were each fined $25 and costs.

Sydney Palkin, defence counsel, said he will appeal to the Supreme Court of Ontario.

Morality officers last week testified that 84 persons were bowling at the Centre Bowling Lanes at 9:40 p.m. Sunday Jan. 14.

Mr. Palkin contended that his clients were probably in breach of the city bylaw—setting a closing time of 6 p.m. on Sundays—but that this lacked an offence-making section; no provision for a bylaw breach had been included when it was drafted.

He said in any case they were not in breach of the Lord's Day Act which was the charge against them.

"I don't know what you're so proud of—you out-weighed him by 200 pounds!"

Astrological Forecast

For February 23

By SYDNEY OMARR

Aries (Mar 21 to Apr. 19): You feel the pressure of responsibility — but, without it you would not be happy. To questions about favor, extra effort . . . say yes. If you said no . . . you'd be miserable!

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): You could put on a display of obstinacy today that causes embarrassment to you and to those close to you. Instead, explain position. Take courageous stand . . . but be reasonable!

Gemini (May 21 to June 21): Day for expressing energy through constructive outlet. If you hold back, restrict yourself . . . or seek "easy way" . . . you lose out. Take new step—be positive in action. Express confidence.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21): Tremendous surge of sympathy for underdog could see you becoming involved in someone else's problem. Just be sure you are not "taken in." Best to exercise caution — curb excess sympathy.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21): You could tire yourself out by trying to accomplish too much at one sitting. Concentrate, get thoughts in order. Tendency to irritate others — if you grab off spotlight. Be calm, diplomatic.

Virgo (Aug 22 to Sept. 22): May be difficult to put finger on exact source of success . . . or failure. Thus, stick "in between." Don't get involved in disputes, quarrels. Take care to relax, especially while dining.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Could be invigorating start of weekend. Share . . . know that love, romance, affection is necessary to a Libran. You could be the sparkling light at social affair . . . but don't forget partner.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) —Great drive for security wells up within . . . give it expression by belief in self. Look for no miracles . . . you gain what you personally accomplish. First step in peace, satisfaction within.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) — Like Scorpio, desire is for assurance that others care . . . that there is future in your present course of action. Avoid persons who make inflammatory statements. Seek moderation . . . and sanity.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) May be power day for you. Those in authority can be made to "see the light". Push forward, present arguments, ideas. Do so in spirit of fairness, cooperation, and faith in self.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) —Lunar aspect to your sign favorable . . . points to valuable ideas being offered by loved one. Don't "pooh-pooh" suggestions just because, at first they appear illogical. Think things through.

Pisces (Feb 20 to Mar. 20) — Added vitality promised by aspects to your sign. Emotional security can be achieved by knowing which goals can be realized, and which are merely symbols of wishful thinking.

If today is your birthday . . . you can benefit by turning so-called "dreams" into exciting work such as advertising, promotion, writing, travel agency, etc. Month of October could be outstanding.

General Tendencies: Those who can offer convincing proof that they have product to protect and enhance security of individual . . . find way into spotlight. All signs remember: Greatest satisfaction must come from within.

Y Basketball

The Stealers and the Celtics defeated the Satellites and the Globetrotters respectively during the final games of the round-robin semi-finals for the championship of the YMCA Youth Basketball House League Tuesday evening. The two teams will meet to decide the league championship next Tuesday evening at the "Y" gym.

The Stealers entered the final game in their round-robin semi-final with a 12-point advantage over the Satellites. Russ Lukien put forth a tremendous scoring effort for 39 points which, together with teammate John McKibbon's 26-point run, accounted for the team's 65 points against the losers' 56 points. Dave Hurst of the Satellites managed to run up a string of 30 points to lead his team's scoring effort but it was not enough to win the game or the round. The Stealers won the round by a 135-114 score.

In the Celtics - Globetrotters tilt, Rick Donovan of the 'Trotters was high scorer for the game with 27 points with Terry McCabe of the Celtics close behind with a 26-point effort. It was the efforts of the low scorers which determined the game, and the series outcome, however. The Celtics amassed 51 points to the 'Trotters' 48 markers and took the series 116-105.

Successful Living

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

Aged Mother Bars Doors

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—An old man and his daughter (of fifty) live like recluses in the old family home. Their only income is about $120 a month, from pensions.

The father keeps the doors barred so nobody can get in, but I am told the place is filthy inside. He is not well but cannot pay for medical attention and therefore will not have it.

This man has a fear that mental health doctors have a name for. If anyone comes into his yard unannounced, he has been known to use violence. When his three other daughters got in and offered to clean the place up, he told them to "get out and never come back."

Should the daughter have to sacrifice a normal life just to keep house for him? Of course she knows no other life and in spite of her age she is like a young girl in outlook—A FRIEND.

DEAR FRIEND:—This man is beyond the help of a social worker. One of these days he might pull a shotgun on some unsuspecting trespasser. Then what happens to daughter?

I would strongly urge enlisting the services of the provincial police or the RCMP; and of the medical authorities. Father may have to be removed forcibly to an institution.

Re help with medical expenses, most provinces provide this when indicated; but would Papa put up with this?

* * *

(There is help for any human problem. Talk yours over with Doris in a letter to this newspaper.)

Gangs 'On the Main' Have Been Smashed, Night Club Business Ruined by Police

By GERRY McNEIL

MONREAL (CP) — Practically everything about The Main now must be said in the past tense.

The Poirier gang has been smashed and Donat Hunter, leader of another power group, is behind bars.

Few of the prostitutes and pimps who overran the four-block strip between St. Catharine and Craig streets remain, and police pressure has left them inactive.

Ownership of at least two of the 18 nightclubs has changed hands and other owners are open to offers.

With the prostitutes gone and the dancing girls limited to coy undulations in gaudy nighties and spangled bikinis, the attraction of The Main for crooks and sports is also going.

"I don't think I'll ever see another naked dancer on that stage," said Louis Fournier, manager of the Aloha Lounge, recalling the night when five of the girls threw nighties and bikinis to the winds.

PROSTITUTES GONE

Downstairs, in the French Casino, an old hand recalled that there were 15 regular prostitutes last year.

"There aren't any now," he said, surveying the thin male gathering. "You need the women to get the men away from the taverns."

At the Cafe St. John, 20-year manager Arno, who keeps his full name to himself, also was nostalgic.

"Every time there are no loose women in the clubs, business slows down. Look at this place, it's getting more and more like a tavern."

Owner Teddy Theodore, 28, took over when he was 18, explained that the club operated a show on "toleration"—without a permit—for years. After a government crackdown ended that, the club applied for a permit to sell liquor legally. It's waiting, hopefully.

TWIST HELPS

The Main Cafe, owned by 75-year-old millionaire Jack Horn, features a grey-haired lady at the piano, a young man on drums and a big woman in pink tights who sometimes sings Around the World in 80 Days. Business isn't booming.

The Grand Nationale, busiest club on The Main, has, along with several others, cashed in on the twist craze, bringing in an ear-splitting band and slapping up a new sign, Peppermint Lounge, in imitation of the publicized New York birthplace of the dance.

Members of such prominent families as the Bronfmans, the Leopolds and the Simards have all been in, says owner Solly Silver, 45.

"Why should people go to London or Paris when Montreal could be—not little—but big—Paris."

Solly trailed off while, a weeping American college girl, here on a fun weekend, reported the loss of a purse containing $300 The Grand Nationale's well-heeled clientele has attracted another crowd — "clippers" they're called on The Main.

FEW FLOATERS

At the Rodeo and Canasta Cafes, where wild gun-battles between rival gangs took place in the last year, and Pal's, scene of an unsolved murder two years ago, established clientele keep things going but new faces are becoming fewer.

"They stick their heads in the door, see that no women are around and don't even bother coming in," said one manager.

Other businesses along The Main have felt the pinch. Theatre manager Alfred Gagnon says the floating population on Sundays has dropped to 2,000 from 7,000.

This means less business for the 50-cent flophouses, the gypsy fortune-tellers and the hash houses that still sell 10-cent hot dogs. The second-hand shops have resorted to sales to attract customers.

"I don't think anybody is going to clean out The Main. Main street is Main street and every big city has a Main."

TOMORROW: The campaign against police bribery.

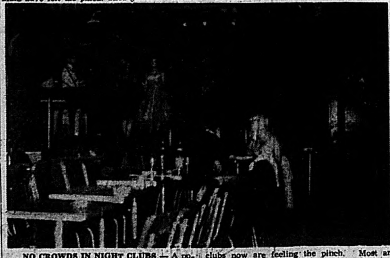
TWIST BOOSTS BUSINESS — Most night clubs along the Main are in a business slump since a police campaign was started to rid the area of prostitutes and hoodlums. A few, such as the Main Cafe owned by millionaire Jack Horn, are capitalizing on the twist dance craze, drawing the curious and courageous into the clubs. This Montrealer looks over a billboard advertising twist dancing in the basement of the cafe. (CP Photo).



NO CROWDS IN NIGHT CLUBS — A police crackdown on The Main, once the centre of crime activities in Montreal, has hurt night clubs in the area. Once jam-packed, the clubs now are feeling the pinch. Most are like this club on The Main—rows of empty tables with just a few customers. (CP Photo).

Scout week from February 18-25 is intended to focus attention on boys engaged in Cubs, Scouts and Rovers. These are normal boys, your sons and mine. What is there about these activities that interest these boys to the degree that neither rain nor snow, heat nor cold, will deter them in participation? A brief resume of some of these activities during the past year might help us to understand their reasons.

Both the camporee, with over 225 boys attending, and the cuboree with 625 boys participating, were huge successes and earned some well deserved badges by the boys and thanks for the organizers. The 3rd Canadian jamboree held at Connaught Ranges in Ottawa was another popular event both from the standpoint of those who visited and those who participated (including a group from the Ontario School for the Deaf.) Mrs. Ashley, A.D.C. training, Belleville, was one of the staff

FOUR NEW GROUPS

Four new groups saw their inception during 1961: 20th — Front Road United; 7th — Salvation Army; 19th — St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church; 21st — Belleville and District School for Retarded Children, with other groups under consideration.

Camp Saganaska at Thomasburg is one of the finest and safest campsites for Cubs and Scouts within driving distance of Belleville and also one of the most popular. With its own swimming area, 30 to 90 acres of cedar and hardwood bush and good deep well drinking water (regularly tested) which is used almost all the year round. On 19 occasions during the past year it was used by some 225 Cubs and Scouts with some 50 leaders. Two fine chapel areas allowing both Protestant and Roman Catholic boys to worship simultaneously in natural surroundings add to its usefulness. Winter camping and hiking are also enjoyed and just before Christmas two O.S.D. Scouts completed their first class journey.

Mr. L. Andrews, who is in charge of swimming and life saving instruction and testing, makes the boast that "a Belleville District Cub or Scout who wears a swimming badge is a swimmer"; also if he wears a life saving badge he can perform this function too.

During 1960-61 there were 30 classes consisting of 1,206 boys and 45 Scouts passed for their swimmers badges and five received rescuers badges.

EARN BADGES

Along the line of badge work it is the intent of the District Council that badges shall be earned. This result in fewer badges but they mean something. Over 360 badges were earned during the past year with firemen (64); swimmers (45); ambulance men (24); angler (16); marksmen (20); musician (12); venturer (15); entertainer (16); artist (19) being the most popular. Some 50 different phases of cubbing and scouting were covered by this activity.

Other items such as apple day, the plowing match, distribution of United Appeal literature, hobby shows, hiking, and numerous good deeds (including snow shovelling) will have to be mentioned in passing to conserve space, but none the less commendable.

What of the 145 leaders who are behind all this activity? They have certainly not been idle. Beside their actual evening activities they attended—a leaders training camp at Saganaska; an akela course (one and a half days) with 23 attending; a basic "A" scouters course (one and a half days) with 13 attending and numerous district council meetings.

Two other groups must not be overlooked — the Ladies Auxiliaries and the parents who drove cars. Somehow or other when the need arises they come up with the effort necessary to make the "Do" a complete success. Perhaps we who are the beneficiaries of all this effort might feel this is an opportune time to show a little appreciation we feel. B. P. Sunday, February 25th, might be an opportune time to do this.

He said the value of the order represents 10 per cent of Canada's total exports to Iran in 1960.

Memorial Hospital Aux. Gives Report

CAMPBELLFORD—The monthly meeting of Campbellford Memorial Hospital Auxiliary was held on Friday evening in the hospital board room. There were 28 members present and vice-president Mrs. Jesse Locke presided.

Mrs. Earl Craighead reported that she and Mrs. W. F. Scott visited the Women's Institute meetings in Morganston and Warkworth during the past week and had great success in the request to the members to sew for the Auxiliary. They have been invited to attend the meetings of Havelock and Belmont W.I. in March.

Mrs. D. Bungess requested as much publicity and support for the Blood Donor Clinic to be held on March 5th as the Auxiliary could give.

Miss V. Eldt read the hospital report for the month of January as follows Admissions - adult and children, 139; discharges and deaths, 139; deliveries, 17; operations, minor - 41; major, 15; x-rays, 261; lab tests, 655; B.M.R.'s, 8; E.C.G.'s, 41; blood transfusions, 13; meals, 5,304.

Mrs. L. Fox, who represents the Auxiliary on the Hospital Board, addressed the meeting and explained how much the Board appreciates the work of the Auxiliary. Last year, a list of items totalling $11,634.78 was provided by the Board to the Hospital and the Auxiliary provided these things. Mrs. Fox was asked to continue to represent the Auxiliary on the Board for the coming year.

Mrs. D. Maybee told the meeting that only $58 had been realized to date from the card tournaments and urged the members to entertain.

After the meeting closed lunch was served by Mrs. K. Hazell's group.

Urges Engineering Organizations Unite

SASKATOON (CP) — B. G. Ballard of Ottawa, president of the Engineering Institute of Canada, Tuesday advocated amalgamation on a national scale of his group and the Canadian Council of Professional Engineers.

Speaking at a dinner for the Saskatoon EIC section, Dr. Ballard said the merger would eliminate competition between provincial and federal bodies.

He suggested the new name be the Canadian Institute of Professional Engineers.

The institute is a learned society that promotes knowledge through its journal, papers and group discussions. The council, a registrative body on a federal scale, has branches in each province.

KENNEDY AND ASTRONAUT TOUR BASE

Nikita Sends Out Tough Note To President

Insists Kennedy Agree To March Summit Meet

WASHINGTON (AP) — A tough new 20-page message from Soviet Premier Khrushchev, insisting that President Kennedy agree to a March summit meeting, chilled U.S. hopes today for any kind of successful negotiations with Russia at the forthcoming Geneva conference.

The letter, delivered to the state department Thursday, also raised grave suspicion among officials here that Khrushchev is trying to use the approaching disarmament conference as a device to prevent Kennedy from ordering a new series of atmospheric nuclear tests.

The state department forwarded an English translation of the letter to the White House late Thursday, a little more than two hours after Kennedy left for Florida. Presumably, his special assistant, McGeorge Bundy, relayed it to the president immediately.

The United States planned to start immediate consultation with Britain and other allies on a Kennedy reply to Khrushchev, turning down his latest summit conference bid. But the state department informally rejected Khrushchev's insistent urging in a statement Thursday night.

FEELS IT BEST

The statement said the U.S. government feels that its proposal to open disarmament talks with foreign minsters, with the possibility of a summit session later on, "is the proper one and the one best designed to lead to orderly progress in the disarmament negotiations."

This statement foreshadows the line of Kennedy's reply which is also expected to express hope once again that, as the statement said, "the Soviet Union will agree to the joint United States-United Kingdom proposal for the foreign ministers meeting."

Khrushchev's letter was the latest in a series of exchanges involving him, Kennedy and British Prime Minister Macmillan. Kennedy and Macmillan opened the series Feb. 7 with a call for a foreign ministers meeting. Khrushchev Feb. 10 raised the bid to a summit conference. His proposal was rejected by the two Western leaders Feb. 14 and his message Thursday was a reply to their rejection.

LONDON (Reuters) — Soviet Premier Khrushchev has told President Kennedy and Prime Minister Macmillan that he is "grieved" by their refusal to take part in a summit conference on disarmament in Geneva next month.

The Russian leader said in letters published by the Soviet news agency Tass that he hoped they "have not yet said their final word" about their participation in the conference.

Khrushchev has proposed that the 18-nation conference, due to begin March 14, should start at summit level. The West has proposed that it begin at foreign ministers level and both Kennedy and Macmillan said they are willing to take part later if the groundwork is laid for agreement.

"I am grieved by your negative attitude to this request," Khrushchev said in his letters, handed over in Washington and London Thursday.

Mimico Man Admits He Lied To Inquiry

TORONTO (CP)—Jack Book, building inspector in suburban Mimico, said Thursday night he lied at an inquiry into the town's building administration.

Speaking to a special town council meeting, he blamed his action on a "definite hatred" which he said was foreign to him.

"I did lie," he said. "I stand here and openly admit it."

The meeting erupted into disorder several times as the councillors discussed recommendations made after the inquiry by Judge J. Ambrose Shea.

At one stage, Mr. Book shouted in the direction of Councillor Cecil Johnson: "I'll punch him. I'll knock him from one end of the room to the other."

Mayor Hugh Griggs broke his gavel trying to keep order as two councillors stood shouting at each other while 50 spectators yelled.

HOT AND HEAVY EXCHANGES MADE IN DEBATE

House Returns To Regular Work

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons closed its grab-bag debate on the throne speech Thursday night. It thus concluded the eight days of traditional talk on the address from the throne, written by the government to outline its legislative intentions.

Now the Commons returns to its regular business — still no wiser as to when Prime Minister Diefenbaker will call for dissolution of Parliament and a general election.

The throne speech debate had some hot and heavy exchanges, particularly Thursday.

Romauld Bourque (L—Montreal Outremont-St. Jean) said the government has resorted to "printing press methods" of creating money.

He said this "leads to uncontrolled inflation, which could sweep across Canada like a prairie fire bringing desolation and ruin in its path."

DENIES CHARGE

A few hours earlier, Lucien Cardin (L — Richelieu - Vercheres) made a searing attack on Prime Minister Diefenbaker, calling him a "demagogue" who acts like a "silent movie hero blasting his way through paper walls and open doorways and then waiting for applause."

"Disgraceful," snapped Veterans Affairs Minister Churchill.

Non-op Wage Talks Founder On Job Security Question

MONTREAL (CP) — Contract talks between Canada's railways and negotiators for their 110,000 non - operating employees collapsed today.

Frank Hall, veteran chief negotiator for the unions, said in a statement there had been no agreement between the two parties on any point and added that the railways' job-security offer is "outrageously inadequate."

The railways were to issue a statement later.

It was expected that the 15 CLC-affiliated unions representing rail employees not involved in the actual running of trains would see a federal conciliation board to study the dispute.

The breakdown in negotiations came almost without warning when the railways' and unions' negotiating team stalked out of a meeting room after a 50-minutes' session.

The companies presented a package proposal, including job security provisions, a month ago. The companies' offer has not been made public.

The unions had been considering the proposal and entered today's meeting in the CNR's downtown headquarters seeking clarification of several points.

In his statement, Mr. Hall said:

"In brief, it is too little and too late.

"Indeed, it is implicit in the railways' counter - proposal on this score that further and radical staff reductions are in contemplation."

Job security was the key to the union demands served on the railways last Dec. 20. The companies' counter - proposals, not yet made public officially, were presented Feb. 9.

Mr. Hall added: "It is high time consideration should be given to the human element, their rights and needs as human beings, the necessities of their families. We seek to protect them against displacement by machines that have no human needs, no soul and are not susceptible to suffering."

On wages, Mr. Hall said, the unions could not abandon the so-called durable goods standard. This is an average of wages paid in several Canadian industries.

Mr. Hall expressed regret that the talks had broken off and said other means will be sought "to further the matter." This was an obvious reference to conciliation proceedings.

He said there had been no agreement between the two parties on any points.

French Move to Demobilize Algerian Moslems Irritates

CP from AP-Reuters

ALGIERS —Both French and Moslem officers reacted bitterly today to a government plan to demobilize 140,000 Algerian Moslems wearing the French uniform.

The government move was an obvious sign of its confidence that an Algerian cease - fire is imminent. But it posed a possible internal crisis in the French Army in Algeria at a time when it faces a test by the rightwing European Secret Army Organization pledged to keep Algeria French.

The Algerian rebel National Council, meanwhile, met in secret session in Tripoli, Libya, for the second day to consider the tentative accord with France for a cease-fire clearing the way for Algerian independence. France endorsed the accord Wednesday night.

President Charles de Gaulle's government Thursday announced plans for progressive demobilization of Moslems serving in the French Army and said they will be given bonuses and pensions and offered the opportunity to re-enlist or resettle in France.

Gen. Charles Ailleret, the supreme commander in Algeria, vowed that the "legitimate interests" of Moslems who have served France will be guaranteed. But the announcement was seen as a personal tragedy for many Moslem soldiers.

"They're paying us off, we are no longer needed," bitterly

Ten Rules for Good Driving Given by B.C. Road Minister

VICTORIA (CP) — Highways Minister Philip Gaglardi of British Columbia, Thursday gave the legislature 10 commandments for good driving:

1. Every person on this highway has the same rights and privileges as I have, and may I constantly grant to other drivers what I wish to have granted to me.

2. If I do not wish to drive the posted safe — speed limits, may I never in any way restrict those who do.

3. Legally I may have the right of way, but neither the law nor being right gives me any less reason to do all in my power to avoid accidents.

4. As a driver of a larger vehicle, may I never be guilty of taking advantage of a driver of a smaller vehicle.

5. May I never exceed the ability of the highway or the capabilities of my vehicle or my own skill as a driver.

6. May I never make like the Lone Ranger and drive aimlessly as a lane-changer.

7. Never be a tail-gater — this is a prelude to an accident-maker.

8. Never accelerate a vehicle when being passed — accidents come easy enough without increasing the possibility.

9. A drinking driver is the highway's most dangerous hazard. May the value of a human life mean more to me than a drink.

10. May courtesy be my highest objective when I take the wheel of my vehicle.

The minister said something along these lines might be printed in a pamplet for distribution among drivers as part of an education program to reduce the numbers of highway accidents.

Mr. Gaglardi has been convicted six times of traffic offences.

Electoral Map to Be Made By Independent Commission

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Robarts announced Thursday he will ask the legislature to approve the appointment of a three-man independent commission to inquire into redistribution of Ontario electoral districts and "recommend to the assembly such changes and additions as they deem appropriate."

He said he would recommend that the commission consider Ontario's mushrooming population, varying conditions between rural and urban areas, traditional boundaries and means of communication.

Mr. Robarts said later, in answer to questions from NDP Leader Donald C. MacDonald, that the commission will be set up before the end of the present session, around Easter, but it is unlikely its report will be ready before fall.

He said Trade Minister George Hees had told the Commons recently that the census figures would probably be available in June.

"It strikes me it would be impossible to get the report back to the present session. There just isn't sufficient information

FALL SESSIONS OF LEGISLATURE NOT WELL LIKED

Cabinet Ministers Applaud Protest

TORONTO (CP) — An unexpected amount of desk-thumping—from government ranks — resounded through the legislature Thursday when Robert Boyer (PC — Muskoka) suggested fall sessions of the House be discontinued.

Mr. Boyer, speaking in the Throne speech debate, said the current set-up—with the House sitting in the fall and after Christmas—imparts a lack of continuity.

A majority of the back-benchers greeted his statement with desk-thumping and even some cabinet ministers joined in. Health Minister Dymond and Highways Minister Cass supported Mr. Boyer's ideas, but Premier Robarts sat silent throughout the demonstration.

The Muskoka member suggested the legislature start its sitting early in January and continue until business is finished.

DISCUSSES OIL

In other business Thursday the legislature discussed: Underground storage of oil; a code of human rights and a crime commission.

The Ontario Energy Board has been asked not to deal with an application from Imperial Oil for underground storage of natural gas.

Energy Resources Minister Macaulay told the legislature the request was connected with storage of natural gas concerning a report expected within "the next few weeks."

The House reached rare accord as opposition members combined to give unanimous approval in principle to a new Code of Human Rights for Ontario.

Mr. Robarts called it "one of the major measures of this current session," which "reflects the conscience of the people of Ontario."

It consolidates previous human rights legislation into a single code designed "to make secure in law the inalienable rights of every person, and to create at the local community level a climate of understanding and mutual respect among all our people so that every person . . . will be afforded the unhampered opportunity to contribute his maximum to the enrichment of our province and our nation," Mr. Robarts said.

ACCUSES ROBERTS

Attorney-General Roberts was accused of trying to "lampoon" the recently-named crime commission on organized provincial criminal activity and the cabinet was accused of sharing Mr. Roberts' views.

Ray Edwards, Liberal member for Wentworth, said Mr. Roberts originally had said that a royal commission was not necessary and "I suggest he still holds to his original view."

House Rule Book Has Become Pretty Well Tattered Lately

OTTAWA (CP)—Every member of Parliament is honorable. The rules say so.

He is a person of pristine purity, loyalty and truthfulness.

According to the rules, a member must be taken at his word for the truth of what he says in the Commons.

He can't be interrupted without his consent and if what he says is denied by another member who claims to be in a position to know the facts, the denial must be accepted.

That's according to the rule book.

But the book doesn't say anything about political partisanship or the atmosphere which pervades a House of Commons on the eve of a general election.

The rule book has become pretty tattered lately.

In the Commons Thursday it was cited repeatedly by members on one side in an attempt to squelch their opponents on the other side, but to little avail.

Remarks like "You turned your back on your own prime minister," and "You are not worthy of your family name" were shouted without arousing any comment. "Sit down" has become an almost routine interjection from one back-bencher to another.

Both sides complain about the interjections and running rumble of discontent which speakers must contend with. But the Liberals have a tactic for trying to put a stop to Conservative interruptions.

"Government members certainly do not like to allow members of the Opposition to speak," said J. W. Pickersgill (L — Bonavista - Twillingate) when he ran into such a barrage Thursday. "That is another promise made by the prime minister — to restore the rights of Parliament — that is certainly being kept in a remarkable fashion."

Glenn Re-United With Family In Huge Welcome

Gets Nation's Thanks Plus Medal From JFK

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — President Kennedy and astronaut John H. Glenn Jr. met here today and set off together on a tour of the place where Glenn's adventure into space began last Tuesday.

To greet the president, Glenn had driven 18 miles from Patrick Air Force Base to this space centre past a cheering, applauding crowd estimated by police at 100,000.

It was at Patrick that Glenn was re-united with his family. Glenn gave Mrs. Glenn a hug and a kiss and threw his arms around his two children.

Then the marine lieutenant-colonel, who had flown around the world three times in four hours and 56 minutes, tugged a white handkerchief from his pocket, and made a swift wipe at his eyes.

Glenn, accompanied by Vice-President Lyndon Johnson, arrived back in the United States at 8:40 a.m. EST from Grand Turk Island in the Bahamas where he had been undergoing a de-briefing since he landed back on earth at 2:43 p.m. Tuesday.

KENNEDY SEES CENTRE

This was the president's first visit to the space and missile centre and he appeared to ask a number of questions about how this place, jammed with electronic consoles, worked.

For Glenn this huge reception by his admiring countrymen was only a foretaste of things to come. He is to be given a mammoth welcome in Washington Monday, followed by another in New York Thursday.

Glenn arrived at the Cape Canaveral air strip about 20 minutes ahead of the president. There he was greeted by dignitaries who had flown here from Washington, including Marine Corps Commandant Gen. David Shoup.

When the president and Glenn got together for the first time since their meeting in Washington in mid-January, a crowd of excited newspaper men and spaceport technicians in hard hats cheered and rushed to hear what the two had to say. But the pandemonium was so great, the two just grinned and escaped into a waiting automobile.

The beaming Glenn came here to receive the nation's thanks, plus a medal from the president.

Glenn landed from Grand Turk Island at 8:40 a.m.

Accompanying the astronaut in the big plane was Vice-President Johnson, who flew to Grand Turk this morning.

A few minutes before Glenn's plane landed, another C-130 carrying the other six astronauts and Project Mercury officials landed at the base, which serves as administration head-

City Engineer Stresses Need For Works Barn

For the fourth year in a row in his annual report, City Engineer Malcolm Turnbull has emphasized the urgent need for a new public works barn to store city equipment valued at approximately $288,000.

The engineer in his report states that replacement of the present barn cannot be disregarded any longer.

The present barn was formerly a curling rink which was moved from its William Street site in 1933 and re-erected at its present location. The engineer points out that the buildings system of false ceilings and partitions insulated with sawdust is a definite fire risk.

It is suggested that a new structure should be built in three early stages so that at the end of 1964 a completely new fireproof structure of concrete blocks would replace the present structure. The estimated yearly cost of the three-year project is given as $15,000.

Career Night Will Be Held At Quinte School

Sixty special speakers will be highlighted at Quinte Secondary School's first "Career Night" to be held next Monday evening. The speakers will be outlining the requirements, details and opportunities which exist within their own vocations or professions.

The night's program has been arranged to meet the requests for vocational information of the 350 students and over 400 parents who have registered for the occasion. A co-operative effort of the student parliament, the Quinte Home and School Association, the Kiwanis Club, the Y's Men's Club, and the guidance department and staff members at Quinte Secondary School, the project has been in the planning stage for three months.

Those attending "Career Night" will have the opportunity of hearing speakers in two vocations. Those wishing to attend who have not already registered will be free to select any of the talks available.

In addition to vocational information the evening's program will also feature a session on university information conducted by Miss Jean Royce, the registrar of Queen's University.

Senator Davies Writes Book On Family

OTTAWA (CP) — Ontario Liberal Senator W. Rupert Davies told the upper chamber Wednesday that he has written a book — Faroff Fields—about the Davies family emigration to Canada.

"In it I have set down for my grandchildren and my great - grandchildren — I already have two — and for the grandchildren and great-grandchildren of other members of the family all the reasons why our family emigrated. . . ."

He said the book tells of the difficulties encountered when three related families left Wales in the 1890s and first arrived in Canada, and the opportunities that opened up as the years went by.

"I want our descendants to know all about our coming and I want to impress upon them that success in Canada is not achieved by leaning on social security, but by working hard and saving money," he said.

"I am glad that I have taken the time and made the effort to write it.

"I have written it because I am proud to be a citizen of Canada and because I am grateful for the opportunities which Canada affords its immigrants."

GLENN RE-UNITED

quarters for the Atlantic missile range.

A secret service man stepped off the Glenn plane first, followed by Johnson and then the astronaut hero, with a big smile on his face, at 8:46 a.m.

GREETS FAMILY

Glenn embraced his daughter, Carolyn, waiting at the base of the ramp with other members of the family. Then he quickly hugged his wife and kissed her, holding her tightly for a few seconds.

Then, emotion getting a bit the better of him, he reached for his handkerchief and dabbed at his eyes.

Next he turned to his son, David, 16, and spoke a few words to the boy.

While standing with his family to pose for pictures, Glenn stepped back to say a few words to his parents. His mother remarked: "Quite a trip." Glenn answered: "Some trip. You can't just quite describe it."

RECALLS K MESSAGE

Johnson briefly reviewed Glenn's four - hour, 56-minute flight and noted that afterwards Russian Premier Khrushchev had congratulated the United States and suggested that the two countries pool their resources for exploration of space —Johnson turned to Glenn and commented:

"So, colonel, you must feel you have done something that two presidents have been unable to do."

Glenn, stepping to the microphone, said he was "glad to be aboard" and "very proud of the way the flight turned out." He was receiving the acclaim, he emphasized, as the representative of all the people who labored on the Mercury project.

Glenn, as astronauts Alan Shepard and Virgil Grissom did after their flights, stressed the "we" element in the space adventures.

He noted that the suborbital flights of Shepard and Grissom laid the groundwork for his three circuits of the globe.

"We learned a lot from these flights," Glenn said, "and future flights will tell us a lot more."

LAUDS ALL OTHERS

He said he happened to be receiving much of the accaim and attention now, but that similar glory should also go to the thousands of persons who made the flight possible — the people who built the Atlas, the capsule, also the tracking people and men of the recovery fleet.

At 8:59 a.m. Glenn, his wife and Johnson stepped into an automobile for the motorcade 15 miles north of Cape Canaveral, where Glenn had a date with President Kennedy.

Thousands of persons lined the route—the four-lane Highway A1A and 401, which leads through Cocoa Beach to the cape.

In separate cars directly behind were the other six astronauts—Shepard, Grissom, Donald K. Slayton, who has been named to make the second orbital flight, probably in April; Walter Schirra; Leroy Cooper, and Scott Carptener, who was Glenn's backup pilot.

Members of the Glenn family were in other cars, all top-down convertibles. Included were Mr. and Mrs. John H. Glenn, Sr.,; Dr. and Mrs. H. W. Castor, Anna Glenn's parents, and Mr. and Mrs. James Hosey of Pittsburgh, Pa., Anna's brother-in-law and sister.

The senior Glenns and the Castors live in New Concord, Ohio.

FLY WITH KENNEDY

These kinfolk flew to West Palm Beach, Fla., from Washington Thursday with President Kennedy in his personal plane. Then they transferred to another plane for the short hop to the Cape Canaveral area. They stayed overnight in a motel in the missile - conscious town of Cocoa Beach.

Cocoa Beach, a sleepy town of fewer than 200 souls 10 years ago but now a booming missle community of 6,124, went all out for the space conqueror.

Schools were let out throughout Brevard County and thousands of children were among the crowds that choked the route from Patrick to Canaveral.

Huge banners waved from the crowd as the modest motorcade passed up the highway. Hawkers did a land office business selling pennants with Glenn's picture.

Stretched across the four-lane highway outside one motel was a banner proclaiming Welcome Back, John.

Accompanied by Glenn, Kennedy was expected to see pad 14 from which Glenn's Friendship 7 capsule was propelled into orbit and the Priject Mercury ground control centre, the heart of the man-in-space operation.

The brief tour ends at Hangar S—a sort of homecoming for Glenn because it was there he prepared for his space flight and it was from there he left to mount the Atlas rocket.

At hangar S Kennedy arranged to confer the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Distinguished Service Medal on Glenn, who already holds the Distinguished Flying Cross and Air Medal for combat missions during the Second World War and the Korean War.

After the 20-minute ceremony at the hangar, Kennedy was to take off for the rest of his weekend at Palm Beach where he, Mrs. Kennedy and their two small children are staying at the home of a friend.

Doctors said they were pleased with what Glenn's flight —and his performance during it —indicated for the space journeys of the future.

Dr. William K. Douglas, personal physician to the astronaut team, said Glenn's story, indicates that—unless Glenn is an unusual specimen — "anybody from six to 60 could ride as a passenger" and stand the stresses from such a 4½-hour trip in space.

To Call Tenders For 2 Remaining Sewer Projects

Tenders for the construction of the remaining two sewers in the initial phase of the city's two-and-a-half million dollar sewage disposal system will be called by the Ontario Water Resources Commission shortly, according to city council's special sewage project committee.

The committee met yesterday under chairman Ald. Jack Ellis and were told that the contract for the sewage treatment plant has now been officially awarded to Schwenger Construction Ltd. of Toronto.

Council several weeks ago recommended acceptance of the Schwenger tender at $736,242 and the contract has now been officially awarded by the Ontario Water Resources Commission. The company will begin construction of the plant as soon as possible.

Tenders still to be called included the forced main sewer from the Moira River pumping station and the outflow from the treatment plant into the Bay of Quinte.

All construction on the sewage treatment project must be completed by March of 1963 or the city might lose out on special grants for sewage disposal projects being offered by the Federal government.

Holloway United Host to Dist. Council

A group of 50 men enjoyed a supper at Holloway Street United Church served by a group from the new U.C.W. organization. Many were guests of the AOTS Men's Club of Holloway, sitting in at their regular meeting and in attendance as representatives from the Belleville Presbytery AOTS Men's Club for the District Council meeting which followed.

After payment of the many fines imposed by Sergeant-at-Arms Ozzie Outingdyke, a sing song and devotional period conducted by Ross Taylor and Ivan May preceded the guest speaker.

Bill Ironside introduced Mr. Earl Elliott from the local office of the Department of National Revenue, Taxation Division. He took as his timely topic the recent amendments to the Income Tax Act as they affect the individual. The taxpayers learned how they can legally get the most from their tax exemptions.

Ross Taylor, reporting for boys' and youths' work announced he was selling tickets to take the Scouts and Cubs to the annual Police-Firemen hockey game.

Projects chairman Ozzie Outingdyke informed the members the next club project will be the March pancake supper.

ing Inonu, to sign a joint declaration pledging themselves to work to salvage democracy in Turkey. They appealed to the armed forces to avoid provocations.

The turning point came when the three big armies which garrison the country from the Greek border to the Soviet frontier announced they would take orders only from Gen. Sunay.

No casualties were reported.

The abortive uprising united leaders of the country's four major political parties for the first time since civilian government was restored in Turkey in October.

Y's Men Hear Advantages of New System

E. A. Orr, principal of BCIVS was the guest speaker at the regular weekly meeting of the Y's Men's Club in the local "Y" yesterday evening. Mr. Orr outlined the structure and advantages of the new system of education at the secondary school level which is to be adopted by Ontario high schools next year.

The new system will offer seven courses to the grade eight graduate when he enters high school. These courses are arranged to meet both his academic ability and vocational inclination where possible and to allow the widest possible scope for advancement for the individual.

Before a student enters secondary school there will be a recommendation made by his public school teacher as to which course he will find best suited to him. It is not obligatory for a student to accept this course but it is usually best if the parents give adequate consideration to the teachers' appraisal and suggestion, the speaker advised.

The seven courses will vary in length from one to five years and in academic and vocational content geared to meet the needs and ambitions of the students.

Starting next year at the Moira Secondary School will be a one-year course especially designed to offer a practical training in trades for students who have been unable to academically qualify for grade eight graduation.

At the other end of the scale is the five-year course designed to those students capable of carrying on to university.

There is some flexibility between the four and five-year courses, Mr. Orr noted, and a student may make some change within these courses if he finds his initial course unsuited to him providing this change is made shortly after the completion of his first year, that is, his grade nine.

The speaker suggested that this system will be the best to date to offer a broad scope within which a student may develop and advance.

Farming Folk Near Napanee Vote Strong No

NAPANEE, Ont. (CP) — The farming folk of North Fredericksburgh Township found out with a shudder three months ago that their quiet rural community had never in all history declared itself either wet or dry under the Ontario liquor law.

The lapse came to light when a local golf club applied to the liquor control board for a cocktail lounge licence.

Thursday the voters in the Bay of Quinte Township corrected the omission with a succession of resounding noes to five questions asking if they desire public places to drink beer, wine or hard liquor.

Two - thirds of the 985 eligible voters recorded their opinions and more than 70 per cent of them opposed the introduction of drinking places. The average no vote for all five questions was 74.9 per cent.

The poll reversed the usual Ontario pattern of community balloting on liquor questions. Generally, the wets initiate the referendum and require at least 60 per cent of the vote to upset the community's dry status.

But in this case the dries required 60 per cent of the vote to keep North Fredericksburgh free of licensed premises because the township had no formal status and only the dries were organized.

Under the leadership of farmer Rothwell Parks, the dries rolled up their 60 per cent.

The golf club's application for a licence now seems certain to fade into the liquor commission's files.

Any of the losing minority who want to drown their sorrows must journey to the beverage rooms of Napanee.

Both opposition parties have been demanding an independent commission and the question of redistribution, particularly in the Metropolitan Toronto area, has been current since former premier Leslie Frost decided last summer that such was necessary.

Hees Visits Central Bridge As Shipment to Iran Ready

TRENTON—Hon. George S. Hees, Minister of Trade and Commerce, flew into Trenton yesterday afternoon with his official party, which included Mrs. Hees and Lee Grills, MP, and spent two hours at the Central Bridge plant.

Mr. Hees viewed a train, comprised of 20 gondolas, piled high with 800 tons of pre-fabricated steel sheets and frames bound for Halifax, and ultimately destined for Iran.

Eric Ellsworth, president of the Toronto Iron Works, of which Central Bridge is a subsidiary, told the minister that the 50 pre-engineered buildings in the shipment had been manufactured by the Stran-Steel division of Central Bridge. He said that the monetary value of the shipment, some $250,000, equalled ten per cent of Canada's total value of exports to Iran in 1960. One half the quarter million value had been absorbed in labor costs, the president said.

It is the largest order ever filled by the Stran-Steel division, and was obtained against Iranian, American, British and French competition.

Mr. Ellsworth said that his company's interest in overseas markets and the subsequent receipt of the large order were a direct result of the Export Trade Promotion Conference held in Ottawa in Dec., 1960.

The order was obtained through a company agent in Iran, with the assistance of the Department of Trade and Commerce, and the prices quoted and delivery date promised were factors which brought the order to the Canadian company.

Mr. Ellsworth explained that the 50 pre-fabricated buildings in the shipment had been constructed for rapid erection and were completely equipped with windows, doors and ventilators. A number of sub-contractors took part in the preparation of the shipment.

Before the arrival of Mr. Hees and his party, plant operations were suspended and the workmen assembled in front of a CNR train on which the pre-fabricated steel sections were loaded.

MEETS WORKMEN

Mr. Hees mingled with the workmen and their foremen, personally complimenting them on "a fine job of work."

Mr. Ellsworth, in attempting to acquaint Mr. Hees with the ultimate destination of the shipment, stumbled over "Khorramshahr, Iran," rather badly.

"That'll do," laughed Mr. Hees, conceding that his attempt at pronouncing the name of the Iranian city would have been no better.

"I'm very proud of this 100 per cent Canadian job," said Mr. Hees. "This should serve as an example to firms all over the country. We've got to produce more all-Canadian jobs—more quickly and more cheaply than anywhere else in the world. You fellows have shown us that it can be done."

Mr. Hees extended congratulations to James Duncan, works manager; Dick Burnett, engineering draughtsman; Grant Shorey, shops superintendent, all of Trenton, and William Laycock, export manager with the Toronto office.

Council Turns Down Requests For Additional Staff, More Pay

TRENTON — Trenton council met in a special session Wednesday afternoon to consider requests from the town's protection to persons and property departments that additional men be added to the staffs.

Fire Chief Cecil Ellis presented his request for two additional men for his department in person. Monday night, council agreed to a clause in the firemen's agreement with the town which would change the work week at the station to 48 hours, rather than the 56 hours the men presently put in.

However, when it came to hiring two additional men in order to implement this 48-hour schedule, councillors thought twice about the matter . . . and advised the fire chief to do likewise. Chief Ellis was told to try to work out the 48-hour work week schedule with the men at his command.

A request from the police commission for two men with which to supplement the Trenton police force, met a similar fate. Council "didn't feel that the men were needed."

By the terms of an agreement signed with the members of the force two years ago, the department was to go on a 40-hour work week at the first of this year. To do this, the commission claims, two extra men would be needed. But council, agreeable to the 40-hour week, won't agree to the hiring of the two extra men.

A commission request that the police chief's salary and that of the inspector, be increased, also met with a negative attitude on the part of council.

One affirmative decision was made by council at the meeting. Clerk-comptroller O. W. Larry was authorized to apply to the provincial department of highways for last year's grant on street construction and repair. The amount involved is in the neighborhood of $35,000.

The provincial department returns to the municipality fifty per cent of the cost of work on roads which also serve as highways. In the case of Trenton, Dundas Street is also Highway 2 and Highway 33 also forms part of the town's street system.

Collins Bay Farm Camp To Be Opened

TRENTON — On Monday, February 26, Jack Goldberg, president of the Trenton branch of the John Howard Society and vice-president of the society at provincial level, and other members of the Trenton group, will motor to Kingston to attend the opening of the Collins Bay Farm Camp and the new Protestant chapel at the penitentiary. Justice Minister David Fulton and Minister of Immigration, Ellen Fairclough, will attend the ceremonies.

ARRANGE MEETING

On Wednesday, Trenton area Liberal party stalwarts met in the Gilbert Hotel to discuss plans for a mass Liberal rally to be held in Trenton in March. Present at the meeting were Roy Sills, newly-elected president of the South-Hastings Liberal Association and Robert Temple, liberal candidate for South Hastings.

PLAN ACTIVITIES

Executive members of the Trenton Victorian Order of Nurses met this week to plan the group's spring activity.

Miss Joan Moyer, Reg. N. said that pre-natal classes would start on March 6, in the VON office above the downtown CNR station. The eight-week course is designed to assist expectant mothers with such things as nutritional needs and the care of the baby after its arrival.

Mrs. S. Mowbray was appointed to convene the VON June tag days and Mrs. G. Griffiths will make arrangements for an April tea.

The annual membership drive will be conducted in October.

A committee will meet with authorities at the Christian Reformed school in west Trenton to discuss the possibility of providing nursing service to the school.

Robert Barlow, 1962 president, will approach town council about a grant to the organization.

Miss Moyer reported on the well-baby clinic, which is held in the VON office on Thursday afternoons and said that the nurses had made 194 home visits during January.

A pre-school immunization clinic will be held in the community gardens on March 9, starting at 9 a.m.

Brotherhood -- Tolerance a Difference

This is Brotherhood Week.

It is common practice for many people to mention brotherhood and tolerance in almost the same breath and to consider the two analogous. Such is hardly the case.

Toleration is the freedom to hold views that differ from those established in a society. Brotherhood is a state or a quality of being a brother. The former is cold and lacking sensitivity whilst the latter is dependent upon a certain quality of human sensitivity.

The difference between the two is perhaps best shown in the parable of the Good Samaritan. Those who passed over to the other side of the road were merely being tolerant of the poor wretch who had been set upon by thieves. An intolerant man would have had him removed as a hindrance or obstacle on a public thoroughfare. The Samaritan, however, was the example of one who practised brotherhood. He shared his strength and his assets with the less fortunate man and helped him to gain a place where he could carry on by himself.

Our society will not progress very far if we are but tolerant of those who differ from us in their religious, political, social, economic or cultural beliefs. To tolerate is, in a sense, to ignore but to allow to exist. It is hardly a positive method or means towards creating a better society for mankind.

To achieve this goal it is necessary for us to assimilate the positive aspects of brotherhood. One man is no different from another except where circumstances, either natural or man-made, have created a difference.

We are required to develop a degree of empathy, as well as sympathy, towards our fellow human beings. Once we understand their needs, ambitions and motivations we are then in the position where we can do something positive and constructive to assist them where and when they most require help.

Being human it is often the case that one puts aside, through sheer laziness, any real effort to understand another with a different view or background. In doing so not only has the possibility of a genuine friendship been discarded but the individual has stifled his delevopment as a mature being and promoted his own ignorance.

To put aside the practice of brotherhood creates a twofold harm—harm to the individual who does so and harm to the person he does not understand and therefore merely tolerates.

A friend, the philosophers tell us, is man's most priceless possession. Friendship is based on mutual understanding and respect. We cannot help but wonder how many friends are lost simply because no effort has been made to understand them through the practice of brotherhood.

This loss is severe enough at an individual level. When it reaches national or racial levels it becomes tragic. Those who might question this statement have a great need to read the front page of this or any other newspaper and frankly digest the meaning behind the manifold stories of human conflicts, fears and frustrations.

Toleration is but the recognition of another part of humanity much as one might accept the fact that a brook runs through the woods. Brotherhood is the act of getting one's feet wet and following that brook until one is able to meet and gain a comprehension of the vast sea of humanity. Once upon that sea there are many ports which beckon to him—the world is his.

He Urges Logic

He urged increased depreciation allowances. Briefs packed with facts had been submitted to the Federal Government urging such a move, he said. "But," he added, "an election year is a time to forget logic and go for votes."

Mr. Hewitt said unemployment insurance payments in 1960 and 1961 equalled the cost of three St. Lawrence seaways.

"Wouldn't you prefer to work on another seaway, rather than pay men not to work?" he asked.

Does Mr. Hewitt think all the persons who received unemployment insurance were construction workers or are normally engaged in producing goods the construction industry uses?

Is he suggesting that any work, useful or not, is better than no work?

What looming election induced Mr. Hewitt to "forget logic and go for votes" in this fashion?

Strictly Personal

It Is True That Very Few Want 'Justice

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Experienced newspapermen soon learn to regard all statistics with caution, if not with active mistrust. For hardly any segment of our political thought, or our economy, does not somehow manage to twist statistics to suit its own ideological purposes.

For instance, on the left a great deal is heard about millions of "sub-standard income" families in America. One of the liberal cliches is that as many as 30 million Americans work, live and eat in depressing poverty.

I have never seen any hard-core facts to justify this assertion, and neither has anyone else. It is just part of the folklore of liberalism, and sounds impressive in a free-swinging argument.

On the other side, there is a lot of nonsense about "punitive taxation" of the rich up to 91 per cent of their income. This is theoretically possible, but it means nothing in practical terms.

A few years ago that eminently respectable and conservative publication, U.S. News and World Report, examined the tax rates of the 267 highest income people in the country — all of whom reported more than one million dollars income a year.

It found out that the "typical millionaire" had an income of $2 million, of which he kept $990,000 — or 47 per cent of his total reportable income. So that even in the very highest bracket, only 53 per cent was actually taken away.

Moreover, the story continued, "you can be sure, however, that this typical millionaire had a good deal of income not reported on his return — such as tax-free interest on municipal bonds. Few high - bracket taxpayers have all their wealth in taxable investments."

The more money one makes, the more devices there are available to keep a large share of it. It is the small-salaried person who has no escape from the tax bite, — no capital gains, no oil depletion, no vast "expenses" to write off, no legal or financial manipulations he can invoke.

Much, if not most, political argument depends upon such unsubstantiated folklore. No doubt too many Americans are living in substandard conditions. No doubt the tax laws work injustices at a number of levels. But the issues are never as clear-cut, as dramatic, as iniquitous, as the liberal or conservative proponents would have us think.

We need to rely more on our common sense, our instinct for decency and fair play, and our practical experience in sniffing out what Disraeli once called "lies, damned lies, and statistics."

The more complicated machinery becomes, the greater the number of parts it contains, and the greater the chance something will go wrong with those parts.

We certainly do not pretend to any technical spacecraft knowledge, and many of our space shots have been accomplished successfully. But it does occur to us that Prof. Eugen Saenger, a leading West German rocket scientist may have been right when he said:

"In their efforts to ensure safety, the American engineers have fallen into the error of making the apparatus too complicated. The more parts you use, the greater is the danger that one of them will fail."

'Groupthink' Is Deplored

Financial Post

The 50 McGill professors who signed the letter on foreign policy addressed to Prime Minister Diefenbaker were presumably following in the ink-trails of the economists who addressed a joint letter to Finance Minister Fleming last year.

If this is a new academic tradition in the making, it is not a very attractive one.

Professors deal in ideas and are supposed to have more time for reflection than most other citizens — including ministers of the Crown. It is useful for members of university staffs to air their opinions of public policy from time to time.

But must they do it in groups?

If an idea has merit, one academic signature is surely enough to get a hearing. Fifty signatures are not necessarily 50 times as good.

The reason for the group approach is presumably one of the following: To lend weight to the comment, to spread the risk involved, and to attract notice.

But can anyone remember a member of the previous generation of academics feeling that anyone else's signature would add weight to his own?

Is "groupthink" becoming standard procedure on Canadian university campuses? Is that the new scholasticism?

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

ARE YOU STUPID?

There is probably not a family in this broad land containing adolescent children where loud and angry arguments are not at least occasionally heard over regulations and morals. Young people, like their elders, tend to accept social customs as they find them. Frequently these social customs do not meet with the approval of parents. Then the fireworks begin.

"You are the strictest parents in town. Why Helen's mother allows her . . ." "Gee, Pop, you and Mom think we should just sit around pious-like saying our prayers." "No, it's just plain stupid to say we have to leave the gang at midnight." "Sure there's some drinking, but why not? Don't your friends take a drink now and then?"

And so it goes. The record is cracked and warped but it has to be played over and over again. Perhaps you remember the indignation you had the remonstrance you made in your youth against certain rules your parents laid down. Probably it has always been so. It would be interesting if we could go back to the Garden of Eden and hear what Cain and Abel had to say to their parents — and what their parents said to them.

There is some justice, of course, on both sides. Customs change, but there are some of us who believe that in most areas today they are changing for the worse. Also parents have rights and responsibilities, and woe unto the parent who does not face this fact courageously.

Finds Scream Balks Coyote

By Margaret Foster
in The Edmonton Journal

Except when rabbits are numerous, a coyote is practically always hungry. If it is a mother with young at home waiting to be fed, the need for meat is urgent indeed Mice, rabbits, a dead horse or cow — all will serve their turn; sometimes a lamb can be caught. But the great prize is a goose, a hen, a turkey, a duck. This feather-wrapped package, just right for carrying home, for dividing among the little ones, delicious, tender, fat — what more could any coyote ask?

Down past the poultry house, a big spruce tree had fallen in a high wind; and as is often the case, the roots had been flung up with earth attached, making a solid wall. Shelter from the wind, a sunny retreat, dust for a dust-bath — hens loved to congregate here, for rest and gossip. But the custom had its hazards. One afternoon I had come in from the garden, and was sitting, relaxed with a book, when the air was rent by a call for aid, an SOS in poultry language that anyone could translate:

"Help! Murder! Oh! Help!" So yelled the rooster, at the top of its voice. I dropped the book and dashed to the door, just in time to see, going up over the hill at a fair speed, a coyote with a hen in its mouth.

This was one of the very few times that I have wished I could shoot. I was alone; what could I do? My good white hen with the black collar! I had no weapon; or did I? Rage gave the idea to scream, to yell, as loud as I possibly could. I saw the coyote check its speed as though to listen. I yelled some more.

Some time in its life this coyote had been taught that he travels fastest — and farthest — who travels light. What that noise could be it did not know; the thing to do now was run. It dropped the hen and vanished over the hill.

The hen lay as though dead for a minute; then stood up, spun dizzily and staggered off down the slope toward the buildings, where later we caught it and treated the dreaful fang holes in back and thigh. The hen recovered completely.

Many Words Are Twisted

Kitchener - Waterloo Record

Although the twist is relatively new as a dance expression, many words have been twisted over the years so that today they have an entirely different meaning.

An erudite gentleman with a long memory was thinking the other day on how times have changed. He recalled the good old days when: A twist was a cut of tobacco. A sack held potatoes, not tomatoes. Red was a hue, but not cause for a hue and cry.

Square was a geometric figure having four equal sides. Shaver was a small boy not a TV commercial. Ain't wasn't in the dictionary. A haircut quickly identified a boy from a girl. Ducks had ducktails. Ponies had ponytails.

Automobiles were luxuries driven by father. A heel was on a shoe. A gift was not payola. A compact was kept in a purse —not a carport. A drag was a farm implement —,not a dull date. Snow thawed —not food. Butter was crocked. End meant just that — which this is.

Crackpot Mother Has Her Own Ideas on Child Care

Dear Dr. Molner: My married daughter is under the influence of a former registered nurse who lets her own children run around half-naked. Her babies are kept in the playpen — wet to their waists, barefoot, and wearing diapers only. The youngsters are always having colds and ear-aches. She fills them up with aspirin and penicilin, and the poor kids are full of medicine.

I have known some wonderful mothers who were registered nurses, and admired them, but why do we have to have crackpots like this one? — Mrs. S.J.

I don't know why. It's too bad, isn't it?

Frankly, I'm not wed to the idea that children should be bundled up too heavily. Some people, I'm afraid, seem to have the idea that the way to keep Johnny well is to wrap him in as many clothes as he can manage.

This may do harm. Get a child all sweaty from too much clothing, and then he's going to be more sensitive to a chill from a draft. And while we can't positively prove that such chilling is harmful, my observation convinces me that it probably causes a temporary lowering of resistance.

Therefore I say that light or moderate clothing is perfectly all right for children in mild weather or in a warm house. In really hot weather, a minimum of clothing is comfortable and adequate.

But in anything but hot summer weather, I certainly favor more than just a diaper — a shirt, at least. And when children are old enough to stand, I think it is better for them to wear shoes, if for no reason other than to keep them from stepping on things that might hurt them.

About letting children remain wet — most ctrtainly not. It is neither sanitary nor comfortable for the child, and it isn't good training for him, either.

The results of the situation you describe should be evidence enough to convince your married daughter that she should not follow this pattern with her own babies.

Frequent colds are bad enough. The ear-aches you mention are an even more dangerous sign. They mean infection — and ultimate impairment of hearing is only one of the gloomy consequences. An earache in a child should never be taken lightly. The cause should be cleared up with the least delay possible.

Dosing with aspirin and penicillin is no substitute for keeping children healthy in the first place. And while we're at it, something is very wrong if this woman is getting penicillin to use so casually.

Penicillin is a marvelous drug, but there are severe dangers in misuse. For one thing patients must be watched for any sign of becoming sensitive to it. For another, promiscuous use of the drug permits germs to become resistant. "Staph," or staphylococcus germs that have become resistant are only one example of a danger that we must guard against, not just for our own sake but for everybody's. Correct doses used only when necessary are the only means we have of preventing germs from becoming resistant.

Note To A.V.M.: These small broken veins are quite common. They are called "spider veins." They tend to come and go. The cause is not known, but there is no connection whatever with cancer. The best thing is to forget about them.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

ON DESERVING

Mostly we get what we deserve. And there is something of the unknown and mysterious good always awaiting us.

Much of the zest of life comes from the many surprises that crop up before us as we go along. Humdrum always kills and wipes out.

Everything earned is deserved.

But the irony of life seems to work along an unnatural law in some cases for the pay of some of the most deserving in this world is all too often held up, or comes too late.

We have to give in order to merit desert and appreciation.

The law of returned happiness is very simple. You just have to make a little of it and then put it in the bank where it draws interest. The bank is the world.

And so we are deserving of that which we plant, cultivate, nurture, love and build. And the world is enlarged by the minutest effort of the simplest man to do good, to add sunshine and to lessen sorrow.

The flower gives out its perfume and human beings are attracted to its exquisite colorings, so softly fashioned and so like the silent songs of the stars, or the sunset, or falling snowflakes on a winter's day.

The flower and snowflake deserve their beauty. So do you deserve all that you get from the gift of talent and ability which is yours and which you convert into works, deeds, and higher forms of expression!

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

During the first world war there was a popular story about the recruiting sergeant who was having trouble interesting a prospect in the infantry. So he switched to the cavalry and pointed out the advantages of having a horse to ride. As a final pitch, he explained what a great thing a horse would be in case a retreat was ordered.

"In no retreat," said the prospect, "I don't want to have to drag no horses after me!"

In a recent group of young executives, I heard them planning a visit to a downtown business conference.

"We'll go in my car," suggested one of them.

"Heck, no!" said another. "We don't want to have to drag a car around with us. We'll take a taxi."

In an ever-expanding area of business, especially in large cities, the personal motor car is becoming a nuisance, an encumbrance. It is no longer an efficient means of transportation. When you witness the woe-begone parades of tens of thousands of cars grunting homeward, yard by yard, to the suburbs of the explosive metropoli, you are free to wonder how long the poor old gas buggy will be behind the horse and buggy in the history of the obsolete.

The South African government will fight to the death before it relinquishes its apartheid says the republic's president.

Considering the temper of colored people in Africa these days, it might, sooner or later, have to do just that.

60 Fathers, Sons Enjoy Banquet

BAYSIDE — Tuesday the Bayside school was the scene of the first "Father and Son" banquet for the 1st Bayside Scout and Cub Troop. Sixty fathers and sons enjoyed the supper which was planned and served by the Ladies' Auxiliary.

Scouter Green asked the blessing.

Mr. W. McMeckim proposed the toast to the Queen.

Mr. Joe Gibson, chairman of the group committee, thanked the ladies of the auxiliary for the banquet, and introduced Scouter Green, Assistant Scouter W. McMeckim, Akela Mr. Button, Mrs. Moase and Mr. Hartwick, thanking them for their work with the boys. He also spoke of the value of the Scout movement in the district and the duties of the group committee, as well as thanking the Home and School Association which is the sponsoring body and complimented the boys and leaders on the recent successful "Do-Nut Drive."

HISTORY OF SCOUTING

Scouter Green gave a brief history on how American Scouting began, and of the need for camping equipment for the boys. He also encouraged more fathers to take an active interest in Scout badge work.

Mr. Button asked for help from the fathers in dealing with the testing of Cubs and the swim program.

Scout Gary Millar proposed a toast to The Home and School Association, the sponsoring body, to which Mr. George Miller, president of the Home and School Association responded.

Cub Steven Jones proposed a toast to the fathers. This was answered by Mr. Cole, who on behalf of the school board thanked the ladies.

Mr. Button spoke on the life of Baden-Powell and the spread and growth of the Boy Scout movement and proposed a toast to Baden-Powell's memory.

Some Moslem units will be incorporated in security forces which would police Algeria during the transitional period to independence.

Most army Moslems, however, will have to make a bitter choice—remain in an Algeria which will be ruled by their enemies or choose emigration or service as mercenaries in the French Army away from their homeland.

The problem is less acute for Moslem conscripts — men who have been drafted into the French Army. It is most dramatic for auxiliary troops, many of them former rebels who rallied to the French cause. Few of these men would be welcome in a Moslem-ruled, independent Algeria.

TIGHTEN SECURITY

Security measures were tightened throughout Algeria and France today in preparation for the powder-keg "peace."

Troops took up key positions in and around Algiers, Oran and Bone—three main centres of the opposition.

In Oran today new clashes erupted between Europeans and Moslems after Moslems had cut the throats of three Europeans and a fellow Moslem.

Thursday 31 persons were killed and more than 60 wounded in terrorist attacks throughout Algeria, many of which were blamed on the "French Algeria" rightists.

Panel members included Tom May of Prince Edward, Douglas Hoskin of Northumberland and Douglas Detlor and Harold Chambers of Hastings. Gibson Patterson assistant agricultural representative for Hastings, acted as panel moderator.

BCI Boys' Athletic Society Stages 16th Kampus Kapers

By EUGENE LANG

Last evening saw the opening night of the annual variety show familiarly known as "Kampus Kapers", as presented by the Boys' Athletic Society of B.C.I.V.S. before a large audience that was in attendance. As in the past fifteen years since the inception of Kampus Kapers in 1947, the entire evening was given over to a series of acts ranging from one end of the entertainment horizon to the other.

In the musical line the performances turned in by John Tooth, trombonist, and Dave Murphy, cornetist, with John Francis as piano accompanist were very acceptably accomplished. Wayne Soble in his two vocal solos managed nicely to convey the messages of each song. The Red Carpet Music Makers, consisting of six aspiring instrumentalists, put over their three offerings commendably and rhythmically. The B.C.I.V.S. Band, under the direction of Mr. Clifford Templer, gave three good examples of the results of many hours of assiduous practice on the part of all concerned.

The pantomime featuring Melvin Penney of Napanee High School in mimicry of Phil Harris and Al Jolson was extremely well carried out by the young visiting guest and drew heavy applause after each selection. The B.C.I.V.S. Glee Club under the direction of Mr. R. Robertson sang three numbers quite well, but the songs chosen just did not have any give, verve or push to them. The songs themselves were just devoid of any character and lacked any lustre that a singing group could instill into them.

GYMNASTIC DISPLAY

The highlights of the entire evening naturally were the astounding series of gymnastic performances given by various members of the Boys' Athletic Society. Under the capable leadership of Mr. Homer "Red" Townsend the participants in the free calisthenics (C. Boomhower, H. Macdonald, J. Muir, J. Peoples, H. Taylor), display on the box (R. Burr, L. Campbell, C. Miller, J. Peoples, R. Rutherford, H. Taylor, J. Wilson, R. Williams, G. Yorke), parallel bar display (D. Fuzzen, H. MacDonald, J. Miller, J. Peoples, H. Taylor, D. Tom) and horizontal bar act (C. Boomhower, D. Boomhower, D. Fuzzen, J. Miller, D. Tom) all performed with agility and fluidity of motion that bespoke arduous hours of sincere practice. The two clowns portrayed by Bill Rushlow ("Mimi") and Ralph Boomhower ("Fifi") added immeasurably to the show, both of these lads demonstrating through their antics that in reality they are extremely well versed, and equipped physically, to play the buffoons so effortlessly as they did throughout.

Dave McMurray, Frank Sager, and Mike Mallory were on stage briefly for a comedy skit entitled "Have you heard this one?", but because of poor microphone pickup or placement their voices did not penetrate the entire auditorium, the same being said for the master of ceremonies, Alan Barkley.

Summing up, the program was well balanced throughout but could stand a bit of tightening up, an example between the opening "Heigh Ho" and the Glee Club appearance. A bit of judicial slicing and tapering that could take off about twenty minutes from the three-hour show would greatly enhance the overall effect of the production in general. All who participated in Kampus Kapers this year are to be congratulated for a very good demonstration of their individual and collective talents. The show continues on tonight and tomorrow, curtain at 8.15 p.m.

Mr. Robert Temple, B.A., well-known city solicitor and Liberal nominee for Hastings South in the next Federal election, was guest speaker at the regular monthly dinner meeting of the Business and Professional Women's Club in the Belmont Restaurant banquet room. The occasion marked the celebration of the founding of the International Federation of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

In introducing the guest speaker, Miss Dorothy Grant remarked that Mr. Temple, a native of Belleville, had attended St. Michael's Academy, St. Michael's High School, Toronto University and Osgoode Hall, and has been practising law in the city since 1950. He has served as alderman for the city of Belleville for the past ten years, two years of which he acted as deputy mayor. Amongst his most cherished memories is a private audience with Pope John XXIII, carried on entirely in French since His Holiness speaks little English.

RUSSIAN TRIP

Mr. Temple spoke of his trips abroad but confined most of his remarks to his trip to Russia in 1960. He, at that time, carried greetings from Mayor A. McLean Haig to the mayor of the city of Moscow, Mr. Bobrovinkov. He had, from the moment of his departure from Paris, found the whole trip a series if contrasts. Travelling by air, he noticed the jet-propelled aircraft was technically designed similar to Canada's commercial airlines, but much of the space inside the aircraft had been sacrificed for heavy mahogany panelling instead of the usual plastics and foam rubber one finds in most world air lines.

Unlike American, Canadian or European cities where one usually views a panorama of buildings and plants, on the way from an airport to a city, the 15 mile drive from Moscow airport to the city itself is a bare, flat plain which ends abruptly with tall apartment buildings.

VISITS MUSEUM, UNIVERSITY

Mr. Temple was assigned an In-tourist guide and was kept busy for the entire week on visits to museums, the famous University of Moscow, the art displays, etc. He found the blocks and blocks of city apartments, 7 or 8 stories high an impressive sight. Under the impression that Moscow had no slums, he had also seen, within five minutes drive from the famous Red Square, a slum district that was the most depressing be had ever seen anywhere.

He enjoyed the Bolshoi Ballet which was truly magnificent and had visited the famous Moscow Circus. In attendance there were about 4,000 people and he was much amused when the program featured a three-person act, including the famous clown "Popov." A satire on a rather plodding tourist, with grey hair, carrying a huge gold key above his head and showing a thirst for pink lemonade (Mr. Temple having acquired a taste for cavair and what would be to us a strawberry pop.) The act, as his expense, was very cleverly executed.

SHOPS WELL STOCKED

He found the shops and stores adequately stocked but lacking the many shoppers one finds in a democratic, free city. This was particularly noticeable, not only in Moscow, but other cities in Satellite countries through which he travelled.

Mrs. Marie Buckley thanked the speaker and presented him with a gift of cheese for which Belleville is noted.

Mrs. Dorothy Brown, regional advisor, assisted by Miss Sharon Way, conducted the International Candelight Ceremonial. Symbolically impressive, the observance is a yearly tribute to the International Federation. Mrs. Brown quoted that "In so doing, we are united in mind and in heart with more than three hundred thousand women in many countries throughout the world. And, although we speak different languages, these women are at one with us in fellowship and understanding'.

TOAST PROPOSED

Mrs. Simone McFadden proposed a toast to the International Federation and the reply was given by Miss Hilda Collier. Miss Mildred Hall read the International prayer.

Mrs. Irene Haig presided at the meeting and Mrs. Robert Temple, a native of Austria, was a head table guest. Other guests were: Mrs. F. Temple, mother of the speaker; Miss Bruni Milne, a native of Hamburg, Germany, who has been residing in Belleville for the past few months; Mrs. Viva Graham; Mrs. Maizie Burley; Mrs. Myrtle Day; Mrs. Merle Simpson, and Mrs. Doris Picard.

The entire program for the evening was under the chairmanship of Mrs. Dorothy Ellis.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

Mrs. W. J. Tufts, Foxboro Road has returned home after visiting her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Charles (Margaret) Cleland and family at Deep River, Ontario.

Day of One-Room School Is Over Says Inspector

TORONTO (CP) — The little one - room schoolhouse has served its purpose well but its day is over, R. G. Boyce of Stratford, a public school inspector said.

Addressing the 25th annual meeting of the women's section of the Ontario Association of Agricultural Societies, he asked Thursday;

"Are you imposing a limitation on your child by expecting him to get a solid grounding in a one-room school?"

Women, he said, could extend the limits of the schools in their area by putting pressure on local boards to improve facilities to the point where the child from the country will not enter high school with a handicap.

He also urged the women to extend library service for schools by getting boxes of books from the travelling library service of the department of education, either for their local society or women's institute or into the school itself.

TOO FAR TO GO

"There are many good little libraries throughout the country, but they are in town and you live on the Third Line, Lot 28. It seems too far to go for a book when the easy thing to do is to turn on the TV."

Mrs. H. A Dickenson of Port Hope reported all junior club work increased this year, with more members, more clubs and many more displays of high-quality work.

The need of new blood in the writing profession was urged by Mrs. Ethel Brant Monture, first and honorary president of the section.

In presenting this year's essay award to 13-year-old Jewel Arnott of Cardinal, she said this year's contest was the best yet, and for the first time two boys had participated. Miss Arnott wrote on The Place of the Indian in Canadian History.

Mrs. Frank Spearing of Stayner was elected president. Vice-presidents are Mrs. O. Bell of Glanford Station and Mrs. Joseph Grummett of Seaforth. Mrs. G. H. Ironside of Georgetown is secretary-treasurer.

New President Welcomes New VON Members

The regular monthly meeting if the Victorian Order of Nurses was held at the YMCA last Monday with the new president, Mr. Frank Follwell, presiding.

Mr. Follwell welcomed new members to the board who were present: Mrs. T. E. Smith, representing St. Thomas' Church; Mr. K. MacDonald, treasurer; Mr. Frank Murray, vice-president, and Alderman E. W. Harrison from council.

A letter from head office was read requesting a list of delegates to the 64th annual V.O.N. meeting to be held in Ottawa at the Chateau Laurier, June 11.

NOMINATION DISCUSSION

Some discussion followed regarding the nomination of Mr. Harold Parker to be the representative for territorial division No. 5 on the Ontario branch of the board of management for the V.O.N. Mrs. A. E. Thom of Brockville has been the representative for this division during the past year and is willing to serve again. However, it was felt Belleville should have a turn and Mr. F. Murray proposed the territory should be changed annually, each branch taking its turn.

BURSARIES AVAILABLE

A second letter from Ottawa advised of 50 bursaries of $1,000 each, available to graduate nurses and students in the final year of a degree course. Mrs. R. Brain suggested the superintendent of nurses should be contacted to ascertain if any B.G.H graduate could apply for one of these bursaries.

Mrs. R. Brain and Mrs. J. E. Nelles agreed to convene the annual V.O.N tea to be held in May.

Miss D Connor, head nurse, presented her report: during January, 449 visits were made to 105 patients. Of the 105 patients receiving care, 33 were admitted to V.O.N. service during the month Statistics showed that there had been an increase in service to medical and surgical.

A total of five half-days were spent in special activities, which consisted of two half-days at Cannifton - Corbyville School and three half-days at Douglas Atkin School.

Missionary Tells of Work In Philippines, Shows Art

The Vota Vita Mission Circle of Victoria Ave. Baptist Church held its monthly meeting in the church parlor on the evening of February 20.

After the meeting was opened by a lively sing-song led by Miss Marjoire Hales, the pesident, Mrs. Nellie Burn led in prayer and conducted the business session during which a life membership was presented to Mrs. Ruth Gazely for her valued work in the mission circle.

The group was led in a responsive reading by Mrs. Peggy Gemmell, from Romans 12. For her worship service, Mrs. Joyce Stovell chose the theme 'Actions Speak Louder Than Words'.

Mrs. Danny Woolley, soprano, sang two beautiful solos which were thoroughly enjoyed by everyone.

SHOWER FOR EMMANUEL BAPTIST CHURCH

On behalf of the members of the Vota Vita M.C. the president presented Mrs. Joan Low, who represented the ladies of Emmanuel, with a number of lovely gifts to be used to help furnish the church kitchen.

The guest speaker for the evening, Mrs. Dorothy Jeffery was introduced by Mrs. Irene Woodcock, who informed that Dorothy was sent as a missionary to the Philippines in 1953 by the Church of Christ (Disciples) to work as a teacher under the United Christian Missionary Society and returned home in 1958 because of ill health.

COLORFUL DISPLAY

A most colorful and attractive display of arts and crafts from the Philippines was set up by the speaker which consisted mainly of bamboo and basket work, paintings, wood and mother-of-pearl carvings, hand woven cloths one of which included a large mat on which was painted a map of the Phillippine Islands located in the Pacific Ocean. Most beautiful was the dress Mrs. Jeffery wore which was hand woven and fashioned of delicate pineapple cloth, made from pineapple leaves and presented to her from the natives on her departure.

Mrs. Jeffery, who was stationed in Manilla, said the Islands were known as the "7,000 Emeralds" and that the natives are all quite tiny in stature — around five feet tall and weighing about 85 pounds. She further illustrated her talk by dressing several members in the native dress — all hand woven and showing a definite Spanish accent throughout.

The "Spice Islands" as they are also known have now over 600,000 Protestant Christians and the most vital thing the speaker noticed about the Philippinos was the enthusiasm they showed of really living a religion, which is Christ centred.

BAMBOO USES

Mrs. Jeffrey spoke of the endless uses made of Bamboo which grows so profusely in this part of the world. She remarked that the bamboo tree never grows alone but always in groups together - the larger ones supporting the small weaker ones, and that no matter how much they bent they never broke. This was used as a parable to show how Christians grow together and just as the bamboo branch is hollow inside, so Christian love works through the channel of Christ in our daily lives.

As a result of the work accomplished by the United Christian Missionary Society, the Philippinos have sent out 18 of their own missionaries to Thailand, Indonesia, Malaya, Hawaii as well as to the United States, but they still need more Christian Canadian and American teachers who will serve as brothers with them.

Mrs. Peggy Gemmell thanked Mrs. Jeffrey for her delightful and informative talk.

BAPTIST BROTHERHOOD SERVE LUNCH

The high light of a most interesting evening was the delicious lunch served by the Brotherhood of the church.

The men were most charming in ladies wigs, hats and aprons, and brought roars of laughter as the ladies of the Vota Vita M.C. seated themselves around candle-lit tables in the S.S. auditorium to the strains of stereo music from the French Cafe.

Pouring for the occasion were, Mr. Bert Girling and Mr. Howard Hall. Serving the ladies were. Messrs. Albert Berry, George Grenke, Tom Stovell, Bill Soble, Ed Burn, Albert Gazely, Jim Wright, and Bill Hales.

SHOULD AID DISABLED

VANCOUVER (CP) — An organization that speaks for the disabled complained Thursday about revolving doors in public buildings. The G. F. Strong Rehabilitation Centre told the royal commission on health services that many building designers now employ features offering maximum ease of public use by the disabled and aged as well as the general populace.

Many Attend St. Michael's Valentine Ball

The highlight of the pre-Lenten social season was the Gala Valentine Ball held in St. Michael's Auditorium Friday last.

A capacity crowd danced to the music of DiFruscios orchestra and the event was emceed' by Mr. E. J. Buckley.

At midnight the guests enjoyed the buffet supper which was convened by Mrs. George Gist.

During the evening, novelty and prizes were won by: Mr. Jim Hanley and Mrs. Frank Wilson; Mr. and Mrs. Pat Roach; Dr. and Mrs. Robt. Allore; Mr. Kenneth Brennan and Miss Glenda Koen, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Callaghan and door prize by Mrs. Frank Collyer.

The stage setting was most effective, with its white Sweetheart tree and flowers, being the work of Mrs. Gerrard O'Connor.

Hostesses included Mrs. Joseph Gallagher, Mrs. Douglas Jones, and Mrs. Herbert Brown, in behalf of the Catholic Women's League of St. Michael's Parish.

Centre St. Explorers Enjoy Party

Centre St. Church Explorers held their Valentine Party in the church hall last Wednesday evening. The girls were to have a skating party but due to bad weather, their plans were changed. They spent the evening in contests. The winners were as follows; musical contest — Jo-Ann Lucas and Cheryl Belch; laughing contest —Shelley Jones; musical chairs —Darlene Vesterfelt; another musical game was won by Susanne Copeland, Joyce Parks, Patty Schamerhorn and Brenda Lea Sweet.

The youngest member was Kathy Ibbotson.

The hall looked nice as it was decorated with red and white streamers, hearts and cupids all blended perfectly for the occasion. The decorating was done by Mrs. W. Jones and her assistant leader of the C.G.I.T. groups, who had enjoyed their Valentine party the evening before.

The party ended with hot dogs and chocolate milk prepared by Mrs. Wood and Mrs. Stapley and served by Miss Rilla Wood and Miss Linda Stapley.

Givenchy Endorses Belts Throughout His Showing

PARIS (Reuters) — Hubert de Givenchy's spring collection, with a look of elegance and femininity, was shown to the press Thursday. It made only slight changes in his basic lightly-fitted silhouettes.

Givenchy endorsed belts throughout the collection, marking the natural waistline or dropped slightly below. He sashed easy shirt dresses with six - inch - wide leather peplum belts or showed contoured belts no thicker than a heavy piece of cord.

The basic theme was back interest. Coats and suits had rounded arched backs that gave the optical illusion of slipping lower behind. Fronts were lightly indented on short suit jackets, paired with gathered skirts and short, loose, sleeveless over-blouses in contrasting colors.

Other trends were wider and broadened shoulder cuts, deep-set sleeves and cowelled back effects. Uncluttered, opened-up necklines were filled with scarves folded in oblongs.

Street hats were giant platters on shiny straw sailor hats with brims tilted up in back. Others were made of leather in turbaned and pillbox effect or puffy berets made of Givenchy's own silk scarves.

Wool jersey day dresses featured deep - set sleeves with baggy bloused backs and folds of fullness concentrated under the arms. Two - piece versions had a fitted band shaping the waistline. One - piece models repeated variations of belts.

Energetic Club Plans for Coming Events

The Energetic Club of Halloway Street United Church met last week with Al and Phyllis Lucas' group in charge. The theme for the evening was 'Valentines' Day'. The room was tastefully decorated in keeping with the theme.

The business session was conducted by president, Ross Dryden.

E. Moynes introduced a new couple, Allen and Francis VenClief to the club.

A "bottle drive" and "variety night" were discussed and dates for these projects will be decided at a later time. There will also be a paper drive some time in May. Treasurer, Vic Bailey announced that $26.10 was collected at the last paper drive. Elgin Moynes advised the club that the collection plates for the choir had ben ordered and will arrive soon.

Letter: You say "Cut apples in halves lengthwise and remove cores carefully." I wonder if you have ever used the little gadget which is used for making melon balls to remove apple cores. It does the job quickly, efficiently and with minimum waste. I am grateful to you for many tips.—Eileen.

Answer: Thank you. My mind must have gone blank for I use my melon ball cutter for removing the core from pears. Our readers will appreciate your idea, I'm sure.

Hats Deceptively Simple Stole Show in Montreal

By JANET WILSON

Her collection of fashions for women was marked by a gentler, rounder, more feminine silhouette than has been seen in recent years. Height in many cases is replaced by width. The pillbox for day wear is definitely out and the cloche and subdued sailor styles in.

Afternoon and evening millinery achieve a sense of movement with flowers, fringe and folds. Fabrics are light and airy and range from pleated and printed chiffon to re-embroidered organzas.

Filmy, transparent mohair is used for several hats. One, called Three Out of Four Doctors Recommend, is a mesh net calot with a rippled cloud of black organza framing the face.

WIG HATS

Other - occasion hats, wide-brimmed and worked in chiffon, are printed or polka-dotted. A few are in such vivid, solid shades as flame and apricot. Wig hats, so lightweight they cover a coiffure without disturbing a strand of it, also are shown.

For day wear, the designer favors beige - to - brown, navy blue and white. Many of the hats are reversible, with felt on one side and Valenciennes lace or printed chiffon on the other. Most of the cloches can be worn with the brims up or down.

Braided or pebbled straw is used extensively, in cloches as well as in back-folded berets and small sailor hats, called "boaters."

One over - sized coche, in notched carmel felt, has big mother - of - pearl buttons that convert the hat into two halves that can be folded flat for packing. It is called "How to Succeed in Business by Really Trying."

Another easy - care cloche, called "String Me Along," is in braided manila hemp and can be worn either brimmed or unbrimmed.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Erica J. — I feel one should outdo oneself in entertaining guests.

• • •

George J. — My wife was raised in Sweden and can't get over her Old World ideas. One of these is that hospitality means giving your guests a much better meal than you can afford! To save up for it, Erica slings us hash and sausage for days. That leaves her enough from the budget for a fancy spread for company.

This seems unfair to me and the children. Even though Erica's a wonderful cook, we get the unappetizing stuff she can assemble fast. We don't get the benefit of her culinary talents unless we have guests. Why should we go hungry just so the visitors can be stuffed with rich food?

Instead of looking forward to dinner parties, the children and I dread them. We know we'll be gypped out of a week's good food.

• • •

Erica J. — George exaggerates. Look at him. Neither he nor the children are undernourished. I feed them nutritious, well-balanced meals. To me it's worth it to tighten our belts slightly for a few days in order to have enough money to get the best cuts of meat and choicest vegetables for our guests.

When I was a child in Europe that was the way my mother entertained. We always had the best for our visitors, even if it meant the family must go without. I feel the same way. I love to invite friends over for dinner. Then I shine up the house, bring out our good linens and china, and do things just right.

Naturally the food I serve must be of the best quality. If this requires a small sacrifice, George shouldn't complain. It's worth it to be truly hospitable.

• • •

The Council: There's an old bit of dialogue that applies so well to Erica, we can't resist inserting it here:

First Child: We're having company for dinner tonight.

Second Child: Tough. We're having roast beef.

Eventually, Erica, anything false must crumble. The "old order" has passed in much of Europe, when it was based upon preserving the external forms long after the lights within had faded and died. Perhaps there are still proud aristocrats who get into rotting court costumes salute portraits of old monarchs on certain anniversaries. But most people on the other side have abandoned the pretense of class, and live openly and truthfully, according to their means.

So, forget about how your mother entertained, except that she was gracious and energetic. Forget the false pride. This is America where, unless you're painfully insecure, you needn't struggle to keep up a front. It's not hard for your friends to know the truth about income and resources. Who's kidding who?

Another difference in America is the importance of pleasing one's family as much as, if not more than, one's friends. The best food, the most painstaking Stroganoffs and souffles, are George's and the children's proper due.

But, lest we seem to lack appreciation of Erica's warm-hearted impulse to entertain frequently and generously, let's run through a few suggestions whereby she can put her best foot forward while giving the other foot a fair shake, too (no mean trick!).

1. Raise the level of fare served the family, regardless of parties. Being well nourished isn't enough. Put real joy into the meals.

2. Come down a peg in the gourmet standards set for guests. Using her talents, she can wreak magic with inexpensive cuts of meat. Substitute time pains and special touches for money. The former constitute a tribute and a compliment for friends.

3. Entertain less often. Or invite folks frequently for desert and coffee.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

WHAT'S YOUR E.Q.?

Mother may be the kindest, sweetest, most gentle creature in the world — but she also may cause her offspring some bad moments by the thoughtless way she sometimes treats him in public. Here are some test questions worth mulling over. Answer Yes or No to each:

1. Even though Johnny's painfully shy about his accomplishments, do you insist he recite or play the piano for guests?

2. At times, do you ignore his red-faced presence as you tell visitors all about the mischief he's been in recently?

3. When company's present, do you correct even the tiniest mistake at table until he's almost in tears?

4. Do you make your teen-age daughter cringe by joking about her current crush with your friends?

5. When her contemporaries are around, do you insist on calling her "baby," or other names that remind her of her very juvenile status in the household?

6. In a restaurant, do you keep stage-whispering to the children to sit up straight, etc., 'till they're too nervous to eat?

7. Do you ever criticize your daughter's hair-do or manner of dressing in public?

8. Do you give your youngster a bawling-out for some infraction, even though guests are present and they're as embarrassed as the child?

9. Do you sneak a peek at your teen-ager's mail then quote excerpts for the amusement of visitors?

10. Do you joke about how sloppy your son is, even though it's obvious he's not amused at the topic of conversation?

Scoring:

All Yes? — You don't mean to be unkind, but you have a knack for thoughtlessly wounding your children's pride.

All No? — Your courtesy and sensitivity is bound to win their friendship as well as respect.

One Could Buy Diamonds, Narcotics, Furs and Girls At One Time on 'The Main'

By GERRY McNEIL

MONREAL (CP) — In the 1950s, anything went on The Main.

Prostitutes and racketeers built a pillar of lawlessness on what must have been a base of corruption.

It was a gaudy pillar, easily seen by any Montrealer who cared to look.

You could get beaten up by hoodlums or shaken down by prostitutes just as easily. Money flashed on The Main — a four-block strip in the heart of Montreal — soon was gone.

Some of it evidently went into the pockets of police or municipal and provincial government employees.

Many clubs operated without licences to sell liquor or have shows. The shows often went beyond the limits of decency. And the clubs generally ignored legal closing hours.

INSPECTOR PAID OFF

One denizen, referring to the old Morality Squad as The Main's third gang, hinted that club owners had to pay police to ensure their fast appearance if a riot broke out.

A club accountant says that one former inspector regularly turned up for his $100 payoff. Extortionists used the threat of personal injury to take more money out of the clubs.

The easiest money for everybody came from the prostitutes. Their managers and protectors placed them in clubs, set daily quotas for them, and beat them if the money wasn't made.

Derelicts and degenerates liked The Main. One club courted perverts, featuring an act in which a male dancer posed as female. The same club, in a lame effort as respectability, later made its female patrons stop wearing male clothing.

During the '50s, one morality squad inspector was censured for giving his men contraceptives to protect them whem making cases against prostitutes.

Rookie constables were told by old hands to avoid rocking the boat, or they might find themselves in a station miles from their home.

DEMOTED AFTER THREAT

The cop on the beat was not allowed to make arrests for liquor violations — that was the job of the old liquor police—or illegal acts such as prostitution —the morality squad's stamping ground.

Lieut. Leo Lequin, now chief of the social security squad, hurt the wrong persons' feelings in 1957, was told by a racketeer he would be demoted, and three weeks later lost his inspector's rank.

How could such situations exist for long?

The ease with which the provincial police, now handling enforcement of liquor laws. and the city police, under new director Adrien Robert, have tamed The Main in the last year makes the question inevitable

The clubs now obey the law to the letter, fearing loss of their licences. Dancing girls aren't allowed to leave the clubs while working. Prostitutes are seldom seen in the clubs now and work out of call houses, which the police slowly are picking off.

The Poirier gang, composed of four brothers and their followers, was smashed by police last June after a gun battle in the Canasta Cafe. Donat Hunter, allegedly leader of another power group, is behind bars after a shooting over a personal matter.

ARMY PRESSURE

It's hard to find a goofball or a gun on a street where they were common in other years.

The Main took over as the city's No. 1 vice reserve after the red - light district — lower St. Lawrence Boulevard was its western border — locked its doors in 1944.

The downfall there came when the army threatened to make Montreal out - of - bounds to servicemen if its brothels weren't closed. Records showed that 16 per cent of the Canadian Armys' venereal cases were contracted in Montreal.

Mr. Justice Francois Caron, after the famed vice inquiry of the early '50s, observed that the economic threat worked where police, public outcry and the courts had failed.

Once the 100 brothel keepers learned the courts planned to send offenders to jail rather than to fine them, they closed up themselves.

FAKE RAIDS

Mr. Justice Caron noted that the area flourished brazenly—the biggest house was a few doors from a police station—for many years without serious interference.

Evidence during the inquiry showed that police made fake raids that didn't even interrupt the work of prostitutes or gamblers. When cases were brought to court, records were not, qualifying offenders for light fines.

The judgment said the raids and court cases were staged mainly to give the public the impression vice in the area was being combatted.

How similar was the situation on The Main to that of the red-light district?

Chief Robert is concentrating instead on building an alert, respected force that won't give future Mains a chance to get started.

"Criminals are no fools," he says. "When they know there is no chance of doing something illegal without getting caught, they won't."

THE MAIN CHANGES — Corruption and lawlessness that characterized The Main area of Montreal in the 1950s is disappearing. Night clubs and taverns with gaudy neon signs are still there, but racketeers and prostitutes are being weeded out in a police cleanup. The Main's St. Lawrence Boulevard, tame during the day, is also losing its notorious nightlife reputation. (CP Photo).

FOUND-INS ARRESTED — This scene is not unusual in Montreal where police are clamping down hard on gambling, vice and corruption, especially along The Main. Police raids are closing down clubs and brothels that once operated openly, protected by police payoffs. These men, arrested in a mid-town raid, cover their faces as they file from a police van to be booked as found-ins in a gambling house. (CP Photo).

St. Ola

ST. OLA — Mr. and Mrs. Archie Bird were the recipients of a valuable Valentine in the form of a son, born in the Bancroft Hospital on Wednesday, February 14th. As the Birds already have three daughters, the arrival of a son was especially welcome.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Davidson of Downsview were the weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Phillips.

On Sunday evening in the St. Ola Church, Mr. McAllister gave the first of a series of sermons on "The Parables of Jesus." Scripture reading was from Luke 11:5-10. The text was Mark 4:34, "And without a parable spake He not unto them; but privately to His own disciples He expounded all things."

Miss Brenda Hamm spent the weekend at her home, returning to Oshawa Sunday evening.

Misses Edith and Barbara Phillips of Trenton were weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Phillips.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Phillips and family visited Mr. and Mrs. Bert Connelly, of Carrying Place, on Sunday.

Teen-Age Canada

Making Canada More Bilingual Gets Airing

By JACK HUTTON

LES ENFANTS DE CANADA, DESIRENT-ILS ETUDIER LE FRANCAIS EN BAS AGE?

The question of whether French should be taught to more students—and at an earlier age—is getting a great airing these days by the experts.

Some have even suggested in Quebec that the reluctance of English speaking Canadians to learn Canada's second official language may be endangering national unity.

Hasn't the time arrived to add one more natural step: what do YOU think about learning French. Do you feel it has broadened your outlook? And do you wish you'd started earlier?

No one, as far as I know, has yet surveyed Canadian teen-agers to find their opinion on this touchy subject of bilingualism. Yet almost everyone else—teachers and parents—have been polled many times.

What do adults think? A Gallup poll came up with what it felt was the correct answer last summer. Its conclusion: adults are overwhelmingly in favor of teaching French as early as elementary school.

Asked whether French should be compulsory along with spelling, writing and arithmetic in every elementary school grade, nine out of 10 adults in French Canada replied YES. Close to two out of every three English-speaking parents had the same answer.

Do you agree?

Are you able to read at least the French advertisements on the back of cereal boxes? Do you wish you were able to concentrate more on conversation instead of the written language?

Too few of us realize that anyone interested in speaking French can find plenty of help outside the classroom. Your neighborhood record store, for instance, can suggest a number of records—which needn't be expensive.

I shall never forget an experience two years ago when I spent one day touring an elementary school in Northern Ontario where half the youngsters were learning English and the other half were wrestling with French.

The priest accompanying me asked students in each French-speaking class to talk to me in English. Some had grappled with the language for little more than one year, but all did well.

Then we arrived at the senior Grade 8 class and the priest turned to me. "We've been using your language so far," he said. "Would you care to say something to the students in French?"

That struck me like a bolt of lightning. But I stepped to the front and said: "Mes amis, quelle programme de television preferezvous?" The answers rushed back — Gunsmoke, Matt Dillon—and I tried to nod intelligently.

But I caught perhaps every second or third word. After six years of formal French instruction—although that was some years ago—I couldn't speak French anywhere near as well as these students spoke English.

There's my confession on this subject. Let me know what your opinions are—and please allow time for translation if you decide to try writing in French!

JAZZ BUFFS

A Canadian jazz musician has just thrown out a challenge to both Prime Minister Diefenbaker and Canadian teen-agers at the same time.

Lloyd Hollinger, a bearded musician now living in Pembroke, Ont., has written the Canada Council urging its members to help sponsor an annual concert tribute to the late Charlie "Bird" Parker, the late alto sax player.

His brief calling for a jazz revival in Canada will also go to the Prime Minister. And the musician-author includes teen-agers in his plea.

"I'd like to ask teen-agers to do me a favor," he says. "Just get a record of Charlie Parker's 'Strange Fruit,' play it and then tell me whether they'd rather hear that or those hit parade idiots."

HELP, HELP!

After several frustrating hours, I've arrived within one square of solving last week's problem but can't get any further. The question: draw squares as if you were playing X's and O's and arrange 12, 9 and 7 so they add up to 28 whichever way you look at them.

Can anyone solve this? Perhaps our anonymous reader who supplied the question can help us all get some sleep.

TRUDEAU MOTORS say:
PRICE

CONDITION
ARE THE TWO FACTORS TO CONSIDER
WHEN BUYING A USED CAR

Price only does not make a bargain. The price should be right, but also the condition of the car should be good. That is why Trudeau's Used Cars are popular. Our cars are reconditioned in our own plant and our volume of sales enables us to operate on a smaller unit profit. A visit to one of our two big Belleville lots will prove that . . .

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

(News Item:—NAPANEE:—A farewell to the Comets' hockey club is being planned with the Belleville Pepsi's as their opponents. The game gives fans here a chance to show their appreciation of the many years of good hockey this great club gave Napanee.)

Such Gibbardville sports greats as "Lefty" Pointer, George Blazelich, Vern Bishop, the late Hughie Brennan, Chuck Cairns, Ranny Card, and others that were household baseball names, years ago, might misconstrue the meaning of the item.

To a stranger it could mean the Furniture Town fans are accolading champions, triumphantly returned from the sports wars with the laurel wreaths of victory.

I do not believe the Napanee sportswriter typed the word "farewell" in its literal sense. I think, and hope, he means "adieu", "hasta la vista" with the unwritten wish "Till we meet again."

Unknowingly, perhaps, he wrote the first paragraph of its kind ever to chronicle the withdrawal of a Napanee sports squad in the mid-season of operations.

As was columned here before, I do not believe Napanee fandom let the Comets down attendance-wise because of local hostility. Their apathetic attitude is more the result of a virus that has infiltrated hockey fandom on a broad province-wide scale.

Teams representing communities much larger than Napanee have folded or are on the verge of folding for the same non-support reason. It has been reported that four of the Eastern Pro League teams may not operate in the same centres next season for lack of box-office returns.

Arena managers in the Ontario senior hockey league in Western Ontario centres are not using adding machines to count the game-night takes. The world tournament Galt Terriers played to 600 and less in their final home games.

Perhaps 1961-62 is the bad apple in the hockey barrel. When towns like Napanee with a rich and colorful sports past, fail to support a club, three times provincial champions, and as good as any in its league, there is something wrong in Denmark.

Back in the thirties when long, lean Walt Gerow masterminded champion and near-chambpion baseball squads, Napanee treated Wednesday afternoons with an American Fourth of July touch. It might as well have been declared a half-holiday. Practically everybody from toddlers to old-age pensioners jammed the Gibbard Baseball Park.

Its arch-enemy—on the diamond, that is—were the Jack Yanover-Ron Church "Pirates from Picton." The Yankees and Dodgers? Small-town stuff to Napanee fans when Ernie Gibbard's dashing diamond dandies were slated to meet the "Spaniards from across the bay."

And believe it or not, the stentorian tones of "Jolly Jawn" Adams, master-mind of the Detroit Red Wings' NHL squad, who has a tender spot cardiacwise for Napanee, often led the hometown cheering section from his seat in the top back row of the grandstand.

Diamond enemies or not, the fair-minded Napanee fans packed the park time and again, especially in 1933, when the Picton team played off "rubber" games with Gananoque, Falconbridge and other Ontario clubs in their quest for the intermediate "A" provincial title.

They came to Picton in carloads to watch the famous duels between Lefty Goldsmith of the Southampton Fishermen and "Warpy" Phillips, ace southpaw of the Picton squad, in the championship finals. And Walt Gerow and his crew were among the first to congratulate Picton when it shut out the Fishermen 2-0 to square the series.

Okay, that was a long time ago. You say today's fan is a different breed. I don't believe it. I do not believe there is anything wrong with the Napanee and hockey fans generally that a little time won't cure.

But it would be a mighty fine gesture if they packed the town's Community Gardens as the news item says, "to show their appreciation of the many years of good hockey this great club has given Napanee."

Habs In; Wings, Blues Race For 4th

Hull Eyes Goal Record

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

For the record, Montreal's highballing Canadiens have already tucked away a National Hockey League playoff spot for all intents and purposes.

The youthful Boston Bruins were outdistanced some time ago and Detroit Red Wings have a highly - improbable—chance — and that might be called an understatement — of forcing out the Habs. They would have to wind up the rest of their schedule — 14 games—with a win every time out while Montreal takes it on the chin 14 consecutive times.

The struggle for the final playoff berth appears to have narrowed down to a New York-Detroit affair. The Rangers, with 53 points in 58 games, hold a two - point edge but the Wings have two games in hand. Two of the three remaining games pitting the teams against each other are in New York.

Twenty players hit the 20-goal plateau last season and it's likely there will be roughly the same number this year. Fourteen men have already made it and another 10 have 15 goals or more.

LAST YEAR DIFFERENT

The Canadiens were two points behind the league - leading Toronto Maple Leafs Feb. 23, 1961, although they ultimately squeezed out the Leafs for the NHL title. Today they ride a fat 13 - point edge atop the standings.

The Red Wings got bad news Thursday night. They learned left - winger Vic Stasiuk, a 14-goal man, will miss at least a week of play because of a wrenched knee. A similar injury sidelined him for three weeks earlier in the season.

Don't count Chicago's Bobby Hull out yet in his bid to crash the 50 - goal barrier. The kid with the big shift needs 13 goals before the Black Hawks schedule runs out 12 games hence. But with a spurt he could make it. Since New Year's he's scored 23 in 24 games.

All teams go into action twice on the weekend. Saturday Chicago is at Detroit in an afternoon game and at night it's New York at Montreal and Boston at Toronto. Sunday Montreal is at New York, Toronto at Detroit and Boston at Chicago.

'Hey, Coach That Ref Swore at Me'

DETROIT (AP) — Coach Sid Abel said Thursday he has asked National Hockey League President Clarence Campbell to investigate what he says were improper actions by referee Vern Buffey in Wednesday night's Chicago-Detroit game.

Chicago won the game 6-4. Abel said Buffey's reply to a question by one of his players was "obscene."

"My main concern is Buffey's reply to one of my players (Bill Gadsby) when I sent him out to ask the referee about a certain penalty.

"The referee used obscene language in replying to Gadsby."

Abel also protested Buffey's officiating in the third period when Chicago scored the tying goal while the Wings were two men short because of penalties.

"The tying goal came when we were two men short on a pair of questionable penalties and then to top it off the winning goal was scored on an obvious offside play," Abel said.

The Red Wing coach said he was not protesting the game but wanted Campbell "to report on Buffey's actions."

REACH SEMI-FINALS

LISBON (Reuters) — Defending champion Benfica of Portugal qualified for the semi-finals of the European Soccer Cup by defeating the Nurnberg, West Germany eleven 6-0 Thursday night. Benfica won the two-game total-point series 7-3.

'Rags' Raglan Leads Lindsay Tonight

A former N.H.L. player who once wore the sweater of the Belleville McFarlands, leads the invading Lindsay Lumbermen against the Pepsi's here tonight.

He is "Rags" Raglan, formerly with the Detroit Red Wings organization, later going to the Chicago Black Hawks. He played with St. Louis and Indianapolis of the American Hockey League.

"Rags" was a popular member of the McFarlands before he transferred to the Kingston senior club. He is reported to have bolstered his Lumbermen with five top-flight players, which could mean trouble for the Pepsi's.

Coach Jean Paul Lamirande is taking no chances and will throw his full strength against the Lumbermen tonight. He wants that first "home" victory.

The game is a nine o'clock affair and it is hoped a good crowd will turn out to give the Pepsi's a good playoff sendoff.

Red Wings Tie

Baby Habs Whip Royals

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Montreal Junior Canadiens took a two-point lead over Hamilton Red Wings at the top of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A standings with an easy 6-1 win over Guelph Royals Thursday night.

In other games, Niagara Falls Flyers tied the Red Wings 2-2 on Hamilton ice while at Peterborough the Petes drew 5-5 with St. Catharines Teepees.

The Canadiens, who outshot the Royals 42-24 at Montreal, spotted Guelph a 1-0 lead on captain Mike McMahon's goal on a long shot. Ted Houston led the home team with two goals and Norm Dennis, Germain Gagnon, Yves Cossette and Yvan Cournoyer scored the others.

It was the final meeting between the two teams this season. Montreal won eight and Guelph two.

TAKES SCORING LEAD

Hamilton's Lowell MacDonald took over as the league's top scorer with his 42nd goal of the season. He now has one more than linemate Pit Martin, who missed the game because of influenza. John Gofton was the other Hamilton marksman.

Doug Jarrett scored for the equalizer for St. Catharines against Peterborough at 8:51 of the third period. The other St. Catharines tallies came from Ray Cullen, with two, George Standing and Bob Stanfield.

MONTREAL (CP) — Dr. F. Cyril James, principal and vice-chancellor of McGill University, said Thursday the university is preparing to embark on the second phase of a giant expansion program, a $26,000,000 segment.

And All of It Is 'Red'

'Color' Gone From World Hockey

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP)—A revised 44-game schedule for 14 teams entered in the world ice hockey tournament March 7-18 was announced Thursday by Thayer Tutt, chairman of the organizing committee.

The revision was made necessary by the refusal of the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Romania to send teams after East Germany's team was denied a travel permit.

Twenty - three games are to be played in the Broadmoor World Arena and 21 at the Denver Coliseum. Two will be televised by the Columbia Broadcasting System — United States vs Sweden at 10:30 March 10 and Canada vs United States at 3:30 p.m. March 18.

One preliminary game will be played March 7, Switzerland meeting Austria at 2 p.m. The winner will go into the tournament's A pool and the loser into the B pool.

Following is the schedule for Galt Terriers, Canada's representative (times EST):

March 8—10:15 p.m. vs Finland.

March 10—10:15 p.m. vs West Germany.

March 11—5:30 p.m. vs Switzerland or Austria.

March 13—5:30 p.m. vs Sweden.

March 14—10:15 p.m. vs Norway.

March 17—10:30 p.m. vs Britain.

March 18—3:30 p.m. vs United States.

The B pool will have, in addition to the Switzerland-Austria loser, The Netherlands, Japan, Denmark, Australia and France.

Canada is the defending champion.

Squirts Play Napanee Here Tonight

Len Coughlins fine Squirt All-Stars team will play Napanee All-stars in an exhibition tilt in Memorial Arena tonight.

The youngsters will stage their game prior to the Pepsi's-Lindsay intermediate clash, and will take the ice at eight o'clock.

The City Departmental League has generously given thirty minutes of their scheduled time to the youngsters.

Coughlin's Squirts are a well-coached, well-blanced squad rated among the best or of their class in the district. The youngsters play a fine brand of hockey and tonight's tilt should be worth watching.

On March 17th, the team will take part in the Napanee Squirts Tournament. Eight teams from the district including, among others, squads from Picton, Napanee, Peterborough, Trenton and Gananoque.

The tourney is sponsored by a group of Napanee sportsmen and annually attracts large crowds. It is an all-day affair.

Home-Run Epidemic Germ

Bat, Not Ball Says Joe

By JOE REICHLER

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Joe DiMaggio reached into the rack and selected a bat at random. He balanced it lightly in his left hand, wrapped strong fingers around the match - thin handle and took rhythmic swipes at an imaginary baseball.

"Here, swing it," he suggested. "See how light it is and notice the manoeuvreability?"

The bat, a 32 - ounce, 33-inch piece of lumber, felt light in the hands. The swing carried an almost whip - like snap.

"There's your cause of the present-day home run epidemic," DiMaggio said in an interview. "Much more so than the lively ball. It is these light bats with the thin handles that have prompted the present-day hitters to swing for the fences. It is because of these bats that the hitters have sacrificed batting averages in the interest of home run production."

DiMaggio recalled there were more than 2,700 home runs in the major leagues last year. There were only seven .300 hitters.

"Maybe I'm old fashioned, but I can't go along with the trend," said the former New York Yankee great. "I have seen kids who obviously don't have either the physique or the strength to hit the ball out of the park, but all of them are swinging from the heels. Those kids are suckers.

"Maybe they'll hit four or five more home runs a year, but in doing so they'll cut 20 or 30 points from their batting averages. I'll guarantee if they switched to a heavier bat and learned to hit the ball where it is pitched, they'd not only improve their average but they'd tack on about 10 or 15 more runs batted in."

When DiMaggio was hitting around .350 a year for the Yankees and collecting between 30 and 40 American League homers, he swung a 42 - ounce bat. He changed to a lighter bat in his declining years and was using a 36 - ouncer when he retired in 1951.

"If I were starting out in the big leagues today, I'd still swing a 42 - ounce bat," he said. "You can still hit home runs with a heavier bat if you have the power and the right swing."

DiMaggio, coach - at - large in the Yankee training camp here, has been invaluable to rookies with his tips.

"You have to be extremely careful not to offer too much advice," he said. "That would only confuse the youngster. Sometimes you spot a flaw in a boy's swing but you don't say anything to him because he's hitting the ball well. I don't believe in changing a hitter's stance unless his record shows he's never hit better than .220 or so."

Hit in Face By Puck, Gets $7,500

CHICAGO (AP)—A municipal court jury awarded Glenn Bridier, 18, of Niles, Ill., $7,500 damages Thursday, more than four years after he had been hit in the face by a puck at a hockey game.

The suit was brought against Chicato Black Hawks of the National League and their home rink, Chicago Stadium.

Harold Liebenson, Bridier's lawyer, contended the stadium was guilty of negligence in not fencing off a 16-foot area where Bridier sat when a flying puck broke a bone in his face.

Kidd Runs In N.Y. Saturday

TORONTO (CP)—Bruce Kidd faces his fourth test of the current U.S. indoor track season in New York Saturday when he defends his three-mile title in the National Amateur Athletic Union meet against Hungarian-born Sandor Iharos and John Gotneke of Baltimore.

Kidd, sensation of the indoor circuit last winter, has mustered only one win in three starts at two miles during the last six weeks at meets in Boston and New York. His time for the AAU run a year ago was 13:47.

The 18-year-old Toronto University student scored his first U.S. win of the season Friday at the New York Athletic Club meet, where he defeated Iharos and Laszlo Tabori in his best distance—the two miles — in a leisurely 8:54.2.

His showing at New York Saturday is expected to govern the events he enters at future U.S. meets, including Chicago next Friday and New York again a week later.

Unbeaten In Five Rounds

Toronto Rink Rated Hot Favorite

OWEN SOUND (CP)—Boyne Secord of Toronto's Tam O'Shanter Club, unbeaten after five rounds, remained a hot favorite today to take the Ontario curling championship.

The former Saskatchewan ace edged his biggest pre-tournament rival, the Murray Roberts quartet from Unionville, 8-6, in one of Thursday's three rounds and survived some early trouble against Don Varey of Brantford to win 12-7 in the evening.

The defeat was Roberts' first, however, and he still is in the running along with Bob Knippelberg of RCAF Ottawa. Knippelberg, beaten by Secord in Wednesday's opening draw, won three games Thursday and also has a 4-1 record.

Fifth, and still with a slim chance of winning via a playoff route, is Joe Gurowka of Dixie, who has won three games and lost two. Out of the running are be DiMartile of Welland (2-3), ary and Don Fawcett of Thornbury (1-4) and the winless Huntsville rink of Evans Jenkins.

In today's sixth round, starting at 9 a.m., it was Varey vs. Fawcett, Gurowka vs. Secord, DiMartile vs. Roberts and Knippelberg vs. Jenkins.

WILL PLAY OFF

Final round, scheduled for 2 p.m., pitted Roberts against Knippelberg, DiMartile against Jenkins, Varey against Gurowka and Fawcett against Secord. In the event of a tie, a playoff was slated to be held tonight.

Secord was trailing Varey 7-6 after eight ends but a big three on the ninth gave him the lead to stay and he wrapped it up with two in the 10th and one in the 11th.

Against Roberts, Secord was ahead 3-2 going into the sixth end but lost his chance for a four when Roberts drew just inches past the button for the tying shot.

On the seventh, however, Roberts went through the house on an attempted takeout. Secord was in for two and Roberts was heavy again with his second rock, leaving the door open for the former westerner to draw to the inner circle for three and take a lead he never relinquished.

Thursday's scores by rounds

Third—Roberts 12 Fawcett 6, Secord 12 DiMartile 6, Varey 11 Jenkins 5, Knippelberg 12 Gurowka 6.

Fourth—Secord 8 Roberts, 6, Gurowka 7 Jenkins 2, Knippelberg 8 Varey, 5, DiMartile 10 Fawcett 8.

Fifth—Knippelberg 11 DiMartile 8, Roberts 12 Jenkins 5, Gurowka 10 Fawcett 5, Secord 12 Varey 7.

The Belleville Pepsi's Booster Club has changed the name a little but anyway you look at it, it comes out bingo.

The groups will profit from the game. The Pepsi's and the fans.

It will be a share-the-wealth deal, with the JARCO winners getting half the money from the cards and the Pepsi's getting the other half. Games will be played

How about it fans?

Here's your chance to see a good hockey game and to take home some extra cash in the bargain.

Plans call for "JARCO" at all of the Pepsi's remaining games this season. Don't let the name fool you. If you like bingo, you'll like this game as well.

Geraldine Page Should Get Award for Part in Movie

By BOB THOMAS

So does the film industry's production code, which by now must be so shot full of holes as to be barely visible.

Sweet Bird of Youth was one of the more tawdry of the Tennessee Williams plays, and it remains much the same as written and directed for the screen by Richard Brooks. He has become an expert at these grim slices of American life, having made Blackboard Jungle, Cat on a Hot Tin Roof and Elmer Gantry.

Brooks got a bit overboard this time, as did Williams, in his portrayal of a southern political boss. As vigorously played by Ed Begley, Boss Finley makes Willie Stark of All the King's Men seem like a do-gooder. A malevolent big daddy, he rules his political domain with a fine, Fascist hand, slaps around his grown son and daughter and breaks his mistress' finger.

HE'S A LOSER

Paul Newman is The Hustler down south, only this time he's not playing pool. The ad line reads: "He used women the way some men use money." As in the pool match, he's a loser.

He tries to make a comeback as the chauffeur-nurse-lover of Alexandra Del Lago, a fading movie star who is addicted to vodka, hasheesh, "faceless young bodies" and self-pity. She drops him when her own comeback succeeds.

Sweet Bird would fly away to the stormy heaven of sick pix except for one element: Geraldine Page. She is magnificent from her first drunken groan to her last exit. She does a telephone scene that has Academy Award written all over it.

AT THE PARK — E. G. Marshall co-stars with Kirk Douglas in "Town Without Pity", opening Monday at the Park Theatre for its first Belleville and district showings. Film concerns the assault of a teenage girl by four soldiers. It is a United Artists release.

Scout Master Robert Bell and troop spent a very enjoyable evening on January 27th when they were invited to Trenton by the Scouts of 6 RD to participate in a lively game of hockey, which was a tie. As a result theyhave been invited for a return match some time in March.

It was suggested that a shower of "Get Well" cards be sent to Akela Marion Gelsthorpe, who has been ill for the past two weeks with the "flu", and sadly missed by the Cubs.

It is the wish of the Auxiliary that all talent money be sent at the earliest convenience of the members.

The meeting adjourned, and coffee and cookies were served.

2nd BELLEVILLE BOY SCOUT AUXILIARY

If you are "Coffee Breaker" the weather doesn't prevent you from enjoying your morning cup. This held true for many of the faithful followers of the morning break, on Friday, Feb. 16th, in the Parish Hall of Christ Church. The ladies of 2nd Belleville Boy Scout Auxiliary held, what has become a looked-for event, "The Coffee Break."

As the guest entered the cheerful and almost spring-like atmosphere (for the room was decorated in the yellow an green of 2nd Belleville colors), they were welcomed by president Mrs. H. Rainbird, Mrs. E. Grant, as acting treasurer, greeted them in her own way too. Each of the tables, to seat four, was covered with a dark green cloth decorated in yellow trim and centred with a carafe full of steaming hot coffee. Baskets of hot rolls and muffins with a choice of jam, jelly or marmalade were served to each guest.

Social convener, Mrs. O. Grey and her assistants, Mesdames R. Dafoe, A. Wagner, E. Ingraham, D. Fisher, G. Bongard, E. Parsons, J. Foster, J. Johnston, I. Wright, D. Cain, C. Woods, W. Yates deserve much credit for the smooth and prompt service.

The "Pantry Shelf" in charge of Mrs. J. Hodgson and Mrs. C. Lowther held a bountiful supply of tempting homemade pies, cakes, cookies, tarts, meat pies, sausage rolls, jams and pickles.

Mrs. G., Pringle kept the youngsters entertained in the nursery and gave them their "milk break".

For those working "Guys and Gals", hot soup and sandwiches were available during the noon hour.

Among the guests were representatives from 1st, 5th, 11th, 7th, and 15th Auxiliaries. It is most gratifying to have other groups showing their interest in someone else's projects.

Sadly missed by all was Akela Kemp who is convalescing in the hospital. We wish her a speedy recovery.

Peewee Week In Quebec!

By REMY D'ANJOU

QUEBEC (CP) — The play may be a bit amateurish and the players a little small, but there's nothing small or amateurish about the gate.

"This year's international Peewee hockey tournament is going to be a wild success," predicts tournament president Gerard Bolduc. He has good reason to be so optimistic.

Last year's tournament, one of the events of the Quebec Winter Carnival, packed the Quebec Coliseum for aweek and a standing-room-only crowd of 16,000 watched the championpionship game.

This is the kind of a crowd many National Hockey League teams wish they could get, and they use players considerably more than 12 years old.

The third annual Peewee tournament brings more than 2,000 kids on 54 teams to Quebec for a series of events including a "little American Hockey League" championship and "real native Canadian" championship.

BY AHL, INDIAN

The first is played for by Peewee teams from the cities that have teams in the professional American Hockey League, and the latter by three all - Indian teams from reservations in the provinces of Ontario, Quebec and Alberta.

The championship is played for by the two teams that win all their games during the week.

Teams get here on their own book, with parents or sponsoring community organizations paying the transportation bills, but in Quebec they are all taken in by families and live in homes away from home.

Sponsorship varies. The Ahuntsic Braves of northend Montreal, for example, got a complete set of sweaters, sticks, gloves and socks from the Montreal Canadiens of the NHL.

The fact that Normand Richard, son of retired Canadiens great Maurice (Rocket) Richard, who plays for the team probably has a lot to do with that. Normand, like his father, wears No. 9.

SELLS HIS COW

At the other extreme, an Indian farmer from Alberta sold his last cow last year and donated it to the reservation Peewee team so that the Roman Catholic chaplain of the reservation could go with the boys.

All rough play is strictly forbidden. Body-checking is not allowed, and all players have to wear a safety helmet.

Some cities really take it to heart. Richmond, Que., has declared Friday, March 2, a civic holiday "so that we can all go up to Quebec and cheer for our Peewees."

Montreal Out of Soccer

MONTREAL (CP) — Soccer promoter Joe Slyomovics said Thursday foot-dragging by the Dominion Football Association has forced him to cancel plans for entering his Montreal Concordia team in the International Soccer League this year.

Slyomovics said he has had to apply annually to the DFA for permission to compete in the International League. This year, he said, the DFA has delayed responding to the application for so long "it now is too late to set up the machinery for a team this season."

None of Material Added Up to Frightening Title

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—CBS Reports in its 60 - minute look Thursday night at the growing conservative movement in the United States handled a hot, controversial subject with kid gloves; and the result, unfortunately, was a bland, inconclusive program.

It concentrated on some of the well publicized organizations and individuals included in the phrase "right - wing." Robert Welch of the John Birch Society was shown angrily refusing to be interviewed. A group of Missouri "Minute Men" were seen on a practice guerrilla patrol, looking for Russian boats on the Mississippi River. D. Fred Schwarz of the Christian Anti-Communist Crusade was pictured lecturing on the dangers of communism and selling his literature to an audience of old folks.

But none of it added up to the promise of the program's title, Thunder on the Right, or showed a real conservative movement in the making. It concentrated on what were obviously small groups and passionately anti-Communist.

The program shed little light where illumination will be welcomed.

Defeat Moira Seniors, Juniors

Saints Make Playoffs

By BILL BURLEY

Last night was a big night for Quinte Juniors and Seniors; the bantams had a rough night. The juniors, after being defeated by 30 pts. by Moira before, slammed right back and built up an early lead which ended in a 54-34 victory for Quinte. This pushed the juniors up to second place and the right to enter the COSSA playoffs.

The Trojan bantams edged the Quinte team by one point to take the win 27-26.

SENIOR GAME

Quinte had to win this game to stay tied in first place with B.C.I.

Both Quinte and BCI go to Oshawa for the playoffs but there is one sticker. The first place team from Quinte district plays the second place team from the Lakeshore district and vice versa.

In the Saint-Trojan game; Quinte exploded in the first quarter and built up a lead of 21-2. The second was Quinte's insurance quarter as the breakers pottedin 28 points to push the score up to 49-12. The third quarter saw Quinte's second string up against the Moirans. The Trojans outscored the Saints by one.

The fourth was Moira's best quarter when they scored 18 points. But Quinte collected twenty-two and the game ended, a Quinte slaughter of 82-42.

The star and high scorer of the game was Wayne Gilroy with a sensational 33 pts. Jim Fair of Quinte followed up next with a 22. Dave Glenn of Moira came up with a high of 14 points.

Quinte and B.C.I. both will probably sponsor buses going to Oshawa, March 3rd. Put your name down to cheer both Belleville teams as they vie for first and second places in COSSA.

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Ron Delany said Thursday an injured achilles tendon will force him to miss the U.S. Amateur Athletic Union indoor championships and his showdown mile race with Jim Beatty in New York Saturday. The race between Beatty, the only man to ever run an indoor mile in less than four minutes, and Delany, who has won 34 straight indoor miles, was expected to be a feature of the meet.

At the Belle

"POCKETFUL OF MIRACLES" ROLLICKING FILM WITH BIG NAME CAST

"Pocketful of Miracles" is the newest movie-magic to arrive in Belleville, where it is continuing tonight and Saturday at the Belle Theatre.

Filmed in Panavision and Eastman Color, the comedy starts Glenn Ford, Bette Davis Hope Lange, Arthur O'Connell and co-stars Peter Falk, Thomas Mitchell, Edward Everett Horton and Mickey Shaughnessy. All this plus a host of favorites guest starring in this all-star, all-for-laughs caper by a Capra called Frank.

The man who gave us "A Hole In the Head" now offers this classic Damon Runyon yarn, played against the most celebrated state of mind, Broadway in the late thirties!

Here gangster Glenn Ford, girl friend Hope Lang and the screwiest bunch Frank Capra has ever gotten on the screen at one wonderful time, manage to transform a rag-bag of a peddler into the grandest society doll in New York. She's the legendary Apple Annie, and Bette Davis plays the part up to her heart, in her most unusual and unexpected characterization of a varied and distinguished career in films.

Frank Capra's "Pocketful of Miracles," in Color and Panavision, is playing tonight and Saturday at the Belle Theatre in Belleville. Children, 25c anytime. On Saturday matinee, attractions include five Colorfun Cartoons. "Pocketful of Miracles" begins at 2.35: 6.50 and 9.10.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) In desire to be helpful, you could create triangle situation, the eternal triangle created by jealousy. In plainer words, efforts to help could be misinterpreted. Avoid delicate situations.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21) Favorable lunar aspect to your sign indicates wonderful evening for gaiety, entertainment, romance. But be conservative when it comes to making promises, say, "I'll let you know!"

Leo (July 22 to August 21) Why push matters today, when you can wait for more favorable period, and they will just roll merrily along! Answer that question truthfully, and most of your problems vanish.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Excellent for meetings in connection with hobbies, business interests. Day for making contacts, not deals. Be patient, and you will accomplish more than you at first visualized.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Fine for seeing projects as a whole, including "project" of making marriage, family life a success. Try to correct your own faults, this could bring about greater happiness.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Tendency for others to tell "tales out of school." Remove yourself from any situation which could cause future embarrassment. Be polite, but firm in refusing to participate.

Aquaries (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Mars in your sign corresponds to greater activity, ambition, and to tendency toward carelessness. Check details. Tonight you could come across money-making idea.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) Like Gemini, you could find that idealistic actions are misinterpreted. Be specific, but do not permit others to discourage you from taking "journeys of the mind." Meditate.

If Today is Your Birthday—one of most significant years upcoming, with month of September highlighted. You may have sacrificed for belief last year, but this year could be the "payoff" period. Many qualities of poet, artist, actor evident in your Solar chart.

Bronze Cross To Be Awarded To Cub Master

OTTAWA (CP) — Governor-General Vanier, as chief Scout for Canada, announced Wednesday night that the Bronze Cross, highest award for heroism in the scouting movement, will be awarded posthumously to Leo Maynard Nickerson of Edmonton.

Mr. Nickerson, a Cub master was drowned in Lake Wabamun July 14 in an unsuccessful attempt to save three Cubs caught in a sudden storm. He earlier pulled Cub Herbie Allen to safety before going back in the water for the other three.

The awards list includes the names of 68 members of the scouting movement, some of whom will be invited to Ottawa later this year to receive medals and certificates from the Governor-General.

The Silver Acorn "for specially distinguished service" to the movement was awarded to C. C. Middlebro, honorary field commissioner in Owen Sound.

WIN SILVER CROSS

Among winners of Gilt Crosses for "gallantry with moderate risk," all as a result of water rescues, are Roger Charbonneau, 12, of Conwall, Bill Hughes, 13, Holtyre, and Kenneth Latimer, 12, Kingsville Ont.

Three of the four letters of commendation for meritorious conduct concern water rescues. They will go to John Doran, 13, and William Francis, 13, both of Prescott, Ont., and Ian McLurg, 16, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont. Charles Browning 16, Crediton, Ont. extinguished flames that engulfed his father.

Scouting officials who will receive the Medal of Merit for good services to scouting include Harold Wheeler, Simcoe, Ont.; William Arch, Niagara Falls, Ont.; and J. M. Farrell, Fort William.

The guest speaker was Mrs. Haven Smith, Nebraska, an A.C.W.W. vice-president. A special pageant with the characters in costume depicted the early days of this organization.

Mr. and Mrs. Sandford Hubble, Belleville, spent Sunday with Mrs. Janet Utman, Front Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Forde Stapley and family of Madoc Junction spent Sunday with Mrs. Cyrus Summers, Mill Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Bush spent a few days in Toronto and attended the funeral of her father, Mr. McCullough.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Bush and family attended on oyster supper at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Hoard in honor of the birthday anniversary of Mrs. Charles Hoard.

Mrs. Kenneth Myers will be hostess to the River Valley W.I. on March 1st. The members who journeyed to Toronto to attend the 65th anniversary luncheon will give the highlights of that event.

Mrs. Murray Myers is still a patient in the Belleville General Hospital but hopes to return home sometime next week.

The River Valley public school was closed on Monday, February 19th, thus giving the pupils an added holiday.

CAMPBELLFORD

Brotherhood Week Held by Rotary Club

CAMPBELLFORD — The Rev. Robert Nicholls of Plainville, was guest speaker at the "Brotherhood Week" meeting of the Campbellford Rotary Club on Monday.

In the prologue to his address, Mr. Nicholls said "we should be ashamed that it is necessary to proclaim a special week as 'Brotherhood Week.' Every week in every year should be brotherhood week if we observe the code of the Christian church and other agencies such as lodges and service clubs. We compliment ourselves that in Canada there are no major racial problems. Nevertheless, the greatest danger to our country is that born of intolerance and discrimination," he said. He went on to say that society is almost universally divided into stratas or plateaus, according to intellect, possessions or race. We embrace the principle of brotherhood but carefully avoid the practice of it.

CONGRESS IN CHARITY

"There is one progress we in our advanced world have neglected—progress in charity. The solution to the dilemma lies in the coming of the peoples of the world to a profound sense of the Fatherhood of God. God created all men to develop to their fullest capacities nurtured by His love. If we truly believe this principle of our faith, we shall naturally have a strong sense of brotherhood. Pride and resentment will not rule our acts, but rather a sense of humility born of adherence to Christian principles will solve all of our racial problems. The lines from South Pacific, 'You have to be taught before it's too late to hate everyone your relatives hate' are all too true."

In closing, the speaker quoted the Golden Rule as interpreted by Rev. L. P. Jack, "so live to elicit the best in thy neighbor, thereby infallibly eliciting the best in thyself."

The speaker was introduced by his father, Rotarian George Nicholls and thanked by past president Cliff Gibson.

Sunday School Lesson

No Adultery -- In Any Form

By ROY L. SMITH

Among the primitive Hebrews the Ten Commandments were known as the "Ten Words," the reason being that in their original form and in the original language, each commandment consisted of just two words.

It was as if Moses had said:

No stealing!

No lying!

No adultery!

There was a bluntness about the commands that made them extremely effective. They could not be misunderstood. There could be no evasions, definitions, side-stepping or apologies.

In the case of this week's lesson the command was perfectly plain. No one could possibly misunderstand its meaning. No one could evade the implications.

No Adultery!

There is a widespread disposition today to gloss over the offenders against this commandment.

The pathological exhibitionist who purveys her nakedness is called "an exotic dancer." The sex exhibits are called "night clubs," and the consumers of nakedness and suggestiveness are known as playboys and glamor girls. Even the prostitute is referred to as an adventuress or as "an emancipated woman."

It is one of the sad facts about the whole business that nudity is patronized by thousands of individuals who would never for a moment consent to allowing their sisters or daughters to engage in the dubious business.

It is one of the indisputable facts of history, that every nation that has played fast and loose with sex morals, has gone down in the political and social collapse that is inevitable. It is impossible to put a market price on sexual sins without being compelled to pay in terms of survival.

It is as if there were some divine and inescapable authority which says to the world, quite bluntly, "No adultery!"

Out from the fashionable barroom at one of the big hotels in our city, there came the strains of the magnificent hymn, "God Bless America." The voices that sang were a bit raucous, and the harmony could scarcely have passed at the Metropolitan. But at least there was volume!

A hurried look inside the barroom, the tables cluttered with bottles, presented an all too comman scene. Perhaps a couple of hundred individuals a few men with their wives, a few with ladies of convenience, and the stage occupied by more than half nude women.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for February 25: "The Clean Life", Exodus 20:14; Daniel 1; Matthew 5:27-30; Mark 7:14-23.

There was something so very incongruous about it all. Praying God's blessing on a section of the country that made female flesh a marketable commodity.

Meanwhile the noisy orchestra was trying to drawn out the opinion of God.

Jesus may not have had in mind anything like our contemporary marketing of female flesh, when he said, "If your right hand causes you to sin, cut it off ,and throw it away." But He was insisting upon the priority of cleanness, decency, and chastity, for which there are no substitutes.

In a day when the soul of a nation is being weighed in the balances, and when civilization is seeking for means of survival, clear thinking people will hold in high respect the ordinary virtues. The communists, for example, can ask for nothing better than that we destroy ourselves, and according to Marx's "scientific principles of history" that is exactly what we are going to do. And the destuction may come via adultery.

Baby Has No Status

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—I am 26 years old. I have been seeing this man over two years now. Eight months ago he left his wife to come live with me.

Before Christmas I gave birth to his child. He left his wife because she didn't care for sex and they quarrelled a lot. She refuses to give him a separation or divorce.

We are planning to leave the province and start a business of our own. What would you do in my case? Who's name should I use for the baby?—HOPEFUL.

DEAR HOPEFUL:—What do you want me to tell you to do? To pretend you are married and live in your fool's paradise ever afterward?

If "this man" would walk out on a woman he is legally married to, what makes you think he is yours for life? His wife still has first claim on him, and the only legal one. The baby has no status at all.

Hazen Argue Joins Liberal Party in House

Resigned Abruptly From NDP Party Sunday

OTTAWA (CP) — Hazen Argue, who was parliamentary leader of Canada's socialist party a week ago, is a Liberal today.

Last Saturday he participated in a Saskatchewan council meeting of the New Democratic Party in Regina. He conferred with NDP National Leader T. C. Douglas about the coming election campaign, Mr. Douglas says

Sunday he resigned abruptly from the NDP, charging it was financed and dominated by a clique of big labor leaders.

Friday he conferred briefly with Liberal Leader Pearson and a few hours later was welcomed publicly into the Liberal party. Mr. Pearson said Mr. Argue now subscribes to Liberal principles and policies.

SHAKE HANDS

Mr. Argue grinned broadly at a press conference Friday when Mr. Pearson said Mr. Argue had been accepted into the Liberal caucus without any qualifications—"in exactly the same (capacity) as any other member." He shook hands warmly with Mr. Pearson and with Senator John J. Connolly, president of the National Liberal Federation, and thanked them.

Mr. Pearson, however, was more sober-faced. When asked by photographers to pose with his arm around Mr. Argue, Mr. Pearson hesitated. He protested that Mr. Argue was to be no more a special MP than any other member of the Liberal caucus.

Questioned about Mr. Argue's past remarks in opposition to Liberal defence and agriculture policies, Mr. Pearson emphasized that Mr. Argue had decided "that he can support the principles and policies of the Liberal party, and work as a loyal member of the party."

Mr. Argue declared he had been offered no special inducement and asked for none—such as a cabinet portfolio if the Liberals are returned to power.

CITES FACTOR

The former CCF-NDP leader said that one of the factors prompting him to join the Liberal party was that its constitution is based on constituency organization. His principal complaint against the NDP was that its constitution put too much power in the hands of delegates sent to national conventions as representatives of trade unions.

Mr. Argue, the one-time leader, and Mr. Pearson, his new leader, held their press conference in the oak-panelled Liberal caucus room in the Centre Block on Parliament Hill. They sat at a table in front of a portrait of Mr. Pearson and flanked by bronze busts of former prime ministers Mackenzie King and Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Neither seemed able to recall who had first proposed in the affair which led to marriage. The banns, however, were writ-

LOWER-INCOME GROUPS GREET HOUSING PLAN

Program Announced By Premier Robarts

TORONTO (CP) — An announcement by Premier Roberts in the legislature Friday brought good news for both the housing industry and Ontario's lower-income groups.

Mr. Robarts introduced a wide-ranging plan to expand public and low-rental housing in the province. But he stressed the program will be undertaken largely on an experimental basis, and said further study would have to precede its full-scale adoption.

The announcement that there will be one housing authority for the Toronto Metropolitan area was enthusiastically received.

Metropolitan Chairman William Allen said the plan is the only effective way of dealing with the housing problem.

Toronto Mayor Nathan Phillips said the plan was the practical approach.

Metro Planning Commissioner Murray Jones called Mr. Robarts' announcement "wonderful news."

"If it means what I think it means this will enable us to attack housing from two major points," he said. "The first is that we want one body to be able to buy the land, plan the project, build it and run it, instead of having several different bodies controlling the different phases.

NEEDS FLEXIBILITY

"The second is we want greater flexibility in the type of thing we can do — such as renting existing housing."

The plan calls for the establishment of a Metropolitan Toronto housing authority with powers to negotiate, secure approvals, call tenders and construct

Negotiators Show Anger As Talks End

MONTREAL (CP)—Hopes of a negotiated settlement in the contract dispute between Canada's railways and their 110,000 non-operating employees went tumbling Friday in the wake of angry railway and union negotiators stalking from a conference room.

Frank Hall, veteran chief negotiator for the non-ops, announced shortly after leaving the railways' negotiating team that the contract talks had broken off and "other means" would be used to try to get a settlement.

This was seen as an obvious reference to a federal conciliation board—where the non-ops disputes have ended up for years.

Both parties said there had been no agreement reached on any of the union demands or the railways' counter-proposals.

A hastily drafted railway statement blamed the breakup on a union "ultimatum" that "could only result in economic strangulation to the railways." The 15 CLC-unions negotiating for the non-ops said it was caused by the "outrageously inadequate" company stand.

ASK JOB FREEZE

The unions presented their demands last Dec. 20, 11 days before the non-ops' contract expired. The demands included a virtual job "freeze," a 22-cent-an-hour wage increase and fringe benefits.

The non-ops, workers not involved in the actual running of trains, now earn an average of $1.91 an hour.

The railways' counter-proposals, made public only Friday after the talks collapsed, included an offer of severance pay to employees with more than eight but less than 20 years' seniority and a guarantee of "work and-or income" for 20-year-plus men.

They also proposed an indefinite wage increase, provided agreement was reached on work security, severance pay and other points.

A railway spokesman said the offer was hinged on a much wider seniority basis that would enable a man laid off from one job to move to another job without loss of seniority rights.

Snow Gets Heavier as Gale Moves East Through Ontario

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Snow blew into southern Ontario and western Quebec during the night and Saturday from an Ohio-centred storm that plugged rural roads and snarled city traffic.

The fall ranged from almost four inches in Toronto to six inches in Kitchener, but a stiff northeasterly wind piled up drifts of more than three feet on a deep base from a series of earlier storms.

The Maritime provinces and the St. Lawrence valley were in the path of the storm, pushed by winds up to 30 miles an hour, but most of the rest of Canada recorded clear, cold weather.

Almost four inches of snow in Toronto in 10 hours raised the total fall so far this month to 28.2 inches—the heaviest February fall since 1924, when 32 inches fell. The average February snowfall is 13.1 inches.

The storm dumped some four inches of snow on Sarnia and the fall was heavier as it moved east, piling six inches on Belleville.

While morning buses ran on schedule on the 40 miles between Toronto and Oshawa, the arterial 401 highway further east was hazardous in drifts. Some 30 big transport trucks on overnight runs pulled off the highway in a 40-mile stretch between Cobourg and Belleville to wait out the blowing snow.

The department of highways reported roads in southern Ontario mostly snow-covered or bare and icy. Morning visibility was rated poor to nil. Drifts of three feet choked roads on the northern fringes of Toronto, snowing in some commuters with Saturday jobs.

Clear but cold weather from the north was expected to move in behind the storm, dropping southern Ontario temperatures from a high of 20 degrees during the day to a low of 10 in western Ontario and in the zero range further east.

China Asks Britain, Russia Intervene in Viet Nam War

PEKING (Reuters) — Communist China today called on Russia and Britain to eliminate by peaceful means "the serious danger of war" in South Viet Nam which it accused the United States of fomenting. It said the present "state of affairs cannot be allowed to continue."

The call came in a Chinese foreign ministry statement, quoted by the New China news agency, which said that in China's view the co-chairmen of the 1954 Geneva conference which ended the war in Indo-China — Britain and Russia—should consult immediately "with the countries concerned" and take appropriate measures for peacefully ending the war threat.

The statement said the U.S. must "stop at once its armed intervention in South Viet Nam and immediately withdraw all its military personnel and equipment there."

The Kennedy administration, it said, has been "actively preparing to wage three kinds of wars: Nuclear, conventional and the 'special warfare' designed for coping with the national liberation movements."

It added that the current "armed U.S. imperialist intervention" in South Viet Nam came under the heading of "special warfare" waged by "special forces."

"If this new war scheme of U.S. imperialism should succeed in South Viet Nam, not only all peoples striving for freedom and independence will suffer, but the danger of wars of a bigger scale will be greatly increased. This is absolutely impermissible."

"The armed U.S. imperialist intervention and aggression in South Viet Nam constitutes a direct threat to the security of the democratic republic of Viet Nam (North Viet Nam). It also seriously affects the security of China and the peace of Asia. . .

"The war flames lit by U.S. imperialism singlehandedly in South Viet Nam are raging. The Chinese government and people cannot but express their grave concern at this. . .

"U.S. violations of the Geneva agreements, which have been going on since 1954, have developed to an extremely dangerous stage. This state of affairs cannot be allowed to continue."

Parents Protest Mass Strapping For Snowballing

SUDBURY (CP) — Irate parents have protested the mass strapping of more than 20 pupils in Grades V and VI at Adamsdale Public School.

The pupils—aged 10 and 11—were lined up in three rows Thursday afternoon and strapped for throwing snowballs.

There was one line for each grade and a third for any who had been strapped at school for any previous offence. The second offenders were given an extra whack on each hand.

E. G. (Ed) Higgins, public school superintendent, confirmed Friday that the strappings had taken place and issued a statement:

"A number of children were strapped as a result of direct disobedience of known rules with respect to snowballing at recess.

"In large schools there must be rules to protect welfare and safety of the children. These rules are ineffective unless they are consistently enforced. Regrettably, a situation arose when the rules were challenged and the staff took such action as they deemed wise to make sure there would be no recurrence."

Mr. Higgins said staff members told him this group of children had been warned repeatedly against throwing snow.

Fluorine Foes Sent Crank Letters After Son Died in Dentist's Chair

VANCOUVER (CP) — A father told a coroner's inquiry that after his three-year-old son died suddenly in a dentist's chair he was mailed anti-fluoridation pamphlets from the Pure Food Guild of British Columbia and anonymous crank letters from anti-fluoridationists.

After the testimony Thursday by William Tonner whose son Christopher died while under anaesthesia in the office of dentist Dr. T. R. Elliott Feb. 13, coroner Glen McDonald said mailing of the pamphlets was the act of a "despicable person."

He said he would hand the anonymous and crank letters to police, including one from Kingston, Ont., inquiring how much fluorine young Christopher had received.

Pure Foods Guild President Edward Moxey told reporters later that he had mailed the pamphlets to Mr. Tonner after reading of the boy's death.

Tonner, who said his son had received liquid fluorine every day to protect his teeth, quoted one letter as saying: "You and thousands of others are condemning your children to an early death by these ungodly methods."

Pathologist Dr. T. R. Harmon said an autopsy showed no buildup or trace of fluorine in the boy's vital organs. The boy had met an unnatural death while under general anaesthetic due to anoxia, a lack of oxygen in the blood. He could not explain why the child's heart had stopped suddenly.

The boy had been under general anaesthesia for 75 minutes while nine teeth were filled and two extracted, Dr. Elliott said. He testified the youngster's teeth had rotted from the inside, although the fluorine had apparently kept the outside in good condition.

Russia Awaits Replies by West To New Notes

CP from Reuters-AP

MOSCOW — Soviet officials today awaited an Anglo-American reply to Russia's renewed bid to open the forthcoming disarmament conference in Geneva at summit level.

The reply was expected to be another rejection of the Soviet summit proposal but much interest centred here on the wording and timing of the Anglo-American notes.

The interest was aroused by the new stern tone of the brisk East-West diplomatic exchange over procedures for the 18-country conference opening March 14.

The exchange opened earlier this month with a polite Anglo-American bid to open the conference at foreign ministers level.

Soviet Premier Khrushchev in turn presented his counter-proposal, also couched in polite terms, for a summit meeting as a curtain raiser to the United Nations-sponsored conference.

The United States and Britain subsequently rejected the Soviet counter-proposal but left the way open for heads-of-state participation in the conference at a later stage of the disarmament negotiations if developments warranted it.

Khrushchev replied to the allied rejection with his latest note which in much stronger terms declared that he was "grieved" by the "negative attitude" of President Kennedy and Prime Minister Macmillan.

The latest Soviet note, handed over in Washington and London Thursday, was followed Friday by a Soviet press attack on the U.S. state department for its speedy "rejection" of Khrushchev's renewed summit appeal.

The Soviet government newspaper Izvestia, edited by Khrushchev's son-in-law Alexei Adzhubei, claimed the state department rejected Thursday's note "without bothering to get acquainted" with it.

Glenn, Family Seek Seclusion Over Weekend

Tells Newsmen of Major Concern During Flight

CAPE CANAVERAL (AP)—Astronaut John Glenn sought seclusion today after being in the public eye for three months.

Friday he returned to Cape Canaveral where his Atlas rocket was launched Tuesday on its journey three times around the world in space.

As he stepped from the plane that brought him from Grand Turk Island, in the Bahamas, he was greeted by his wife Anna, his daughter, Lyn, 14 and his son David, 16.

President Kennedy then presented Glenn with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration Distinguished Service Medal.

"Our boosters may not be as large as some others," President Kennedy said, "but our men and women are."

After the ceremony Glenn and his family and a few guests retired to Hangar S for lunch. That is the same hanger where Glenn trained for the space flight.

Later, after the president had departed for a weekend at Palm Beach, Glenn told senators, congressmen and a tent nearly full of reporters about the only incident that caused him "major concern" during the entire flight.

On the third orbit ground control warned him not to jettison the braking rockets after they fired.

These are rockets which slow the spacecraft for its plunge to earth. They are at the bottom of the bell-shaped spaceship.

Immediately below the rocket package is the shield that protects the spacecraft and the space pilot from burning up in the enormous heat of re-entry into the earth's atmosphere.

LIGHT GIVES WARNING

The men below, placed on the alert by a warning light, felt that this heat shield might have come loose. The rocket package, held in place by metal straps, also could hold the heat shield in place until the danger period was over.

During re-entry "it became apparent something was tearing up on the heat shield end of the capsule," Glenn said, "because there were large pieces — anywhere from pieces as big as the end of your finger to pieces probably seven or eight inches in diameter—breaking off the edge of the capsule and coming back up past the window.

"Well, that obviously was the retro-package (braking rockets) breaking up . . . I thought at the time, however, that the retro package had already been jettisoned.

"So there were some moments of doubt whether the heat shield had been damaged and whether it might be tearing up itself and this—this could have been a bad day all the way around if this had been the case."

Monday, after his weekend with his family somewhere, Glenn will return to Washington for a motorcade at 11:15 a.m. from the White House to the Capitol. There he will address a joint session of the House of Representatives and the Senate.

Tuesday, he speaks to the House space committee at a critical time—when the space budget is submitted.

Man Goes to Court to Get Free From Over-Possessive Dog's Love

LONDON (AP) — After four years of faithful friendship thrust on him by a liquid-eyed black mongrel dog, John Shaw has had enough.

The trouble is, he told Wimbledon magistrate's court Friday, the dog isn't his.

"I'm fed up with its maniacal affection," said Shaw, 59, a locomotive engineer.

The dog, a nine-year-old cross-bred Labrador named Timothy, first became interested in Shaw's mongrel female. But it soon transferred its affection to Shaw.

"Then everywhere I went, Timothy went. Everytime I came out of the house, he was there. Everywhere I turned there he was waiting for me," said Shaw.

Shaw complained: "He followed me to work. He jumps into the locomotive with me. I've even missed work several times because of him.

"You know, I couldn't even go for a drink. As soon as he realized where I'd gone, Timothy would be sitting outside the bar waiting for me and howling."

It was jealousy that finally wrote finis to the friendship.

One day another dog followed Shaw. Timothy got annoyed and attacked the interloper. In the scuffle Shaw was knocked over and Timothy accidentally bit his fingers

"I know he didn't mean it", said Shaw. "He thinks far too much of me."

Shaw appealed to the magistrates, to order Timothy's owners to keep the dog under control.

The magistrates granted this request

Mrs. Lily Reeve, the mongrel's owner, said:

Miss Allison McEwen Named Director of Social Services At Belleville Hospital

The appointment of Miss Allison McEwen from the Children's Hospital in Montreal, as director of social service at Belleville General Hospital has been approved by members of the board of governors.

Starting salary for the position was set at $6,000 per annum. Miss McEwen's duties will commence April 1st.

The duties of a social worker at the hospital would be to maintain the continuity of patient care and to promote effective rehabilitation of patients so they may return as useful members of society, thus cutting down the incidence of readmission and of long stays in the hospital.

It is pointed out that doctors and nurses do not have the time available for the necessary interviewing to gain a complete picture of the patient and his needs. Also they are not prepared as are social workers, to analyze the patients needs and to utilize available resources to meet them.

It is felt that effective rehabilitation of the patient is essential for healthy useful community living and in the long term hospital view is an economically sound project.

Youth Remanded On Three Counts Of Car Theft

COBOURG, Ont. (CP) — Thomas Royce, 16, of St. Catharines, was remanded Friday on three counts of car theft following his arrest Thursday on Highway 401 near Toronto.

Royce was arrested after provincial police spotted a man driving a car reported stolen from Mervin Kinsman of Cavan, 10 miles southwest of Peterborough.

Police said a car stolen in St. Catharines was found Thursday outside the home of Philip Lubben of Dale, near here. They said Lubben's car later was found near Fraserville near the spot Kinsman's car was stolen.

Highways Dept. Patrols Assist 401 Motorists

Motorists stranded this winter on isolated sections of Highway 401 are being rescued by department of highways patrol cars. Over 1,300 calls for help have been answered so far this season. The patrols are part of a maintenance service on the mose isolated parts of 401 in areas around London Hamilton, Toronto, Port Hope and Kingston. This service enables the motorist in trouble to get to the nearest service station for gasoline or repairs.

The cars cover each section in each direction at frequent intervals. So far over 200 motorists have been given a gallon of gasoline each. Tow trucks have been called for 370 stranded vehicles and highway vehicles have carried out minor repairs to nearly 350 disabled automobiles. In two serious accidents first aid was given and in 16 known cases the patrol cars have driven for help. The patrols which normally make routine checks of the highways for winter damage, consist of trucks and station wagons. Among the emergency cases this year were the finding of 59 abandoned vehicles which were reported to the provincial police.

APPRECIATE SERVICE

Archie McKillop, department of highways maintenance engineer, Port Hope District, says: "Motorists tell us they appreciate the service and we get a kick out of being able to help." One of McKillop's crews came upon an accident recently, flagged down a doctor's car, called the provincial police and then helped clear the lane for traffic to pass.

In the London area maintenance engineer Ken Livingston has an average of eight calls for help a day. Last month his crews aided 250 stranded people. At one serious accident a driver was found in a state of shock. First aid was given, an ambulance called on the patrol car's two-way radio, police informed and finally the injured man placed on an improvised stretcher.

Not all the calls for help are so serious One patrol saw what they thought was an abandoned truck. They pulled over and shone a light into the cab. A driver sat up with a start. "What's the time?" he asked. "Four a.m.," he was told. "Then come gack on the next trip at six a.m. and wake me up again," said the driver.

The emergency maintenance patrols will continue through the winter until April when the improving weather will, it is hoped, cut back the schedules to the normal summer routine.

With the opening of the first service areas on Highway 401 this summer, to be followed by additional ones, the need for the services provided by these special patrols will gradually be reduced.

Room Occupancy Percentage Creeps Up Month by Month At Belleville General Hospital

During the month of January room occupancy edged up another few points to 122 per cent — a seven per cent increase over a year ago and 15 per cent over January of 1960.

The hospital has a rated occupancy of 220 beds but through utilization of corridor space and juggling of rooms a total of 282 beds are set up.

The list of urgent and elective cases awaiting admission to the hospital has increased to 375.

The cover-crowded condition of the hospital is being viewed with concern both by members of the hospital board and by the hospital medical association. At yesterday's meeting of the hospital board a letter from the medical association was read stressing the urgent need for more hospital beds.

PROGRAM HELD UP

At their January meeting board members voted for a reshuffling of certain administrative and other quarters to allow for the addition of a few extra beds in the hospital, but part of this program will now be held up.

One of the proposals was to transfer the nurses' lounge to the Ritchie Memorial residence, but the nurses' alumnae has asked that their decision be reconsidered, and the matter has been referred back to the property committee.

Yesterday board members voted approval for the purchase of $30,000 worth of hospital capital equipment. Major item authorized for purchase was an auto analyzer for the laboratory department at a cost of $9,218.

FORMULARY SYSTEM APPROVED

A formulary system for the hospital pharmacy department was approved by the board following explanation of its operation by hospital pharmacist Leo N. Fortin.

The formulary system is a program whereby the medical staff, working through the pharmacy therapeutics committee, evaluates, appraises and selects from among the numerous medicinal agents available those considered the most useful in patient care.

Hospital administrator Werner Daechsel noted that improvement of patient care was the most important aspect of the system, but the system to some extent also eliminates unnecessary duplication of stock.

Belleville General Hospital Invites Management Survey

Belleville General Hospital will be taking a leaf out of modern industry's book next week by inviting a team of consultants from the Ontario Hospital Association to review the hospital's organization and management. The study is expected to last three or four days.

Hospital Superintendent, Werner F. O. Daechsel, who invited the survey, said that Belleville General is the sixteenth hospital in Ontario to take advantage of the chance to have its administrative setup assessed by the Association's consultants. The Ontario Hospital Association, a voluntary organization of the nearly 250 hospitals in the Province, introduced this "administrative audit" program only last year as an additional service to its members.

"This is just another example of how the principles of progressive business management are being applied to modern hospital administration", said Mr. Daechsel. "It has become standard practice in big business to bring in outside consultants for periodic reviews of management operations. The Ontario Hospital Association's program now makes it possible for hospitals to do the same end with the same beneficial results".

Mr. Daeschel said that during their visit to Belleville, the Association consultants would be invited to meet with members of the hospital Board and Medical Staff as well as administrative personnel.

Accused Given Life Term on Murder Charge

WOODSTOCK (CP) — Walter Robert Clark, 27, Friday night was convicted of non - capital murder in the rifle-slaying Aug. 26 of John Wilfred Miners, 20, and sentenced to life imprisonment.

The jury, which returned the verdict after deliberating three hours, found the Norwich area tobacco worker not guilty of capital murder, with which he was originally charged.

The girl had testified earlier that Clark shot Miners with a .22-calibre rifle following a night of joyriding in the car. She said she and Miners were dozing in the back seat when Clark killed the youth.

Clark's face was expressionless when he heard the verdict and sentence. He had shown little emotion throughout the five - day trial.

HAZEN ARGUE

ten when Mr. Argue telephoned Mr. Pearson Friday morning. They met for 10 to 15 minutes before the Commons met at 11 a.m., and the caucus met to hear the banns without protest at 2 p.m.

Mr. Argue shied away from involving Ross Thatcher, Liberal provincial leader in Saskatchewan, as the matchmaker. Mr. Thatcher, a former CCF room mate of Mr. Argue in the days when M. J. Coldwell was national leader of the party, bolted from the CCF and joined the Liberals when he became dissatisfied with socialist theories.

Reporters asked what Mr. Argue's defection would mean for the Liberals in labor support.

HAS NO QUARREL

Mr. Pearson said Mr. Argue had no quarrel with labor, but his complaint was only with labor domination of the NDP. There had been no reaction from labor yet on Mr. Argue's support of the Liberal party.

Mr. Argue had advocated, as leader of the CCF-NDP, a policy of full parity for agricultural products prices. Did he stand by this, or has the Liberal party joined him? reporters asked.

Mr. Pearson noted simply that Mr. Argue had subscribed to Liberal principles and policy, and that the Liberal party's new agriculture platform would be outlined in a pamphlet to be issued soon.

One final point remained to be cleared up. Douglas Fisher (CCF-Port Arthur), chairman of the CCF-NDP caucus, had said Mr. Argue as parliamentary leader had received expenses amounting to $5,000 from party funds and knew that a large part of it came from union treasuries.

Mr. Argue thought it included the salary of a secretary, and said that his travel expenses totalled $906 between January and August last year. He had received $500, and the NDP still owed him $406. These did not include paying the bill for his airline credit card. It had amounted to $654

Former Premier Getting Ready For Retirement

TORONTO (CP) — Retirement for most people means that well-deserved rest which follows years of hard work and schedule-keeping.

But Hon. Leslie Frost is so busy in retirement from Ontario's premiership that he has given strict orders that no Queen's Park telephone calls are to be passed on to him.

"There are too many things to do and the days are too short," Mr. Frost said Friday. "This retiring—phew!"

Mr. Frost plans to resign his seat and leave active politics at the end of the current session of the legislature.

Officer Admits Slapping Rabbi After Arrest

TORONTO (CP) — A police sergeant admitted before a judicial inquiry Friday that Rabbi Morbert Leiner was slapped after his arrest Jan. 26.

Sergeant of Detectives Alvin Sproule said the rabbi, whose complaints of police brutality prompted the investigation, was slapped to subdue him.

Sgt. Sproule said that while the rabbi was being questioned about complaints of housebreaking and sex offences in the area in which he was arrested, he jumped to his feet "shouting and waving his arms."

"I slapped him across the lower part of his face," Sgt. Sproule said, "and he became quiet."

Earlier the inquiry had been told the rabbi had tried to bite a policeman while he was being taken to the station in a squad car.

RAPS POLICE

Questioning Sgt. Sproule Mr. Justice Dalton C. Wells said the police were not justified in arresting the rabbi when he refused to identify himself or answer questions.

Two plain - clothes policemen who had been in the area testified they had seen Rabbi Leiner walking along the street but had not interfered with him. Cost. William Smith said he did not bother the rabbi because he did not resemble the picture of the blond youth they were seeking.

The other officer, Const. John Taylor, watched from his own car while he was on special detail. "He did not look suspicious," Const. Taylor said.

Policewoman Margaret Strachan, who was at the scene of the arrest in another cruiser, said she did not hear any swearing.

"They don't use that type of language in front of me," she said, "and I'm sure they wouldn't use it front of a citizen."

C.A.S. Meets

Co-ordination of Welfare Agencies in City Urged

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Children's Aid Society was held at the public library on Thursday.

Mr. Bruce Kerr, the local director reported that while January was usually considered a month of high intake, such had not been the case this year and only four children had been admitted. At the end of January there were 155 children in ward care. Another young lady also had recently completed business training at the Ontario Business College and was now gainfully employed.

Mr. Kerr made mention of the number of groups and organizations with the city providing either health or welfare services. Despite the fact that each is doing a good job and making a real contribution to the well being of the community, each is functioning as a separate entity and there is little if any co-ordination of effort.

On occasion one organization will learn that several organizations are interested in a family and, of course, the goal of each is the same. He suggested that there was need for a local council of social and welfare agencies — a council which would embrace all service clubs, national health organizations, local welfare groups offering a service of any kind to the community. After considerable discussion the matter was referred to the incoming board for further consideration and action.

Final approval was given to the establishment of an educational trust fund to assist former wards of the society who are over 18 years of age to continue their education of trades training.

Mrs. E. E. Follwell reported on a recent meeting attended by fifty or more foster parents and said that the final meeting of the year was planned for the last week of April. Someone active in the child health or welfare field will be invited to speak and lead a discussion.

Mrs. A. S. Lewis mentioned that the annual meeting of the Society would be held early next month. The Most Rev. F. A. Marrocco, director of Catholic Charities of Toronto, will be the guest speaker.

Family Is Flying Back to Ireland To Give Sick Mother Nursing Care

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — A family of five made their final farewells to Canada Friday night.

Mark Carlin, a 36-year-old bricklayer, his wife Mary, 33, and their three children, Patrick, 9, Clare, 8, and Mar'', 6 left for their native Ireland by plane. Mary is incurably ill with multiple sclerosis.

They emigrated to Canada four years ago leaving their Northern Ireland home town of Newtownstewart where Mark and Mary grew up and married. Mark came first and, after saving the fare from his job as a steel erector at Prescott, Ont., sent for his wife and children.

A year ago, Mary was stricken with multiple sclerosis. Her husband told her last November she had the incurable disease and they made plans, on the doctor's advice, to return home to Ireland where she could be given the continual nursing care that Mark's wage as a bricklayer was unable to provide.

A fund to pay their fare was launched by the Peterborough Construction and Building Trades Council and within a short time was over-subscribed. The fare was paid and the remainder given the family as a gift.

DOCTOR CONVICTED

MANNHEIM, West Germany (AP)—A doctor was given a suspended four-month jail sentence Friday after he was convicted of having infected 18 persons with smallpox, two of whom had died. The charge was negligent homicide. The physician, Dr. Joseph Krump, also was ordered to contribute 1,000 marks ($250) toward cancer research. Dr. Krump did not get vaccinated before making a trip to India.

housing projects in the Metro area.

The over - all program is designed to halt the spread of city slums and to help those caught in a squeeze between high rents and low incomes.

The announcement by Premier Robarts outlined only a few concrete measures which could or will be implemented immediately. The premier promised at least some legislation before the House adjourns about Easter.

But he also listed a series of other measures which, if carried to completion, would bring added pressure on municipalities and others to push forward with their own programs for low - rental housing and urban redevelopment.

PROPOSES GRANTS

And the program includes an attempt to stimulate the industry itself by proposing research grants and educational fellowships, with the aim of bringing new ideas into the house-building field.

As an alternative to public housing, the government plans to offer grants this year to non-profit companies building housing for families and for the physically disabled.

And along the same line, it proposes to provide interim help in financing and technical advice for housing co - operatives which build single - family units.

CAS Sets up Fund to Aid Wards Continue Education

The local Children's Aid Society will welcome donations and bequests to a special fund to be known as the Continuing Education Fund which was established by the board of directors of the Society this week. To be operated under the direction of three trustees who will be appointed annually the fund will provide the means whereby former wards of the Society may continue their education. At the present time municipal maintenance in respect of wards of Children's Aid Societies ceases at eighteen.

All monies contributed to the fund will be invested in the form of investments such as are authorized for Canadian life insurance companies under the Insurance Act of Canada and the interest earned will be used for educational purposes.

Mrs. Jas. H. Forrester, president of the Society, said, "During the past five years more wards from our Society have graduated from high school, taken trades training, entered university, entered a nurses' training school taken business college training, than ever before in all the sixty-five or seventy years the Society has been in existence. The fund will, we would hope, ensure the means whereby we may continue to help our boys and girls. They are fine young people and worthy of every consideration".

Drifting Snow, High Winds Make Roads Very Heavy

Visibility was nil on most roads throughout the Quinte district this morning as some five inches of snow fell during the night.

Winds up to 20 miles per hour piled snow up in many side roads and streets and caused considerable drifting on the highways.

Traffic was slowed to a crawl on highway 401 between Cobourg and Belleville.

Cloverleafs were plugged with snow and motorists had considerable difficulty in getting onto 401.

Several transports fought a losing battle and pulled their rigs to the shoulder of the road. One transport left the double lane highway just east of Brighton and became bogged down in the median between the four lanes.

Many motorists became stranded at the Brighton cloverleaf as they attempted to enter the highway and 401 itself was practically blocked in the area for some distance by the heavily drifting snow.

However, as a result of the poor visibality and bad driving conditions, due to the high winds and blinding snow, Provincial Police have reported no accidents in the Bay of Quinte district.

They are reminding everyone to drive with added care and urging motorists to stay at home and not drive on the highways unless absolutely necessary.

SOME ROADS PLUGGED

At ten o'clock this morning it was snowng hard wth snowplows battling hard to clear main thoroughfares and the Wellington - Trenton highway.

The Picton - Belleville highway was heavily drifted in spots but traffic was moving slowly behind department plows. Drifting was particularly heavy in the Mountain View area.

Cross-drifting on the Mountain View - Wellington "town line" was heavy and in spots the road was "plugged".

The new Family Y.M.C.A. wil be built on a 6-acre site, on Victoria Avenue, just east of Herchimer. It will create new opportunities and new interests for thousands of youths, and to the family it will offer facilities where every member of each family could play under one roof, and at the same time.

Close to $300,000 has so far been pledged for this new Family Centre.

While the campaign fell short of its goal, nevertheless the main objective of providing a new building has been achieved. Another $75,000 would add substantially to facilities that could not be provided with the pledges to date.

The present building on Campbell Street will soon be put up for sale.

Three Plays Are Presented By Students of High School

TRENTON — Play night, '62 at Trenton High School saw teacher-directors branching out into serious productions and the student-cast coming through with almost - professional performances.

For melodramatic impact, "The Monkey's Paw", by W. Jacobs, took top honors. This play was directed by Miss Davidson and the cast included Hubert Campbell, Lorraine Farrar, Peter Bonter, John Hyatt and John Parsons.

"The Happy Journey" by Thorton Wilder was an ambitious venture away from traditional drawing room drama. Mr. G. Galbraith was the director and the excellent cast included Jean Kitchen, Daryl Lincoln, Chris Scott, Shirley Post, Ron Ferguson and Maria Filles.

"High School Daze" was the lightest and perhaps the best received of the three productions. Directors were Miss Binkley and Mrs. O'Donnell and the twist-happy teen-agers were played by Dorothy Payton, Poppy Trumbley, Tony Craig, Susan Lane and Wally MacDonald. "Mother" was Pat Irwin and the sub-teen was played by Chris Spencer.

Stage manager was Paul Henson; props were in charge of Margot Greer; makeup was by Barbara Easton and publicity and ads were handled by Douglas Sayles.

Notify Parents To Remove Son From School

TRENTON — The parents of a Trenton High School student, residents of Sidney township, were advised this week to take their teen-age son out of the school because of their failure to pay a $30-a-month tuition fee. The boy has not been at school since Wednesday.

Following official confirmation from Queen's Park that the non-resident minimum assessment for high school purposes had been hiked from around $3,400 to $6,400, all parents of out-of-town students who do not own property in town with the required $6,400 assessment, were notified that they must pay the set tuition fee or remove their children from the school.

High school principal W. J. Houston said yesterday that only one other case was under consideration at the moment. This involves a family living in Murray township. Three children from this family are attending the school, which would mean a $90-a-month fee. The children may attend the Northumberland District High School without charge. Mr. Houston said that some consideration was being given to the fact that one child in the family will no be able to take German classes in the Brighton area school. There is a possibility, he said, that the Northumberland school board might pay the tuition fee in this case.

Apartments For Old Folks Ready in May

TRENTON — Work on Trenton's first senior citizens' apartment block has progressed to the point where workmen are installing insulation, A. Gordon Davis, welfare administrator said yesterday.

The 11-unit building is expected to be ready for occupancy by May. Four large apartments, suitable for couples, and seven single apartments will be available.

Mr. Davis said that a list of persons wanting to rent apartments, compiled some time ago, would be disregarded, as many of these people may have moved away from town or found other accommodation.

Prospective tenants for the low-rental units have been advised to fill out applications at the welfare office in the town hall.

Retired Folks Find They Need Something New to Talk About

By THOMAS COLLINS

Most everybody who knows you will appreciate it if you will find something to talk about after you retire.

This is not my comment. It comes from a man and his wife who retired a couple of years ago. They retired with money ... a lot of it ... and went south to establish themselves in a new home in a blue-ribbon community.

Their experience, almost a classic in modern-day retirement practices, holds a lesson not so much for the retired rich as for the retired poor. The rich, after all, can lure friends with cocktails and food. The poor have only their charm.

"The last thing I would ever have thought of before retiring," says the rich man, "was that I would run out of anything to talk about and turn into a bore. But this happens to you, and you don't realize it until some time afterwards...."

He says he got his first hint that something was wrong with retired people by making friends with a couple of them.

DIDN'T INTEREST ANYBODY

"We were having parties and such, and my wife and I began to see that the two retired couples were a bit heavy. At our house or at other people's houses they sat around or stood around and talked a lot. But they didn't interest anybody. One night I asked my wife if maybe we were just as dull and didn't know it.

"We made it a point to see what the two couples were talking about.

"One of the couples was only half talking — the wife was keeping quiet while the husband droned away. Always about his old company. His old friends. His old triumphs. That was all he knew. He hadn't had a new thought or a new experience since the day he retired.

"It wasn't very interesting the first time. Nobody in the sunshine cares how you sold shoes back in the snow two years ago. But this old guy was running like a phonograph record ... over and over again ..."

The second couple was worse, but in a better way.

"The fellow and his wife had bought an older home in the community and were remodeling it. This apparently was the biggest thing since Columbus discovered America. Their kitchen was the cutest. The antiques they had picked up for the living room were an absolute steal. The carpenters, the painters, the plumbers — all the cheapest, and really marvellous. . . .

"A little of this goes a long way. And they had a lot of it. Everybody else has a house, too, and likes to think it's cute and marvellous, and naturally a steal.

"But this couple had nothing else to talk about. So they talked about their house — all the time."

JUST ABOUT AS BAD

So the rich man and his wife went home to analyze what they had been talking about. They concluded they had been just about as narrow.

"I had been talking about my old job, about moving south, about my old job, about our children, about moving south, about my old job, etc., etc. My wife, who had been talking to her friends for years about the trials and tribulations of taking care of me and my job, had lost her candy since I retired. And now she was talking about our children, about moving south, about our children, about moving south, etc., etc., etc..."

So the rich man and his wife set out deliberately to make themselves interesting to talk to. This is how they did it — they joined the public library and each began reading a book a week ... always a new book because it was a better conversation piece; the wife joined the League of Women Voters, the husband the local Republican Club; they jointly joined the Chamber of Commerce and got on a committee concerned with luring northern vacationists to the community; the husband volunteered to teach a Junior Achievement class, the wife volunteered to sew one morning a week for the Red Cross; both resolved that from here on they would talk about nothing that happened before last week.

"It worked, as simple as that," the wife says. "And in extroverting ourselves to find something fresh to talk abou we found activities that hav made our retirement fun."

French Renaissance?

A few brief years ago France was being written off as a waning star in the firmament of nations. De Gaulle returned to power. Today France is materially prosperous. Her extensive colonial empire has been converted into a community of self-governing countries. But she is still torn with internal strife. Latest, and most frightening, example of this discord was the rioting in Paris February 9, when eight persons were killed. Their funeral saw 100,000 march in protest. Was this a sign of France's basic strength, rather than her weakness? The New York Times appears to think so.

"There is a time machine," it says, "that seems to do tricks in Paris every now and then. It is as if the clocks, at some magician's wand, set themselves to other years. History presses in on the ancient city and thoughts go back to 1871, 1848 and 1789." The funeral demonstration, as often in the past, was a protest of the Left against the Right, says the Times, adding that "these great demonstrations in France often . . . . serve as a warning. There has been a stirring in the depths."

If this is true, it is long past due. The original February 9 demonstration was against the terrorism of the OAS, the secret army of the white residents of Algeria, which has extended its activities to France. Even the reports of kidnappings and explosions of plastic bombs in Paris, and other cities in France itself, apparently fail to convey in full measure the extent of this terrorism, and the apparent complicity or indifference of the police. For instance, a native of Algiers, Jack Romoli, emigrated to Paris and became a haberdasher. He received a demand from the secret army that he pay a 'tax" himself and collect similar taxes from others. He went to the police. An official told him: "If I were in your shoes I would pay up." Later a plastic bomb wrecked his shop. Still later he stamped out the fuse of a plastic bomb in his apartment. The police took an hour and 40 minutes to arrive. No wonder another bombing followed Beuve-Mary, the editor of Le Monde, twice had his home bombed. He taunted the OAS in open letters: "Why do you not aim straighter? My time-table is known, my habits have not changed, no gorilla shadows me. It would be an easy enterprise and, as you well know, would likely go unpunished."

Efforts have been made to brand the February 9 demonstration as the work of communists. That the communist-led General Confederation of Labor played a major rule in the demonstration is true, but the first call for it had been issued by socialist groups and by the Catholic Union. Eyewitness accounts leave little doubt that police brutality, and not radical agitation, was the basic reason why the demonstration produced bloody rioting.

Perhaps, though, France is on the threshold of a true renaissance. Of the demonstration at the funeral of the riot victims, the New York Times says: "By some accounts this was the greatest popular demonstration France has seen since the war. The explanation cannot lie simply in communist agitation with socialist co-operation. The people of Paris spoke with great eloquence in that silent and orderly funeral procession. It is too soon to know just what they were trying to say. Perhaps they did not quite know themselves. There was a deep unhappiness, a desire to protest, a sense that things cannot go on as in recent months."

A Correction

On Feb. 1, under the heading "Spirit of Adventure," The Ontario Intelligencer carried an editorial the first three sentences of which read:

"G. Arnold Hart, president of the Bank of Montreal, says that Canadians should meet the challenge of changing world trade patterns in a 'spirit of adventure.' All right, then, let's face up to the basic reason why John J. Phillips, general manager of Cockshutt Farm Equipment at Brantford, resigned as an officer and director of the company on Tuesday. Mr. Hart (this should have read Mr. Phillips as will be obvious from the context) says his resignation was caused by the fact that severance pay for a number of Cockshutt workers who will be without jobs will be below what he considers fair."

As we have noted, it was, of course, Mr. Phillips, and not Mr. Hart, who complained about the level of severance pay. Mr. Hart was only mentioned in the first sentence to draw attention to his advocacy of a "spirit of adventure," an advocacy which he made at another time, at another place, and which had not the slightest reference to the Cockshutt affair.

The Ontario Intelligencer regrets any inconvenience which may have been caused either Mr. Hart or Mr. Phillips by this error.

Ottawa Offbeat

Smart Propaganda Played Big Part in 1957 Election

BY RICHARD JACKSON
(from The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA — With practically all politicians of all parties busy campaigning, Allister Grosart, the Conservative national organizer, and one of the two "miracle men" of the 1957 and '58 elections, has been "revived" as a political "best seller."

Perhaps "revived" is the wrong way to put it, for ever since his astounding 208-seat Conservative sweep of '58, Grosart has been very much alive, keeping his organization geared close to a working campaign pitch.

It's just that since last Fall when Prime Minister Diefenbaker and Liberal Pearson headed out of the Capital to hit the hustings in what so obviously was the start of the '62 campaign, anything Grosart ever said or wrote about the fine art of electioneering has been studied with renewed interest.

Almost daily, week in and week out, month after month in the four years since '58 Grosart has conferred with the Prime Minister.

The pre-sessional oratorical blitz by Cabinet ministers of firing off more than 350 speeches across the country - a political process that has been continuing in only slightly lesser intensity - came as a result of these East Block skull sessions between John Diefenbaker and Allister Grosart.

• • •

ASSIST FROM UNCLE LOUIE

Grosart, the politicians are re-discovering, makes good — and probably profitable —reading.

In a "working paper" he prepared and read to a Maritime university political seminar Grosart has revealed that former Liberal Prime Minister St. Laurent in the '57 campaign, managed to do something for the Conservatives that they hadn't been able to do for themselves.

Kindly old "Uncle Louie" put it across — with an unsuspected behind-the-scenes assist from Grosart — that John Diefenbaker's Conservatives were not the Tory party of old.

Heres' how — as Grosart has explained it.

The big problem for the Conservatives in the '57 campaign, Grosart recounts, was that in the public mind the party was associated with Bay and St. James Streets and what the National Organizer has described as "stuffed-shirt politics."

The public then "had to be made to realize that this was not the same old Tory party that it had so got into the habit of defeating, but instead, something new."

This problem was solved for the Conservatives in a seven-minute speech by Mr. St. Laurent.

He also thought the public's attention should be drawn to the fact that this was not the same old Conservative Party, but a new force, and so "inadvertently underlined the basic idea we wanted to get across."

• • •

STRATEGIC ERROR

In that speech, the Liberal PM held up the one (full page) newspaper advertisement that the Conservatives had been able to afford on a national basis in '57, and pointed out that it spoke of "a Diefenbaker rather than a Conservative Government."

Punching home his point, "Uncle Louie" noted that the word "Conservative" was printed in eight point type while "Diefenbaker" was proclaimed in block letters.

(At this point in his "working paper," Grosart stressed that even eight point type, small as it is, was too large for his purposes, and that if he had had his way, six point type — just about as tiny as print can get and still be readable — would have been used.)

It only went to prove, "Uncle Louie" proclaimed from the campaign platform, that it was "not the old Conservatives but the new Diefenbaker party."

Grosart has said that he considered St. Laurent (as a Liberal) had boobed, because that was exactly what he, Grosart (as a Conservative), wanted the electorate to think.

To make it stick, Grosart sent out "Uncle Louie's" remarks on plain paper in unmarked envelopes to every Liberal candidate contesting the election . . . and to his delight, if not exactly his surprise he found a good many of the Grits took it as the official party line.

• • •

TRICKY:

They too, all unsuspecting, joined Grosart's propaganda and publicity campaign, helping, with good old "Uncle Louie," to proclaim that it was a brand "new" Conservative party, done with Bay Street "barons" and St. James Street "dons", and forever divorced from "stuffed-shirt politics."

Neat, what?

Many of the Liberal candidates went on "selling" the Grosart "line" right up to election day, discovering too late that they had been "had" by an almost wickedly sharp political publicist.

But in this "working paper" to the university seminar, Grosart had other wise words for politicians.

He makes no public relations drive on any special "select" or even "elite" segments of the population.

In his book there is no one group more important than any other, no coterie that can sway or influence others, no real, actual, so-called "opinion-makers."

Grosart put it this way:

"I put tremendous stock in the essential good sense of the Canadian electorate as a whole. And I dont' believe that any select level of public thinking could claim to have a superior consensus of opinion to that of eighteen million people."

Untidy Desk Is Defended

Brantford Expositor

There's one in every office: the fussy fellow who scolds you because your desk is piled high with papers and stuff and looks disorganized and untidy. (In reality, of course, it is a calculated disorder; you know where everything is—you hope.)

Anyway this type, who got his idea that all desk tops must be as clear and polished as a newly swept ice rink from some "efficiency" magazine, doesn't seem to have heard that it's an idle carpenter who hasn't got shavings around his bench.

I've just been straightening my desk
And piling papers neatly.
A full half hour has passed,
and now
I've tidied it completely.

You think I'm pleased to have this done?
I'm not. I find it irking.
For now, unhappily, I can
No longer put off working.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

'BE OF GOOD CHEER'

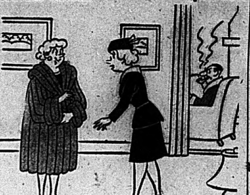
All life is transitory. This old planet of ours is billions of years old. Generations, nations, civilizations, have come and gone. Even the so-called eternal hills are not eternal. Many of them were under water millions of years ago. Erosion has ground many of them down from huge piles into mole hills.

We would be in utter despair over the transitory character of life were it not that all the world's principal religions teach that life here on earth is but a segment of something characterized by permanence. Some of life's injustices will be settled here, but many will have to wait for their final adjudication until they are brought before the High and Eternal Court. And we need always to remember that although good things of life are transitory, the evil things are the same. All good comes to an end. Evil and suffering come to an end also.

Our training is transitory; our destiny is eternal. This would seem to be the assurance which comes to us out of the word of God.

Life gets all mixed up at times, but perhaps it is intended to be that way. We learn many things of permanent — yes, even eternal value as we unravel life, and as we try to find our way through the labryinth.

There is purpose in it all. A good God made the universe and He still controls it. "Be of good cheer," were words often on the lips of Jesus.



"Bill and I talked it over first, then I went down and bought it anyway."

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

February 24th, 1942

Spring arrived in the city over the weekend in a garbage can. Taking in the family receptacle on Saturday morning, Walter Aselstine happened to look in the container, and to his amazement found a full grown robin huddled in the bottom. The bird was nearly frozen and could hardly move. The first feathered actor to appear on a Belleville stage, the robin was seen by a capacity house at the Princess Pats Symphonettes Orchestra concert on Sunday night at the McCarthy Theatre, where it was instrumental in securing an additional $12 for the Kinsmen Club "Milk for Britain Fund".

Only one auto marker for each vehicle in 1943 will be issued, Ontario government officials stated today, in order to conserve steel. The new licence plates, now being made at the Ontario Reformatory in Guelph, will be attached to the rear of the automobile.

Due to an unprecedented demand for cheese boxes during the winter months, it will be necessary to use green lumber for the headings of boxes this spring and summer according to cheese box manufacturers. Cheese boxes will cost factories 35 cents each this coming spring, it has been ruled by the Wartime Prices and Trades Board.

February 24th, 1932

This has been the most remarkable open winter for more than a generation or two and Mr. Harry Pearson of the Federal Department of Agriculture at Belleville states that damage wil be done to crops unless we have sufficient snow to protect the roots within the next two weeks. The earth is full of moisture and there will be danger unless we have snow.

Mr. Charles Peppin has retired as stationary engineer at the O.S.D. a position he assumed in the year 1899. He will be succeeded by Mr. Frank Chesher of this city.

Early this morning about a dozen Canada wild geese winged their way over the city on their way north.

His Honor J. F. Wills spent the weekend in Toronto.

Miss Mary Haggerty spent the weekend in Montreal.

Mr. Fred H Deacon of the Deacon Shirt Company is in Ottawa on business.

40 YEARS AGO

February 24th, 1922

The possibility of a building boom in Belleville when Spring opens, has seldom shown better prospects. Five houses have been built during the winter and four building permits have been issued so far this year. The permits cover four homes and also a grocery at a cost of $9,800. Work on the new Albert College will be resumed and tenders will be called for the new public school in Coleman Ward. At present a house shortage exists here and during the winter there was much doubling - up by families. There is no chance of real estate falling in value an there i sa possibility of an increase in rents. However, lumber prices have dropped 15 to 20 percent during the last year, and plumbing and heating supplies are following closely in reduced prices. The building contractors have now more work than they have had for a considerable time. Everyone is looking forward to a summer of remarkable prosperity for Belleville.

50 YEARS AGO

February 24th, 1912

The performance given by the Belleville Amateur Minstrels in the Carman Opera House was a most enjoyable affair. The House was filled and indeed it was a merry evening. The following composed the cast: Jack Mackie, interlocutor; George Dulmage, Jack Gordineer, Charlie Dickens and Ab Wheeler were the endmen. Thos in the chorus were: S. Burrows, Frank Brenton, J. Vincent Doyle, J. P. Pratt, Bruce Bottum, Russell Bell, Harvey Beatty Ridley Brotheres, W. Doyle, C. Peppin, Ernie Mouck, Arthur Lewis, Bob Gorman, F Lawrence, J. Boyd, G. Ashley, Harry McKay, H. Berkley, Byron Hudson, A. P. Allen, E. Slater, M. Gordon, W. J. McManus, W. J. Brown and A. Henthorn. The following composed the orchestra; J. Denmark, R. Blaind, J. Weese, F. Robinson, W. Holly, B. Haines, J. Allen, O. Brickman, H. Greenleaf, W. Hart, F. Andrews and Ed O'Rourke. The efficient manager of the show was Harr. McIninch. The jokes were red hot; every topic of local interest being "hit off" unmercifully. Vince Doyle sang, "Absence"; Bruce Bottom sang "Dreamy Eyes"; Jack Gordineer sang 'Cindy"; S. Burrows sang "Mandy Lee"; Charlie Dickens sang "Ive Been Looking For You"; J. P. Pratt sang the "Sentinel Asleep"; George Dulmage sang 'Aunt Jemima's Plaster"; little Russell Bell sang "Drowsy Babe"; Ab Wheeler sang "Excuse Me"; and Frank Brenton sang "Cotton Blossoms". The choruses were well rendered.

Toughening Bosses' Hides

Financial Post

Last year's most loathsome invasion of an employee's personal privacy by "modern" management was the debilitating and horrendously popular executive breakfast meeting. This now has given way to a new and equally soul-lacerating gimmick for sharpening up the executive edges.

We refer to the so-called Sensitivity Training Workshop — which is, in reality, an exercise in hide toughening, grey flannel thinking and oppressive togetherheid.

Staged at great expense by various U.S. management "laboratories" and by a few U.S. universities avid for public attention, the workshops are a series of group sessions wherein executives and wouldbe executives and would-be executives indulge in the frankest criticism of each other's personal traits — as though they were members of a Red Chinese commune in phony pursuit of perfection.

Briefly, it gives the participants—otherwise insulated by status, power and presumably respect — a chance to see themselves as others see them. And of such sandpapering it's thought is the very stuff of personality growth.

Dairy Surplus

Ottawa Citizen

The Dairy Farmers of Canada continues to press for a consumer subsidy of 14 cents to help reduce the mounting butter surplus. At the same time, the organization wants to maintain the producer's support price of 64 cents. Such a policy would cost the treasury millions without removing the incentive to over-production of butter. Encouragement of the sale of fluid milk might do more to help solve the present problems of the dairy industry.

To Your Good Health

Don't Eat 'Lean' Foods If You Want to Gain Weight

Dear Dr. Molner: I have been trying to gain weight. I'm 5 feet 4, weigh 97 pounds, and I'm 25 years old. Is there anything I can do? — Jane T.

According to the charts, you might well add about 20 pounds.

The first thing to do is — sit down and think!

Are you baisically healthy? No chronic infection, TB, anemia, hyperthyroidism? Any of these would be some other signs, too, of course — excessive fatigue, fever, weakness, nervousness, etc.

Second, take a look at your heridity. If you come from lean stock, your physical "blueprint" may call for small bone structure and light weight. If one or both of your parents are thin, and you closely resemble one or the other, you can expect to be thin, too. In such a case, gain what you can but don't expect too much.

Third, quite aside from heredity, there's the matter of eating (and exercise) habits. A good many stout people are that way because they were born into a family that had the habit of eating rich high-calorie foods. From childhood they took it for granted that that was the way to eat.

This reminds me of some Philadelphia people who years ago ate scrapple for breakfast. They met an outlander who had never even heard of scrapple, and the Philadelphians said in the most genuine surprise, "Then what do you eat for breakfast?"

So — inspect your habits, and if eating "lean" foods has been a habit with you, change!

I've also noticed that many lean people have quirks about various foods. This or that (they believe) "produces gas," or "colitis," constipation, cramps, pimples or whatnot.

True, some people can't tolerate certain foods, but there are more who just think they can't.

Fourth, what about physical habits? Are you one of those people who throw all your energies into everything you do? If so, you are using up calories needlessly. Do you get enough sleep? It's important. You should exercise enough to tone up your muscles and give you an appetite and you should learn to take life easier part of the time.

After a searching appraisal of the foregoing, you're likely to see some ways to gain weight.

Remember, there's nothing that will put on weight except eating more calories than you use up.

If you want to gain weight, copy the ways of hefty people: Eat butter, margarine, cream, more pastry desserts, gravies, thick soups. Nibble between meals: Candy, snacks, nuts, milk shakes, cookies.

Hearty eaters usually plow through dinner fairly rapidly. It's the thinnies who talk and dawdle and pick and let the food get cold — and take the edge off their appetites before they've cleaned their plates. Try getting more food into your stomach while you're still hungry. Good luck!

Dear Doctor: I have a hoarseness but no sore throat. How can I get rid of this? I have been affected with this hoarseness for about a month. — J.F.K.

Continuing hoarseness deserves inspection by your doctor without delay. There are innocent causes of it (some thickening of the vocal chords, etc.) but there are also dangerous causes of it, including cancer. In this latter, early treatment is essential. Delay means giving it a chance to spread and be deadly.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

COMPANIONSHIP

Sometimes I think that the world is pretty mad — and that it doesn't use its head at all. It seems to rely upon other heads too much. Of course I am speaking of the average man or woman who really makes up the world.

During my life span I have traveled many thousands of miles over a great country. I have seen all sorts of people. And everywhere you saw them striving and even fighting for money, fame, position — and a few of them even fighting for love, instead of deserving it and having it run into them.

And after these travels I have come to the simple conclusion that what this old world needs more than anything else — and the "world" means the average man or woman — is just ordinary trust and companionship.

Samuel Butler told of traveling on a train in Greece Opposite him was a Turk and his dog, and then the dog began to lick the face of Butler Then he crawled all over him Then the Turk began to talk to Butler, in perfect English, and they chatted to the end of the journey Even the dog was hungry for companionship And so he taught two big men to go after it

Why do folks — and nations — wear themselves out, irritate others and cause so much world unhappiness when by just becoming a little more trustworthy and companionable they could change the face of a day — or a life?

Companionship is mostly feeling, after all. You don't have to talk all the time, or at all. You just have to trust and understand a great deal And it takes intelligence but not education to understand!

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

On weekends, you see numbers of young soldiers in uniform, all shined up for the weekend pass, standing in the wrong places along the highways, respectfully looking for a lift.

They probably get more lifts than any other class of hitchhikers, including bank presidents. And rightly so. But they exhibit an extraordinary obtuseness in the tactics of hitch hiking. Where there is an intersection of highways, in such places as a motorist would have let his soldier out to pick up a lift in a new direction, you see the lads standing exactly where nobody, or hardly anybody, would risk stopping. With traffic on your tail, at fifty, sixty miles an hour, you have to see a soldier well ahead, to give you time to draw over to the shoulder. And certainly you don't want to halt on the curve of an intersection or cloverleaf.

A good quarter mile past an intersection, and standing well back of the pavement on the shoulder, was a soldier I picked up with immediate response to his soldierly thumb. When I commented on the habits of many of his fellow soldiers, he said:

"Ah, I'm infantry! Those other characters are Signal Corps, Army Service, Remy. They're indoor types. It takes the infantry to march a couple of hundred yards to a wide place in the road."

A Lift For Living

Man Often Own Worst Enemy

By DR. RALPH W. SOCKMAN

In October 1842 Emerson entered in his journal this sentence "Henry Thoreau made last night, the fine remark that as long as a man stands in his own way, everything seems to be in his way."

How true that is! One of the tragic blunders of living is to blame others for blocking our path, when in reality we are standing in our own way. We complain that our competitors are crowding us, or that fate is against us, when the fault is within ourselves.

Sometimes we hear it said of a person that he is his own worst enemy. Such a statement suggests to our minds the drinker, perhaps, who — with all his engaging social qualities and winning ways — lacks the self-control to hold himself steady. While others are for him, he blocks his own road. But this blunder of standing in one's own way is far broader than such cases. It is an error of all those who make life needlessly hard for themselves. It hinders a man's progress with his fellow men. It may even halt his approach to God.

One of the most vivid illustrations of this is given in the Genesis story of Jacob. The general outlines of Jacob's career are familiar, no doubt, to all of us. We remember how he deceived his father and cheated his brother Esau out of the latter's birthright. We recall his flight for safety and his marriages to Leah and Rachel. In partnership with his father-in-law, Laban, Jacob grew rich. But his cleverness again got him into trouble, and he tried to leave the land of Laban with his ill-gotten gains. He was overtaken by his father-in-law, a settlement was reached and a covenant was signed.

HE WAITED ALONE

Then he set out to return to the land of his fathers. Word was brought to him that Esau was approaching to meet him. Jacob, of course, expected trouble from the brother he had wronged. He tried to get his loved ones out of the danger zone by sending them away from his own camp. Having disposed of those dear to him, he had to wait in the darkness for the events which morning would bring.

During those night hours Jacob had to endure that which is hardest for an active man. He simply had to stand and wait. In that shadowy solitude something happened. The record says: "And Jacob was left alone; and there wrestled a man with him until the breaking of the day." Who was this unnamed wrestler? It was no other human being, for Jacob was alone. No, Jacob, who had outwitted every adversary, was now struggling with one who would not let him go.

Call that nameless wrestler the angel of the Lord, or merely Jacob's better self — the fact is the same. Jacob had at last come face to face with the truth that his way was being blocked, not by his brother Esau, nor by his father-in-law Laban, nor by any other human being, but by himself. He had finally discovered that he was standing in his own way. And out of that discovery came the transformation of his name and personality, from Jacob to Israel, for in the language of Genesis: "as a prince he was henceforth to have power with God and with men."

UNAWARE OF OUR MOODS

This experience of misty antiquity is as modern as our daily paper. Consider this condition of standing in our own way. For one thing, a person may be blocking the way to himself. In referring to the Prodigal Son, Jesus used the expression: "When he came to himself." Those words imply that a person is not always quite himself. We are aware of such moods at times, but there are other times when we are unaware of our moods.

Chesterton tells the whimsical story of the architect who was annoyed at the sight of an ugly house which he passed each day on his way to work. To escape the irritating sight, he bought the house and moved into it. By living in it, he avoided looking at it.

So it is with man's own nature. By living too closely within himself, a person may avoid looking at himself. He comes to take it for granted that he knows his own mind, yet he does not. Thus he may cease to see some of the unpleasant aspects of himself, and also some of the undeveloped possibilities of his own nature.

Also, by standing in our own way we close the gate to God, for God "dwelleth with him who is of a humble and contrite heart." We may be too full of ourselves to let the Lord in. He who is "always looking out for Number One" misses the Holy One.

Still Master High Fashion

PARIS (AP) — Balenciaga proved in his fashion showing to the press Friday that he is still undisputed master of high fashion.

For daytime — in this last fashion showing of the Paris season—he gave women smooth, wide shoulders, tiny, high busts and loost, high waists. Pretty legs could be seen in easy skirts which stopped just below the knee.

Smooth straight dresses with cap sleeves were topped by wide straight coats sleek as narrow cloaks.

For cocktail time and evening Balenciaga allowed himself some warm spring fancy, with capes, tight sheaths, and plenty of ruffles which made models like 18th. and 19th-century period pieces.

Daytime suits had wide three-quarter kimono sleeves, tracing the form in front but leaving it loose in back. Jackets tended to be slightly longer in back than in front, reaching just below the waist. Skirts were loose, often fuller in front with a deep, wide unpressed pleat, which gave the impression of a double skirt.

Shoes were a surprise. They banished the needle heel, replacing it with a three -inch model about half an inch in diameter.

Afternoon dresses introduced draped backs and bolero capes. For cocktail dresses Balenciaga favored big sashes, one in black taffeta which served as belt for a dress under a kelly-green coat and peeked out at the waist.

Pentecostal Church Sees Graham Film

TWEED — "Decade of Decision" the most recent film produced by the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association was shown in Tweed Pentecostal Church, on February 13th. This 45 minute film gave this audience for the first time, a behind the scenes account of the spiritual crusades which God is using to stir whole continents.

The film showed the humble beginning of Billy Graham's ministry in a tent in Los Angeles going on to portray the largest stadiums in the world packed to record breaking capacity.

"Decade of Decision" ended with Billy Graham having prayer with President Kennedy in Washington D.C.

Mr. Glen Turner, the Toronto representative of the association, spoke of how God is using the team in South America at the present time with capacity crowds and hundreds of first-time decisions for Jesus Christ.

The pastor of Tweed Pentecostal Church thanked Mr. Turner for bringing such a wonderful film to this community. He also thanked the large audience for making a special effort to attend this first showing of "Decade of Decision" in this area.

Christ Church ABWA Sponsors Delightful Tea

On Thursday afternoon the Woman's Auxiliary Afternoon Branch of Christ Church sponsored a delightful afternoon tea in the parish hall with the hostesses, Mrs. H. Pitt, and Mrs. G. G. Wright circulating among the guests greeting them and generally making them feel at home.

TEA TABLE

The long tea table, backed by pastel-green walls, was a lovely picture with its white damask cloth, and centrepiece of yellow and white 'mums flanked by tall yellow candles in crystal containers, and the gleaming silver services at each end. The little guest tables, covered with white cloths and centred by slim glass vases containing a single yellow 'mum and a tiny spray of green, carried out the springtime theme, while large white baskets of multi-colored 'mums and pastel gladioli sprays highlighted several strategic points around the spacious auditorium.

Those who presided at the tea table were: Mrs. Everett P. Smith and Mrs. J. B. Creeggan; Mrs. P. Welch and Mrs. W. Kemptson; while those who served were, Mesdames, G. Livingston; J. Wright; R. Wallbridge; E. Ostrom; R. Woodcock; L. Hall; G. Diment; A. G. Reid; A. Swain; C. Fuzzen and J. Miles.

Engaged in replenishing the teapots, Mrs. J. Frith and Mrs. W. J. Philip, replenishing the plates, Mrs. W. McLaughlin, and Mrs. E. Orser with Mrs. W. Heard making the tea. Serving in the kitchen, Mrs. D. Stewart, Mrs. F. Cook, and Mrs. R. R. Godden.

Mrs. G. O'Brien and Mrs. R. H. Godden were the conveners.

ATTRACTIVE BOOTH

Around the room were the various booths, the homecooking, convened by Mrs. J. Chapman, assisted by Mrs. J. C. Hayes, Mrs. Gist, and Miss B. Thomas, displayed the fine array of pies, tarts, fruit loaves, bread and rolls, deserts, jams, candies, nuts and bolts, angel food cakes which were a treat to the eyes with their beautiful icings, and a square cake especially decorated and donated for the occasion.

Another attraction was that of the fancy goods, in charge of Mrs. H. Wright, Mrs. E. Waterhouse, and Mrs. G. Brown, with its lovely display of aprons and many designs and materials; embroidered pillow cases; luncheon cloths; some with crochet edges; dainty handkerchiefs; handknitted baby sets; children's aprons; dresses; flanelette pyjamas, and overall and many other useful articles.

VARIETY OF ODDS AND ENDS

On the variety table was a host of odds and ends from comic books, stuffed toys; jewellery, to attractive quilts in various designs done by the Foxboro branch of the the W.A. and the Afternoon Branch of Christ Church. Miss Florence Ayling, Miss M. Gerow were in charge of these.

Much credit is due to the untiring efforts of the conveners, to the members who worked so faithfully in its preparation, which culminated in such a fine success, and to Mrs. H. Pitt for the publicity.

PARTHENON, ageless example of great architecture, crowns stark stone outcropping known as the Acropolis in heart of Athens. Structure dates to Golden Age of Greece, nearly 2,500 years ago.

Going Places

Unmatched Acropolis Recalls Grandeur of Ancient Greece

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

Athens, Greece — If you have any ideas about coming here to do the "Never on Sunday" bit, lazing away the afternoons in quaint tavernas where swarthy peasants drown their timeless sorrows in ouzo, snapping their fingers and smashing glasses at five drachmas a smash while dancing sensuously to a bouzoukia ensemble, you're probably going to be disappointed.

At least we were. We spent three days haunting Athens' ancient Placa section and the waterfront bistros of Piraeus looking for such places. The best we could come up with has a jazzy night club where high society wriggled to the strains of the "Never on Sunday Cha-Cha-Cha" with marimba and maracas accompaniment and no bouzoukia.

There we sat in wonder with one of Greece's leading travel agents. He was politely drowning his sorrows in ouzo while wishing we weren't travel writers looking for local color — whatever that is — so he could drown them in Scotch, which he prefers.

ONLY IN MOVIES

"You know what the bouzoukia is?" he demanded. "It's strictly a home-made, country style guitar. If you pass through a small town on a Sunday — never on Saturday — when a wedding feast is going on, you might see one brought out. But a whole band of them in a water front taverna? Only in the movies, never in real life-"

The inevitable result of the movie's popularity, our informant confided, was that a few wily night club operators dusted off bouzoukias in the cellars of their ancestral farmsteads. They now feature them in very untypical joints with plush drapes and velvet ropes, at considerably higher rates than five drachmas a smash.

Fortunately for our tourist dollar, there is a great deal more, and more worthwhile, to see in this ancient and lovely city that in 80 short years, four centuries before Christ, gave the world treasures of the eye, mind and spirit that have never been surpassed.

There is no story about Athens without the story of the Acropolis, the massive outcropping of rock high above the city upon which was built the complex of temples that symbolizes ancient Greek civilization. In the eyes of many, it contains the greatest remaining example of pre-Christian accomplishment in the world.

The Parthenon is the least well preserved but largest of the three temples on the rock. Comparatively little of it remains today, but it is apparent even to amateurs that it is close to being the most perfect work of architecture in history.

No amount of study by archaelologists has ever revealed the secret of Pericles' genius which softened straight lines into curved ones, varied the heights of and distances between columns, and came up with an exquisitely harmonious whole that through the centuries has been copied all over the world, but never duplicated.

FAMED FOR LIGHT

Only nature surpasses it, and right on the Acropolis, Athens is famed for its light, a luminescent quality in the air that sharpens and intensifies the shapes and colors of all the eye falls upon. Nowhere does it fall upon so much as from this crown of pagan stone in the centre of Athens, once the centre of the civilized world.

On one side Athens spreads itself around the hillsides, typical white Mediterranean architecture of the homes glowing an incredible gold in the afternoon sun. On the other side the eye takes in the Rock of St. Paul, where Saul of Tarsus preached in 53 A.D., the same rock on which Socrates was condemned to drink the hemlock. Beyond is the Tnyx, another rock that was the world's first seat of democracy. In the distance lies the Bay of Salamis in the Aegean where Xerxes and his Persians were routed. It is deceptively calm beneath its roof of sun-patched clouds.

Under the influence of this sweeping panorama, one of the world's most magnificent views, it is not difficult to imagine how its beauty and serenity gave life to some of man's greatest works — and, for that matter, to some of his wildest pagan theologies.

These incongruous memorials to a civilization 2,500 years old still stand throughout the modern city of Athens. Beneath the Acropolis is the theatre of Dionysius, a perfectly preserved stone amphitheatre where the drama and the comedy were born. On the front row of stone seats are engraved the names of dignitaries for whom they were reserved. From here they watched the first performances of Aristophanes and Aeschylus, still enacted in identical theatres throughout the world today.

Women's Institute

ELDORADO W.I.

ELDORADO — The Eldorado and Bannockburn Women's Institute held their February meeting at the home of Mrs. Ivan Sine with a fair number of members also some visitors present.

Mrs. Clayton Blackburn opened the meeting and Mrs. Harold Chambers read the minutes of the previous meeting, also the correspondence. Business was dealt with and it was decided to donate $5 toward the public speaking contest. Institute members received an invitation to attend the Madoc Institute meeting. Mrs. Ken Bateman, Mrs. Beryle Carman, Mrs. Frank Palmer and Mrs. Floyd Blackburn are on the nominating committee.

The March meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Clayton Blackburn with the girls club in charge with Mrs. Cecil Blackburn as convener.

The topic for this meeting was public relations and it was pointed out that there are many benefits in the church and in the organized groups through public relations. Mrs. Blackburn read an amusing poem entitled "A Farmer Had a Mule".

Lunch was served by the hostess and her assistants, after which a social half hour was enjoyed.

Readers' Saturday Column

by Mary Moore

Question: I am co-hostess of a baby shower to be held on Sunday from 2 until 6 o'clock. Could you give several ideas for lunch - Margaret C.

Answer: In making up this lunch menu I am assuming the baby has not yet arrived. Make dainty sandwiches with colorful fillings and use pink and blue colored bread. You will have to order this in advance from the bakery. Likewise make dainty cup cakes and frost them with pink and blue and sprinkle them with pink and blue tinted cocoanut. If you like this theme provide pink and blue mint wafers. The flowers could be a small arrangement of pink carnations and blue iris in a little china cradle.

Question: I wonder if you have a recipe for "Air Buns" - they are so light and white. I believe there is some vinegar added to the recipe - V. E. G.

Answer: Your request recalled a similar one of several years ago. At that time when this request came it was for Feather Buns and I asked our readers for it and received hundreds. The one that follows is called Air or Feather Buns and calls for lemon juice - not vinegar.

FEATHER BUNS

(sometimes called "Air" Buns)

½ cup lukewarm water; 1 envelope granular yeast; 1 teaspoon granulated sugar; 2/3 cup water; 3 tablespoons sugar; 1 teaspoon salt; ¼ cup shortening; 1 teaspoon lemon juice; 1 egg, well beaten; 3 cups all-purpose flour (half may be whole wheat or graham flour); ¼ teaspoon mace (optional.

Combine water, sugar, salt and shortening and heat (do not boil), stirring constantly until sugar and salt are dissolved and shortening melted. Cool to lukewarm. Measure the ½ cup lukewarm water into large bowl, add the 1 teaspoon sugar and stir until dissolved, then sprinkle over it the yeast and let stand 10 minutes. Next stir well and add the sugar-shortening mixture and stir in lemon juice and beaten egg. Sift 2 cups of flour and mace and stir into yeast mixture. Gradually work in other cup of flour to make a soft dough. Grease top; cover and stand in warm place until doubled and light. Punch down and spoon rounded tablespoons of dough into greased muffin pans, filling about half full. Grease tops, cover and let rise again until very light and doubled. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. for 20 minutes.

Dinner Menu

SATURDAY

Baked Pork Chops with Sweet and Sour Sauce; Noodles; Buttered Beets; Tossed Lettuce, Radish, Green Onion and Parsley Salad with Boiled Dressing; Egg Nog Chiffon Pie (see Friday); Tea.

Question: We have been asked to cater for a luncheon for 75 consisting of juice, chicken in a cream sauce with whole mushrooms, rice with pimiento and green peppers, frozen peas and dessert. Would you please send me recipe for the chicken dish - Mrs. Verna L.

ANSWER:

CHICKEN A LA KING

(for 75)

3 lbs. butter or margarine; 6 cups flour; 3 tablespoons salt; 2¼ teaspoons pepper; 16 cups chicken stock; 8 cups milk; 8 cups cream (10% will do) 12 cups diced cooked chicken; 4 cups mushrooms sauteed in butter or margarine; 3 cups cut-up pimientos; 18 hard-cooked eggs, diced.

Melt butter or margarine remove from heat. Blend in flour, salt and pepper. Slowly stir in chicken stock, milk and cream which have been heated together. Return to heat and boil 1 minute, stirring constantly. Stir in chicken and mushrooms. Continue cooking until heated through. Just before serving, carefully add pimientos and hard-cooked eggs. Serve in patty shells or on tea biscuits.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Douglas K. — He should go to night school and learn to read.

Mr. J.K. — I'm too old now. I'll get by as I always have.

• • •

Douglas K. — My dad is 71. Born in Scotland, he worked in the coal mines there from his childhood days on, and had very little schooling. In this country he went right into a mining job in Pennsylvania, married and raised a family. Now he's been retired and idle for ten years. He's in comfortable financial circumstances, thanks to the fuel company he owns. But he's pretty uncomfortable, otherwise, for one reason. He can't read or write.

Oh, he knows the rudiments. He managed to squeak through the literacy tests for voting. But he must ask me or one of my children to read and write things for him. I tell him he can still learn. He thinks it's too late.

• • •

Mr. J.K. — Book learning is for young minds. When I was young I was sent to work instead of to school. All I managed to do was pick up a little figuring and the ABC. After that I got by with the help of my late wife. She finished eight grades. And up to now I can read my mail and answer it by getting Doug and my grandchildren to help me out.

Why should I take up a seat in the night school? I'd rather leave it for some young person who has his life ahead of him and will use the education. I guess I'd have a more interesting life now if I could enjoy a newspaper or a magazine. But my head feels too thick for new tricks.

• • •

The Council: Lose not another precious day, Mr. K., telling yourself that your age will prevent you from learning new skills! Illness might, but obviously you're in the best of health. The good news is that the human brain can keep buzzing along until blocked, not by age, but by disuse.

The factors which prevent anyone, old or young, from absorbing knowledge are usually emotional. (Let's leave the physical causes out of this discussion. We can't help much there. Besides, Mr. K's reasons aren't disease or injury. They're resignation and weariness. Even an 18-year-old will fail to learn if, for example he's bowed down with fear, worry and depression. But when a septuagenarian is a bit slow on the pickup, he (and others) attribute it to reduced mental acuity. Bosh! Something emotional is getting in his way, that's all. The studies should continue, while psychological counseling attempts to dissolve the interference.

We support Douglas in his eagerness to get his father to a school, where Mr. K. can end his dependency upon others, including young grandchildren. Here's a self-made, proud gentleman, standing on his own two feet in every department except the intellectual. It's catch-up time now.

Get back into the swing, Mr. K.! No need to call it a day at 71. The papers reported a man who, at 85, has gone through two retirements and is planning a third. Get over the literacy hurdle, and who knows? Then years from now you may be consulting us as to what to major in at college.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald James H. Bryans are pictured following their recent marriage in the Christian and Missionary Alliance Church, Belleville. (Photo by William E. Riley, Belleville.)

Tall white standards of white chrysanthemums and salmon-pink gladioli, interspersed with ferns, adorned the chancel rail and white satin bows, centred by white chrysanthemums, designated the guest pews on Saturday, February 17th, at 3.00 p.m. in the Christian and Missionary Alliance Church, Belleville, for a lovely wedding when Grace Emily Veley, of Belleville, daughter of Mrs. Milton Veley of Belleville and the late Mr. Veley, became the bride of Mr Donald James Harold Bryans, of Chatsworth, R.R. 4, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bryans. The Reverend Sackville Palmer, pastor of the church, officiated in the double-ring ceremony.

Mr. Wilbur Leonard, church organist, provided the traditional wedding music, and accompanied the soloist, Mr. James MacKay, in his rendition of "Through the Years," "The Wedding Prayer," and "I Love You Truly."

The bride, escorted by her uncle, Mr John Veley, of Toronto, and given in marriage by her mother, Mrs. Emily Veley, was lovely in her floor-length bridal gown of Chantilly lace and net over white satin. She wore a petal-type Juliet cap and shoulder-length veil of silk illusion tulle, and carried a cascade of white 'mums.

Mrs. Frank Allan of Belleville, as matron of honor, was attired in mauve embroidered net over organdy fashioned in cocktail-length with fitted, bolero bodice and full skirt. She wore a matching veil-trimmed headdress and carried a bouquet of yellow 'mums.

The junior bridesmaid, Miss Marilyn Veley of Toronto, cousin of the bride, wore a gown of sea-green organza over taffeta in cocktail length featuring a molded bodice with wide bow cummerbund. Her headdress was in similar design to that of the matron of honor's, and she carried a bouquet of yellow 'mums.

Mr. David Bryans, of Chatsworth, attended his brother, while the ushers were Messrs. Paul Veley, of Toronto, cousin of the bride, and Bruce Aherns, of Owen Sound, cousin of the bridegroom.

Following the ceremony, the reception was held in the lower auditorium of the church where the bridal table was prettily appointed with the traditional white damask, and centred by a three-tier, all-white pedestal wedding cake topped by white wedding bells and lily-of-the valley, and misted about the base with white tulle. Tall white candles in silver candelabra, and driftwood floral accents completed the nuptial setting. Those who served were Misses Helen Spearman, Joan Anglin and Mildred Vonderick.

The guests were received by the bride's mother, wearing a floor-length gown of gold-toned rust velvet with matching velvet hat, gold accessories, and corsage of bronze 'mums. Assisting Mrs. Veley in the receiving line was the bridegroom's mother, who wore a street-length peau de sole gown in magenta shade with matching hat, magenta accessories, and corsage of white carnations centred by a mauve orchid.

For the wedding trip to Toronto, Detroit, and other western points, the bride chose a plaid two-piece ensemble in dressmaker style, brown accessories, with corsage of bronze 'mums.

Guests were present from Belleville, Trenton, Toronto, Owen Sound, Chatsworth, Hanover, Islington, Cobourg, Truro Nova Scotia, Kitchener, Ont.

Mr. and Mrs. Bryans will reside in Chatsworth, Ontario.

The bride, previous to her marriage, was the honored guest at a cup and saucer shower given by the choir of the Missionary Alliance Church; at a miscellaneous shower given by the congregation of the church; at a presentation by the Harmony Studio Club members when she received a complete set of heavy copper-bottomed aluminum, at the bride's home; at a linen shower by the staff of the pediatric ward of Belleville General Hospital.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

EMPTY PROMISES NOT A SOCIAL ASSET

When it comes to doing favors, many are quick to offer, but slow to follow through.

How often it's been said: "Anytime you need theater tickets, just let me know." Or: "Whenever you want to join the club, I'll make sure you're taken care of." Or: "If you can't get a sitter, just drop the children off with us."

Well, the time comes when you need the tickets for visiting VIPs, and you've scraped up the initiation fee for the club you want to join, and you can't get a sitter for the very day your husband's boss has invited — nay, commanded — you for cocktails.

Now, what?

Remembering Jane or Joe's kind offers of help, you clutch at their words as if at a lifeline, only to discover there's a loophole in it.

The snag is that Jane has completely forgotten she's ever offered her services and Joe really was talking off the top of his overblown head. Neither actually meant what he or she said in the first place. It just seemed like a good idea at the time and, besides, it made them feel they were important to themselves as well as to you.

Fortunately, most people who offer to do favors mean what they say and actually are flattered when you take them up on it. But there are a discourteous few who talk about doing favors, but that's about all it ever boils down to — just talk.

About the worst fate that can befall the person who idly offers to do anyone a favor is to be taken at his word. When put to the test, Jane might take the kiddies off your hands for an hour or two, but mutter to herself how you're taking advantage of her.

Or Joe, who can't even get tickets to a Grade-B movie, might try to bluff his way out when you hit him with a request for two-on-the-aisle for "Camelot." His broker may be as mythical as the kingdom, but Joe will tell you he's tracking them down, then call back later and say, yes, he can get tickets but, alas, not for the night you need them. His face is saved, even if yours isn't.

Favors should never be offered as so much idle conversation. Anyone who offers to do a kindness or a service should like a good Boy Scout, "Be Prepared." If a favor is volunteered, then from the standpoint of good manners alone, it should have the sort of substance a person can really pin his hopes to.

Question: My bridal portrait will be taken on the morning of my wedding. I've arranged for the photographer to take pictures of me and my one attendant at home. I'd also like to have the groom photographed with me at the same time. Would it be incorrect for him to come to my house just before the wedding? It would be less hectic than going to the studio before the reception. — M.A., Pottstown, Pa.

Answer: It's not customary for the groom to see his bride before the wedding, but it's not incorrect. If you're not staunch traditionalist, then you may properly have your wedding pictures taken before the ceremony.

OLYMPIC HISTORY

The earliest Olympic games are believed to date back as far as July of 776 BC.

M. J. Coldwell To Speak Here

MR. M. J. COLDWELL

Mr. M. J. Coldwell, probably Canada's ablest parliamentarian, and one of its most distinguished elder statesmen, will address the Women's Canadian Club next Monday evening in Queen Alexandra School, Ann Street, on the topic "The Future of Democracy in Asia and Africa".

He entered federal politics as representative to Rosetown-Diggar, a seat which he held till 1958. He became parliamentary leader and national president of the C.C.F. party in 1942, and a Canadian delegate to the United Nations a number of times, as well as attending meetings of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association.

In 1958-59 he made an extended visit to India on behalf of the United Nations, and at the request of the Indian Government, to study and evaluate a program of community development.

With his rich and full background in public affairs, Mr. Coldwell's talk will be of deep interest to those who wish to keep in touch with Asian and African policies.

"...AND LIVE NINE FEET TALL"

"Glory, after all, is the thing which has the best chance of not being altogether vanity."—Ernest Renan (1823-1892) a French writer.

Good taste? How would you define it?

"I feel good taste is a matter of exquisite simplicity." was the way a TV personality expressed it, when questioned on women's fashions.

A small group of us discussed this, later.

"I think that definition is good." one declared. "And I think it applies to just about everything that has to do with living. I recall a small town we visited last summer.

Down the street was an old fashioned, mid-victorian, tall frame three-story house; the kind that is being torn down today, too cumbersome and useless for modern living. But not this one.

The owners painted the entire edifice pure white. Only the wrought-iron railings that bound the lower edge of grouped windows on each of the three stories were painted a delicate mauve-pink color, from which flourished window-boxes of purple-pink blossoms.

It just made you feel good to look at it: exquisite simplicity, every inch of it."

Said another: "This exquisite simplicity surely applies to modern life. To strip, to stream-line, to make compact, to economise is a necessity where time is of the essence. Note that our main highways, such as the 401, no longer thread themselves liesurely through small towns and villages, but lie uncluttered, in gentle forthrightness through scenic countryside.

All in order to cut the time in half for the motorist, wherever he or she wishes to go, and to avoid traffic congestion.

Patrons of supermarkets economise their time and energy by easy handling of neat, compact, packaged food items.

TV compresses tremendous funds of information to millions within a matter of minutes. Not to speak of space marvel by air travel".

Another pointed out: "If such is true of materials and techniques, observe how this exquisite simplicity of good taste has long been true in the realm of art and ideas.

The old masters created with a minimum of brush strokes; poety expresses beautiful thought with sparse, verbal economy. A splendid example is the proverb, loved and treasured for its wisdom and imagery; time-tested for simplicity. Most languages have their favorites.

The Spanish "Que sera, sera" was recently a popular song title which we translate "What will be, will be". The famous three-word French proverb "Qui s'excuse, s'accuse" has not the same neat counter-part in English which we translate as "He who excuses himself, accuses himself", and which Shakespeare most vividly expressed for us in the words of Hamlet's mother, "The lady doeth protest too much, me thinks".

The latin "Festina lente" which we know as "Make haste slowly" is tersely profound and dates from the first century of the Christian era, while one of the greatest of proverbs — and the briefest, 'Know Thyself" is said to be at least 2,500 years old. All languages delight in repetitive proverbs: "Soon ripe, soon rotten".

"Soon gotten, soon spent". 'Easy come, easy go". "First come, first served". "While the first shall be last" and "The bait hides the hook", — such five-word proverbs seem almost bulky, choice though they may be.

But the simplicity; how simple yet how deceiving it is! One college student declared: "I don't think there's anything very remarkable in the Proverbs. They are rather commonplace remarks of common people". To which his teacher replied: "Very well, make one".

"Is this exquisite simplicity of good taste so important to living? And if so, why?" someone wished to know, and was answered by still another:

"Yes, I for one think so. From it emanates a kind of glory to life. Good taste poses the moral idea, does it not, of how to live? A question which everyone of us is forever and pertetually concerned. I for one, want to live nine feet tall; to get, to squeeze from life its sweetness, its goodness, its best; to taste its glory. Milton summed it up, I think very well:

Nor love thy life, nor hate; but, what thou liv'st,
Live well; how long or short permit to heaven".

PROMISED SELF-RULE—South Africa's government has announced it will grant self-rule with an all-black parliament and cabinet to Africans of the Transkei next year. Map locates the area about one-third the size of Newfoundland, on the east coast of South Africa. It lies between the Great Kei River and the border of Natal and Cape Province with its capital at Umtata. (CP Newsmap.)

Three Million Africans Will Get Self Rule From Verwoerd Govt. by 1963

By Brian Barrow

CAPE TOWN (CP)—After 10 years of talking, South Africa's Nationalist government has decided to give self-rule by 1963 to the 3,000,000 Africans of the Transkei.

In his dramatic announcement in Parliament, Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd said he is prepared to grant the Transkei an all-black parliament and cabinet, separate citizenship and initial autonomy in education, health services, agriculture and roads.

Defence, foreign affairs and justice would remain in the hands of South Africa's all-white parliament until the Transkei government is ready to take over.

Actually, only 1,384,000 Africans live in the Transkei, a beautiful but poverty-stricken territory about one-third the size of Newfoundland on the east coast of South Africa. But the self-rule plan would apply as well to those who have had to leave to earn a livelihood.

No one can deny this is a positive step even if it has been taken under pressure of world opinion.

RADICAL CHANGE

The move shows a radical change in Nationalist thinking. In offering the Transkei an elective system of government, Dr. Verwoerd has made two vital concessions.

He has recognized that Africans are just as suited to exercising the vote in a democratic way as are Europeans. And he has virtually admitted that it is not possible to maintain white supremacy over the whole of South Africa.

Another important aspect of the proposals is that he dare not ever go back on it. Africans have a habit of reacting violently to broken promises.

So Dr. Verwoerd, by offering the Transkei independence, has also committed the whole of white South Africa to his policy of separate territorial development for the Africans.

The implications for South Africa are tremendous. The horse Dr. Verwoerd now has mounted might easily run away with him. The remaining 10,000,000 Africans scattered over Natal, the Transvaal and Cape Province will also demand self-rule sooner or later.

EIGHT STATES

If the prime minister's policy is followed to its logical conclusion there will one day be eight separate and sovereign African states within the Republic of South Africa, with 6,000,000 of their subjects earning their living in white South Africa as migrant laborers—a bedlam conception.

For the moment, however, all attention here is focused on the Transkei and the most important questions seem to be: Can this territory ever become an economically viable entity? Can it ever be really independent?

It is essential to take a close look at the Transkei to realize what Dr. Verwoerd is asking its people to build on.

When the rains come it is a resplendent land of rolling green hills, tumbling down from the Drakensberg Mountains to the Indian Ocean. It lies approximately between the Great Kei River and the border of Natal and Cape Province.

When the rains don't come it is a vast brown dustbowl where man and beast struggle to survive.

BARE EXISTENCE

The people who live in it are all of the Xhosa group comprising eight tribes who often engage in fights.

Their common enemies are ignorance, soil erosion and hunger. To them food and the means to earn money are the only realities.

That is why most of the men have migrated to the white cities and left their wives and children to look after the herds and maize crops.

It is only in the cities, working for the whites, that they can make money. This migration away from their homes has been so great that there are more Africans outside the Transkei than in it.

Soil erosion has reached critical proportions. Only 26 per cent of the land surface of the entire territory is free of erosion.

The people are so poor that only 117 earn enough each year to pay income tax.

The territory has few minerals. There are small deposits of copper, cobalt, nickel and platinum but they are not developed.

FEW INDUSTRIES

Most of the good land is devoted to mixed maize and stock farming. There are no major industries. The vast majority of industries are owned by the Transkei's 15,000 whites.

One railway line runs from Cape Province to Umtata, capital of the Transkei. There is no harbor except Port St Johns which is silted and cannot be used. Even if the silt were cleared it could accommodate only flat-bottomed boats.

The weakness of the government's plan is that it aims to cut off the Transkei from the wealth of South Africa. Industries and white capital investment are essential for healthy growth of the territory. But Dr. Verwoerd will allow whites to establish industries only on its borders.

It seems, therefore, that however sincere his proposals for independence, he visualizes the Transkei as nothing but a huge labor reserve.

There is one more question. Dr Verwoerd has not consulted the Xhosa people. Do they want self-rule?

They might take it in preference to negative apartheid. But there is no doubt most thinking educated Africans would like their destiny linked with that of the whites in a united, economically integrated South Africa with equal democratic rights for all.

Success for Successful Living

DORIS CLARK

Letter and answer published in November read in part:

QUESTION:

I bought four cemetery plots, to save my family grief. (I didn't want any of us to go through what my sister and her daughter did, finding a burial plot.) The other day I heard my husband tell a friend jokingly that I bought his plot and him alive. My son said: "The Masons will bury me." My little granddaughter says "Grannie, I'm getting cremated." My son-in-law says the "Vets' will bury him. I'm beginning to feel they resent what I thought was a kindness.

ANSWER (November):

Your only mistake was in not making the purchase a family affair. Call a conference now. State your intention of getting rid of the plots and take a vote. There may be a right-about-face!

2ND LETTER, Received February, 1962:

They changed their tune! Everything went right-about-face and smoothly. I heard my uncle tell my son-in-law: "You know, the 'Vets' don't bury you unless you are a pauper!" My son told his dad: "I'm told the Masons only officiate at the funeral. They do not bury their members unless they are down and out." And my husband now wants to keep the plots.

So thanks to you, all is well.—MRS. S. W.

A triumph for arbitration.

DEAR DORIS:—Why don't boys seem to want to date girls who aren't the prettiest, haven't got the best figure and aren't popular?

By popular, I mean members of a certain clique (of boys and girls) who are known to occasionally be drunk. The last one doesn't refer to all boys. As for me, I would never date a boy from this popular clique.—WONDERING SUE.

DEAR WONDERING:—They don't all date the prettiest. But there has to be some attraction. It's human to reach out for what looks interesting.

I have known many happy romances between young people with poor features and figures, but full of fun and friendliness. A pretty face has to follow through with something lasting.

The clique that worries you will be having its own worries later on. Being drunk and undisciplined is asking for serious trouble.

• • •

DEAR DORIS:—How does a person really know if she is in love?

I am a girl of 19 and my boy friend is 21. We have been going together for over two years. In that time you get to know a person quite well. I can see his petty faults as I am sure he is aware of mine.

However, the problem is: the authors and people in general portray love as something which keeps you from eating, and your head in the clouds.

I think a lot of my friend but on the other hand I don't "melt inside" when I hear his name.

Am I in love? If I marry him will I feel deprived of falling in love? Or is this some picturesque fantasy? —ESTHER.

DEAR ESTHER:—If it's the real thing, it just gets better all the time.

You don't have to swoon over your beloved. Sometimes it hits the victim like a ton of bricks, but more often true love grows out of friendship and out of shared interests.

To make a good marriage out of even the out-of-this-world fantasy kind takes unselfishness and a desire to give love more then to get it.

• • •

TO MARILYN:—Your pal is suffering from growing pains—physical and mental. She probably does not even understand her own behavior. She may be growing fast and using a lot of energy in the process. Needs the extra sleep she is getting.

Don't sit at home all the time. Broaden out in your friendships and keep going places. If she is going to be hurt every time you go out with another girl, she had better get accustomed to the idea. Otherwise this leaves your future narrowed down to just her—and isn't that silly?

When she starts feeling better take her along with you and some others.

If you will write again, enclosing a five-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope, I will send you the name of an inexpensive little book which will help you to understand just how big a revolution it can be for a girl to grow up.

Garden Notes

A Border of Foliage Plants

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

A border of foliage plants can be just as colorful as one of flowering plants. Then too, foliage plants usually have a longer season of stable color than plants which must first grow abundant foliage before they begin to set buds and to bloom. With many of our plants the flowering season is short and once they have bloomed their color value has gone. Not so the colorful foliage plants.

If you have a wide border to build fill in the background with shrubs that will add more color. Shrubs such as Silver dogwood, Purple smoke bush, Purple leaf plum, Red barberry, Golden privet or Golden leaf mock orange would be good in groups of two or three.

If you must depend upon annuals you can have a lush background with Ricnus, castor bean plant. Tall cannas have large exotic leaves, used with giant feather grass, Silver plume. These have seed heads that last for months.

Lavender comes in several heights. Its soft grey foliage makes a foil for bright colors such as colleus. These run through from white with green veins to deepest red. Plantain lilies or Hosta are grown for their handsome leaves. These make big mounds of deep blue green if you choose. Thomas Hogg have light green leaves with deeply netted veins and a silver edge. Plantain Variegata has rippled white and green leaves that are quite handsome.

Bulb Or Potted

Caladiums can be bought by the bulb or potted and these are as colorful as you can imagine. The big arrowshaped leaves may be white with red or green veins. Orange or pink, yellow or carmine with contrasting veining, and edgings.

Bells of Ireland have pale green papery bracts mixed with their deeper green foliage. These tall spikes remain fresh for a long time and would lend contrast in form to the foliage border.

House leeks, sempervivums form colorful, fleshy rosettes close to the ground. Their leaves may be pinkish brown, silvery white, light jade or blue green. These would be good for edging.

Sedum, or stonecrop make good subjects for dry hot borders. They are easily raised from seed and there is a wide variety.

Gold Medal Winner

From the herbs you can make a complete and handsome border. The new Dark Opal basil is outstanding. This was one of the gold medal winners this year. It is one foot tall with plum purple leaves that have a silky green sheen. Sweet basil is green and compact.

Rosemary has soft tall spikes somewhat like lavender. Lemon balm has dark green leaves, Chervil and Parsley have curled leaves. Broad leaf sage is a perennial with pale grey woolly leaves. Good for an accent plant.

Garden thyme is a perennial too with a good compact form.

If the border extends back to the vegetable garden you can choose two large and ornamental foliage plants, Ornamental Kale also known as Japanese flower cabbage, and Cardoon. The Cabbage has huge heads with frilled and white edged leaves that turn a rosy pink and soft purple shades. The cardoon has big fern-like leaves.

Focus on Health

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Topics this week: Medical facilities in the event of atomic attack, new studies on hardening of the arteries and cancer deaths that are labelled unnecessary.

ATOMIC ATTACK

If atomic attack comes, many exposed victims in "hot" United States fallout areas probably would be pretty much on their own until the radiation subsided to safe levels.

A North Carolina physician queried the American Medical Association on the ethical duties of physicians under such circumstances, saying:

"I am not sure I would be capable, even if I had an adequate shelter, of turning down requests for treatment."

An AMA consultant replied:

"Civil defence authorities agree that the physician is in the same category as everyone else regarding shelter protection from radioactive fallout . . . it would be shortsighted for a physician to provide medical services to casualties in a 'hot' area that would in a short time incapacitate him to fulfil subsequent medical responsibilities."

HARDENED ARTERIES

Hardening of the arteries is a major cause of heart attacks in the U.S. and a recent study in New Orleans indicates it can have a good start in boys by the time they are 10.

Heart researchers studied the coronary arteries of 548 persons who died at various ages from various causes.

Their report, carried in the American Journal of Pathology, showed that between the ages of 10 and 39, white males have approximately three times as much atherosclerotic involvement (plugging of the artery channel) as white females. The difference decreases after age 40.

CANCER DEATHS

The Cancer Cytology Foundation of America estimates that 9,000-10,000 deaths among women could be prevented each year if all women over 20 would go to their doctor once a year for a vaginal smear test for cervical cancer and if all women patients would use this test routinely.

Dr. Ernest Ayre, the foundation's medical and scientific director, said the type of cancer can be cured readily when detected early, and added:

"Up to the present time in this country only nine per cent of the 55,000,000 women over 20 years of age are protected by cervical cytodiagnostic tests. Russia reports twice that percentage."

Pope John Does Not Like to Eat Alone

ROME (Reuters)—Pope John has lost his appetite because Vatican protocol requires that that he should have his meals alone and he prefers company at his table, the newspaper Paese Sera reported Thursday.

Paese Sera said the 80-year-old head of the Roman Catholic Church had confided to a French diplomat at a recent private audience:

"I like eating, but not alone. In the Vatican, however, the protocol requires that I should be alone at the table under the impassive gaze of a member of my suite who stands in front of the table. This cuts my appetite

"The other day I could not stand this any more and I invited to lunch one of my gardeners. But this created a great commotion in the Vatican and I was made to understand that it would be preferable that a similar incident should not occur again."

His breakfast consists of coffee with milk, a biscuit and fruit. For lunch he has a vegetable soup and a fish or meat course washed down by half a glass of red wine, and for dinner only vegetables and fruit.

Oshawa Skater Will Maybe Try Triple Lutz

Jackson intends to try it in free - skating competition of the Canadian senior men's figure - skating championship when he puts his title on the line against four challengers. He said Thursday spectators will know when he has done it because it will be the first jump he plans to do.

His description of it is involved. A drastically simplified definition is three complete turns in the air executed from a backward takeoff with a backward landing.

It has never been done before in skating competition.

"I can't really tell whether I'll do it though," said the 21 - year - old champ. "I plan to, but on the ice I have to decide in a split second."

Jackson said a loose ice chip might make the difference between execution of the manoeuvre or a quick improvisation along other lines.

Jackson has done the double lutz — two mid - air turns—and so have others. Skating buffs say such manoeuvres, now a source of thrills to spectators, have done much to get boys interested in figure skating, a tough, demanding sport that has often been written off as something for girls.

"I used to avoid taking my figure skates to school so I wouldn't be teased," said Jackson

Jean Le Moyne Earns Top Rank Among Canadians With Award-Winning Book

By WILLIAM STEWART

MONTREAL (CP)—Montreal critics consider that Jean Le Moyne, winner of one of the Governor - General's French-language literary awards, has earned a top rank among Canadian writers with his prize-winning Convergences.

The book is non - fiction—a collection of essays written in the last 20 years. Possibly because it requires attentive study rather than simple reading, reviews in Montreal newspapers did not appear until three or four weeks after its publication in late December. Its title might be translated as "converging ideas."

The book's reception has been markable.

'INDISPENSIBLE MAN'

Pelletier wrote:

". . . Le Moyne understands and comes profoundly to grips with the greatest works of the human spirit and our most despairing weaknesses. . . . Convergences brings us the certainty that we have in our midst an indispensible man, this writer we need."

Jean Hamelin told his readers in Le Devoir that Le Moyne is "what we have been searching for . . . a master of thought, above the push and pull of everyday affairs. . ."

Roger Duhamel, Queen's Printer at Ottawa and member of the French - Canadian Academy, wrote in the weekly newspaper La Patrie that Convergencies is "nobly distinguished among practically all Canadian works."

Le Moyne, 49, wrote the 28 essays collected in the 324-page volume during a period he worked as a newspaper man for La Presse and the non-vanished Le Canada, later edited the Montreal magazine La Revue Moderne, and during time free of his work as a script-writer for the National Film Board which has employed him for the last three years.

In 1951 Le Moyne was a member of the original Service in French staff of The Canadian Press in Montreal.

ROLE OF WOMEN

The subjects of his painstaking writing are wide - ranging. They include the religious atmosphere in French Canada and the role of women in the Roman Catholic church and in Quebec literature. He discusses works of the world's great composers of music; Negro spirituals; Henry James, the American writer and intellectual; the late U.S. writer F. Scott Fitzgerald; the Marx brothers; the late French - Canadian poet Saint-Denys-Garneau.

Philip Surrey, in the Montreal Star, said of Le Moyne: "His thought and his style are biblical but we are also reminded of the virile piety of the early explorers and soldiers"

Since most of the parts of Convergences were published, broadcast or given as lectures when originally written, some readers are astonished the author has not become embroiled in controversy. For example, in 1951 when some opinions in Quebec were expressed only with caution, Le Moyne wrote about what he considers to be a 17th-century style of Catholicism in Quebec.

LOVE FORBIDDEN

He says in the article in Convergences:

"Our only religion is a psychologically - contaminated Catholisism."

Some of his other judgments:

". . . Never a word of enlightenment about marriage, the vocation to become that of the immense majority (of students). Woman did not exist."

"From the literary point of view . . . teaching of English consisted in a generalized warning that practically all the authors, alas, even the writers of the classics, were Protestants"

"I no longer have any hope of encountering in (the work) of a French - Canadian writer the surprise of a real woman."

"Love is forbidden because it is a sin

"By love I mean: Love of one's self, then love of others and love of things."

Hamelin, Le Devoir's critic, said the author, having made himself familiar with the great stream of universal thought, arrived at his own "christian, religious and virile ideas of greatest purity."

WINS LITERARY AWARD

Professor Robert Finch of the University of Toronto has won the 1961 Governor-General's literary award for English-language poetry for his work Acis in Oxford. The award carries a $1,000 cash award.—(CP Photo).

Duhamel said that Le Moyne is "surrounded by admiration and respect."

PLAN TRANSLATION

"He speaks a theological-language in which many clerics, who are less thoroughly nourished by the Bible and have meditated with less passion on the mysteries of the Truth, would lose themselves."

Convergences appeared at a time of widespread discussion in French Canada of the idea of political independence for Quebec. In a recent conversation, Le Moyne expressed the view that the direction of human affairs is toward greater integration of racial and language groups and it is a world-wide tendency.

Le Moyne, a dark, mustached six-footer, has been known best to a limited circle of Montreal acquaintances.

His reputation has grown gradually and it was at the suggestion of friends that his work was collected in a book. In a two - paragraph foreword titled Notice, Le Moyne said Convergences represented what he had to say "until now—and may it please God that I never have anything else to say!"

Convergences was published by the Montreal firm of Hurtubise, Mame and Hatier and the first printing of 2,000 copies is exhausted. A second printing of 2,000 became available Feb. 21. The publishers are considering a translation of the book into English.

Author Dies in Relative Obscurity But Book Wins Governor-General's Award

OTTAWA (CP)—A book by an author who died nearly five years ago in relative obscurity has won one of five Governor-General's literary awards for 1961.

Malcolm Lowry's Hear Us O Lord From Heaven Thy Dwelling Place has been judged the outstanding English - language work of fiction by a Canadian published last year.

Two University of Toronto professors are winners of the two other awards for English-language works—Professor Robert Finch, in poetry, for his Acis in Oxford and Professor T. A. Goudge, in non-fiction, for his philosophic study The Ascent of Life.

The award for fiction goes to Yves Theriault for his novel Ashini and the non - fiction award goes to Jean Le Moyne for Convergences, a collection of essays written during the last two decades.

SKIP FRENCH POETRY

The seven - man committee which made the selections decided against recommending an award for French - language poetry. Custom has been for the judges to recommend awards only for outstanding works, and 1961 is the third consecutive year in which one of the six possible awards has not been made.

The awards are a $1,000 cash prize and a specially bound copy of the award-winning book with an inscription signed by Governor-General Vanier. Mrs. Lowry, who lives in Vancouver, will receive the award for her husband's book.

Lowy's book is a collection of six short stories and a novella, A Forest Path to the Spring, which sums up the 14 years the Lowrys spent living in a fishing shack on a beach at Dollarton near Vancouver.

His most noted work, Under the Volcano, was published in 1947. He died an alcoholic in London, England, June 27, 1957, leaving a three-foot stack of unpublished manuscripts.

Guy Sylvestre, associate Parliamentary librarian and chairman of the awards committee, said the manuscripts include a completed novel, enough poetry for a book and probably another volume of short stories.

SECOND AWARD

The poetry prize to Prof. Finch, 61-year-old professor of French at University College in Toronto, is his second Governor-General's award. The first was for his Poems published several years ago.

He is a painter who has had one-man exhibits in Toronto and is also an accomplished pianist. Last year he published another book of poetry, entitled Dover Beach Revisited.

The Ascent of Life by Halifax-born Prof. Goudge, 52, deals with philosophic problems raised by the theory of evolution. He is also a painter and has written two other books and more than a score of articles on philosophical subjects in learned journals.

Theriault, 45, is a prolific author who also writes for press, radio and television. Last year four of his novels and a book of short stories were published. However, the award is for only one book.

Ashini is a novel in which the characters are North American Indians and deals with problems of that race. An earlier novel, Agaguk, about Eskimos, has been translated and published in five other languages.

FIRST BOOK

Convergences is the first book by Le Moyne to be published. The essays it contains appeared previously in various magazines and each created an impact at the time in literary circles. Quebec literary criticis consider Convergences one of the outstanding books to appear in Canada.

Le Moyne, 49, has been a national film board writer for the last three years and previously was editor - in - chief of the French - language magazine La Revue Moderne.

Members of the awards committee, with Guy Sylvestre, were Dr. Northrop Frye, principal of Victoria College, Toronto; Dr. Alfred Bailey, dean of arts at the University of New Brunswick; Dr. Roy Daniells, head of the English department, University of British Columbia; Roger Duhamel, Queen's Printer, Ottawa; Dr. Jean - Charles Bonenfant, librarian of the Quebec Legislature, and Rev. Clement Lockquell, dean of commerce at Laval University.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Bobby Hull's surging climb to the National Hockey League's scoring heights within the past two weeks or so, has caused sceptics to do a spot of head-scratching. Those who claimed the 1959-60 scoring championship was a flash in the pan and who pointed to a dismal start this season, are now wondering.

BOBBY HULL

For the 23-year-old Point Anner has climbed from 19th place in the scoring list to second, a scant six points behind leading Andy Bathgate, within a short time and may not have reached the apogee (ask Col. Glenn about that one) of his meteoric blast to the top.

Bobby has 37 goals in the record book and the Hawks have twelve games to play. He needs 13 to tie the Rocket and the Boom-Boom and naturally 14 to create his own record. It is not beyond the realm of possibility.

It is a tremendous task. Bobby would not be human if he were tension immune. And if perchance he reaches or exceeds the 40-goal mark the spotlights of publicity will focus on him. It will not be a Mahovlich-Geoffrion repeat. While the tub-thumpers were writing reams of the Big "M's" chances, the little-publicized Boom-Boom was slowly creeping up on him. And with a last-minute surge he reached the exalted "50-goal" summit.

Hull will have no running "mate" to tear the glare of the newspaper sports columns spotlight from him. He will be strictly on his own, unless someone pulls a miracle and catches or approaches him in the goal-getting column.

The records reveal that Hull got off on the wrong foot at the beginning of this season, and was getting nowhere fast. The sceptics were in their glory. The flash-in-the-pan yelpers were bleating "I-told-you-so."

"I was sick of hockey when the season started," he said. "I couldn't wait to take off my uniform after a game. Who could blame me? They worked us to death in training camp. We played 17 exhibition games and had two tough practices a day. My feet were sore and after a while I felt no desire to play. There's no question in my mind that I would have had more goals this year if they had been easier on us."

Bobby, who was "picked up while playing on a pond near Belleville" by a Chicago scout, scored only 13 goals in his first year in the big time and 18 during the following season.

In the 1959-60 season Bobby, as Colonel John Glenn said when he poked the nose of ole Friendship 7 towards Cape Canaveral, "well, that's over, let's get down to earth," and promptly went out and took the NHL scoring title with 81 points on 39 goals and 42 assists.

He said he felt sure the turning point in his career came after the second season. He went on a European tour with the New York Rangers and played 20 games against the Boston Bruins.

"I was so tired after having played the entire season that I paced myself during these exhibitions," he said. "I discovered that I could accomplish more if I had some strength in reserve when I got a chance to score. Before that I used up all my energy dashing all over the ice."

Hull is only two goals shy of his own record, and he should top 39 over the rest of the season if his scoring splurge does not carry him to record or near-record heights.

My out-on-the-limb record is so odorous that I wouldn't dare predict that he will create a new or equal the standing scoring record.

After all it's a pretty tough task. Scoring 13 or 14 goals in twelve games is no economy-size, puck-chasing chore. But it can be done and if Bobby continues to ride the crest of his goal-getting wave, as I said before, it is not beyond the perimeter of his ability. I hope he makes it.

A lot depends on what happens tonight and Sunday. The Hawks are at Detroit this afternoon and entertain the Boston Bruins tomorrow night. What Bobby does in this pair of tussles will affect his chances of breaking or equalling the record.

By the way, whatever became of Mahovlich?

Blues Two-Date Habs, Wings On Spot

Battle For Fourth

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The schedule appears to favor New York Rangers in their battle with Detroit Red Wings for the National Hockey League's fourth and last playoff berth.

The Rangers currently lead the Wings by two points, 53 to 51, and have played two extra games.

But after meeting the first-place Canadiens at Montreal tonight, they'll have the advantage of home ice for seven of their last 11 outings.

Detroit, meanwhile, must play eight of its last 12 contests on the road after facing Chicago Black Hawks and Toronto Maple Leafs at home this weekend.

ABEL NOT WORRIED

The Wings' road record isn't too impressive — four wins and four ties in 27 starts — but coach Sid Abel does not appear to be worried.

"Two of our away games are in New York and we've played well there this season," says Abel. "I'd say those two games in hand leave us in a better position than the Rangers .... and if we don't run into a string of bad luck we'll make the playoffs."

The clubs have split a possible 10 points in five starts at New York, each winning two, losing two and tying one.

Rangers and Wings also have a game at Detroit where Abel's men have the edge — three wins, two ties and one loss.

Detroit meets the Black Hawks in an afternoon game today. They'll be host to the Maple Leafs Sunday night.

In other weekend games, Boston Bruins are at Toronto tonight and at Chicago Sunday night.

HOLD LARGE LEAD

"We've beaten them five times," says Blake. "But they woke us up earlier in the season with four straight ties. They're fighting for a playoff spot now and they'll be tough.

"Everyone says we have first place locked up," Blake added. "But we're not out of the woods yet. Besides, my players still have a lot to work for — the individual awards, all - star spots and keeping hot for the playoffs."

Canadiens will play the weekend series without defenceman Lou Fontinato, an ex - Ranger who came to Montreal in a trade for Doug Harvey, the Blueshirt playing-coach.

Fontinato aggravated an old groin injury last week and may be out of action for at least another week.

To replace Fontinato, the Habitants have called up Jean Gauthier from the Hull-Ottawa farm club in the Eastern Professional Hockey League.

Dogs Win Second

Maroons Hit Strathroy

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Two quarter-final senior playoff series opened Friday night in the Ontario Hockey Association as Chatham Maroons took a one-game lead over Strathroy Rockets with an 8-5 victory and Woodstock Athletics tied Waterloo Tigers 3-3.

In the league's third quarter-final playoff, Windsor Bulldogs took a two-game lead in the second of a best-of-nine series against Stratford Indians with a 5-2 win.

In Stratford, Windsor led 5-0 in the middle of the second period but the Indians broke through for a couple of goals while the Bulldogs were shorthanded.

Walter Pawlyshyn and Irwin Gross each scored two goals for Windsor and Gord Haidy added the other. Bill Flick and Neil Cockburn were Stratford's scorers.

In Chatham, the Maroons took a 3-2 lead in the first period and never looked back. George Aitken, runner-up for the league scoring title, paced the Maroons with three goals. Jim Connelly added a pair and singles were fired by Bob Poole, Elmer Skov and Ted Power.

Andy Gauthier, Willie Haas, Art Sullivan, Walt Williams and Jack McCreight tallied for Strathroy.

In Woodstock, Waterloo put on a spirited third - period drive which tied the game at 13:16 and sent it into overtime. The Tigers, who finished the regular season in fifth place, managed to control the Athletics, who finished second.

Tom Micalleff scored two for the Tigers, including the equalizer. Charlie Brooker, an ex-Athletic, got the other Waterloo goal.

Canadian Schoolboy Curling

Unbeaten Sasky Rink Wins Title

By KEITH KINCAID

HALIFAX (CP)—A confident quartet of teen-age shot-makers from Saskatchewan captured the Canadian schoolboy curling championship here Friday, sweeping the round-robin tournament without a defeat.

Skipped by 16-year-old Mike Lukowich, making his third appearance in the national championship, the foursome from the small farming town of Speers—population about 150 — successfully took on all comers for 10 wins and no losses.

Saskatchewan's only close call was an extra-end victory over Quebec in the final round.

"I was as nervous about my last shot in that game as I was during the big one with Manitoba," said Lukowich, a poised, fast - curling skip who has been playing the game for 12 years.

The Manitoba contest Thursday night which Saskatchewan won 6-5 was the key game in Saskatchewan's drive for the championship.

"I figured we had it won after that one but we wanted to win all our games almost as much as we wanted to win the trophy," said Lukowich.

TAKES SEVENTH

It was the seventh championship for Saskatchewan since 1950.

Western teams, as expected dominated the final standings. John [illegible] s Salmon A[illegible] defending the title for British Columbia, was second with eight wins and two losses.

Manitoba, skipped by Jim Wilcox of Flin Flon, ended with seven wins and three losses and Alberta finished 6-4.

Quebec and Nova Scotia had five wins and five losses, New Brunswick and Ontario were 4-6, Northern Ontario and Prince Edward Island 3-7, and Newfoundland was winless.

In Round 11 games Saskatchewan beat Quebec 7-6, Manitoba beat New Brunswick 11-5, British Columbia went an extra end to beat PEI 9-7, Alberta beat Northern Ontario 9-6, and Nova Scotia beat Ontario 9-8.

Canadian Figure Skating

'Wendy' Cinch For Crown

TORONTO (CP)—Wendy Griner, following a brilliant display in compulsory school figures Friday, is almost a cinch to retain the Canadian women's senior singles figure - skating championship.

Wendy, 17-year - old blonde, has only been skating for five years. But the Hamilton native picked up 5469 out of a possible 610 points in Friday's five figures in the Canadian figure skating championships here.

The figures count for 60 per cent of all the points, the remaining 40 coming from today's free-skating events.

Well behind Miss Griner are Shirra Kenworthy of Vancouver and Toronto's Petra Burka among a total of 11 entries. Rose Biluk of Owen Sound is sixth.

Four senior dance pairs dominated by Ontario skaters moved into today's national finals. They are the defending champions, Virginia Thompson of St. Catharines and Toronto's Bill McLachlan; the brother and sister team of Donna Lee and John Mitchell of Vancouver; Paulette Down, St. Thomas and Ken Ormsby of Toronto, and Marilyn Crawford and Blair Armitage of Ottawa.

WIN JUNIOR TITLE

Two Toronto skaters Friday night won the junior dance title. They were Carole Forrest, 18, and Keven Lethbridge, 23. Gail Snyder and Wayne Palmer, Galt, were third behind a Calgary pair.

Among those putting their titles on the line tonight are senior men's singles champion Don Jackson of Oshawa and senior pairs winner Maria and Otto Jelinek of Bronte, Ont Bath are favored to repeat.

Toronto's Greg Golks holds a narrow margin over Regina's Bryan Topping and William Neale of Niagara Falls in the junior men's singles on the basis of their compulsory figures. Six skaters are competing.

A team of 17 skaters will be picked on the basis of their performance at the championships to represent Canada in the world championships at Prague March 14-19.

Squirts Bow To Napanee In Close Game

The visiting Napanee club was forced to go all out here last night to pull out a narrow 4-3 victory over Belleville in another of those exciting "squirt" exhibitions. The game preceded the Pepsi-Lindsay game.

As always, the pint-sized youngsters went at full speed from start to finish. As far as the kids are concerned, the Stanley Cup might well be up for grabs at each of these games.

Both the Napane and Belleville teams will be taking part in a day-long Squirt Hockey tournament which will be held at Napanee on March 17.

T. Meagher scored two of Belleville's three goals last night while D. McCormack getting the other one. D. Fobert and Demers each earned one assist.

T. Short, J. Hollis, M. Gordon and S. Knapp triggered the Napanee goals. D. Johnson T. Perry, Gordon and Short had an assist each.

Two Lead In Legion Curling

KIRKLAND LAKE (CP) — After three rounds in the Canadian Legion provincial curling championship played Friday two rinks were undefeated and held identical records.

Gord MacDonald's North Bay quartet and Murray MacGregor Guelph foursome curled their way to three victories.

The two will meet today in what could prove to be the most important game of the playdown.

Steve Stratford, the defending champion from Virginiatown, had trouble getting started and could only manage one victory in three starts. Stratford who had only himself and another member of last year's championship rink, lost the first two draws, then, in a one - sided game defeated Glen Rockel of Welland 11-1 in seven ends for his first win.

In the first draw MacDonald defeated Stratford 8-4, then whipped Rockel 10-5 before meeting Russ Miller of London, Ont., in the evening draw. Prior to this game, both clubs held an unblemished record.

After six ends, MacDonald held a comfortable 6-2 lead but had to go down to the last rock in the final end before coming up with a 7-6 victory.

The Guelph rink defeated Ross Coward of Orillia 10-3 in the first draw and beat Stratford 9-7 in the second draw. In the evening game, MacGregor downed Carl Hussey's crew from Cornwall 11-4.

Says West Will Have Major Loop

SEATTLE (AP) — President Al Leader of the Western Hockey League predicted today the booming circuit, spanning 1,500 miles from Edmonton to Los Angeles, will become a major league within five years.

"The procedure is simple," said Leader. "We need only to declare the WHL a major league."

For several reasons the declaration will not come tomorrow, or next month, or next month, or next year, he said.

They were:

The draft agreement, by which the National Hockey League can take players from the WHL, does not expire until 1964.

The WHL should have six arenas of major league calibre—meaning seating capacity of 10,000-up—before taking the step.

"Before we challenge for the Stanley Cup we want to be sure we won't be humiliated." This means player improvement, "possibly when the draft is eliminated."

Attendance and enthusiasm in the United States cities have prompted the optimism for an early rise in stature. Portland joined the league last season and soon was playing to capacity houses. San Francisco and Los Angeles, added this season, have had amazing success at the gate.

West Tops Junior Ski Contests

PORT ARTHUR (CP)—Central and Alberta division teams swept all but one event Friday in the first day of the 11th annual Canadian junior ski championships at Port Arthur's Mount Baldy Ski Club.

Led by brothers Wayne and Scott Henderson, the Alberta team placed one-two in boys' downhill. Wayne edged Scott by one-tenth of a second on two runs. In third place was Albert Gerry from the central division.

The central girls' team swept both downhill and cross-country competition, literally walking away with top positions. Ricki Schluderman of Winnipeg ran the fast downhill course in a two-run combined time of 95.3 seconds, 2½ seconds ahead of her nearest rival, Sheila Pike, the only female member of the Alberta team. In third place was Randy Croome of the central team.

A former Lakeheader, Barbara Walker, skiing for the Quebec team, was fourth while [illegible]dy Young, also of the central division, was fifth.

EPL Expansion Hinted

Wolves Win 3 For 'Rock'

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sudbury Wolves Friday night won their third straight game under new coach Murph Chamberlain and grabbed what seems to be an unbreakable grip on the fourth and last playoff spot in the Eastern Professional Hockey League.

The Wolves, coming from behind 1-0 and 2-1 deficits, dropped the sixth-place Sault Ste. Marie Thunderbirds 4-3.

The victory gave Sudbury a 10-point spread over North Bay Trappers.

Don Cherry, a defenceman, scored twice to lead the Wolves Jake Henderickson who had three against the Sault Thursday, and Dennis Rathwell scored one each

Rathwell, a sophomore, has shown great improvement since being placed on a line with 10-year major league veteran Leo Labine Rathwell also had a goal in Sudbury's Thursday win over the Thunderbirds

Ed Kachur, Milan Marcetta and former Sudbury player Jack Martin scored for the Thunderbirds

Sudbury fired 26 shots at goalie Ricky Charon, up from Unionville of the Ontario Junior A League to replace regular Gerry Cheevers Cheevers has been called to Rochester of the American League to replace the injured Don Simmons.

Goalie Carl Wetzel faced 36 shots for the Wolves.

MAY EXPAND

Off the ice Friday, there were indications of expansion—or relocation—in the league

Dave King, a shopping centre owner in London, Ont, applied for a franchise and said that if he got it, he would apply to New York Rangers of the National League for a working agreement. The Rangers now are operating the Kitchener-Waterloo club as a farm team.

EPHL President John J. Urie said other applications have been received from two cities, one in the United States. They requested anonymity for the moment.

It's possible, Urie said, the league will be expanded to eight teams next season.

Basketball

The Madoc Senior Rolling Roaches captured the Centre Hastings Basketball trophy on Friday night. They had gone through the whole schedule and had not been beaten. They defeated Tweed in a close, hard fought game by a 37-31 score. Madoc was led by Hughes with 12 and O'Connor with 11, while Tweed's marksmen were Snowden 17 and Walker 10.

The Juniors had a much higher scoring game as they, too won CHSSA basketball downing Tweed 69-63. In this encounter Madoc's big guns were Colin Chambers 24, Bill Roscoe 17, John Hicks 16 and "Sinc" Sinclair 12. Tweed's sharpshooters were Allcra 22, French 20 and Rivers 17.

The Senior Rolling Roaches from MHS also won their league crown even though Stirling beat them in the final game 8-7 in a very rough encounter. The Juniors beat Stirling but failed to win their division.

In an exhibition twin-bill with Campbellford both the Senior and Junior girls won, the Seniors by a wide margin, whereas the Juniors eked out a victory.

Toronto Rink Is Kitchener-Bound

OWEN SOUND (CP) — The Bayne Secord rink, all but one transplanted westerners now playing out of Toronto's Tam O'Shanter Club, finished undefeated Friday to win the Ontario curling championship.

The Secord crew disposed of their last opponents in the sixth and seventh draws of the eight-rink, round-robin series to take the title without a playoff. They will represent Southern Ontario in the Canadian championships at Kitchener March 5-9

Secord, 26, a former national high school champion from Richlea, Sask., defeated Joe Gurowka of Dixie 7-4 and Don Fawcett of Thornbury 9-3 to complete the sweep and eliminate any hope Bob Knippelberg of Ottawa RCAF had of catching him.

Knippelberg's rink, defeated only by Secord in the opening round, downed Evans Jenkins of Huntsville 11-7 and highly-rated Murray Roberts of Unionville 10-8 to finish with a record of six wins and a loss.

Roberts, who dropped both his games Friday, had a 4-3 record along with Abe DiMartile of Welland. Next at three wins and four losses were Don Varey of Brantford and Gurowka. Fawcett won one of his six games and Jenkins was winless.

HAVE FINE STREAK

The formidable Secord rink now has run up a 27-game winning streak. The four have not given up more than two shots in any of their last 130 ends of competition curling. In 84 ends here they allowed only 10 deuces and 21 singles.

With Secord are vice-skip Vern Larson and second Russ Lindberg, both of Bradwell, Sask., and lead Dave McDonough of Port Credit, Ont. It was their third challenge, and first success, for the Ontario crown

Scores Friday:

Sixth round—Varey 8 Fawcett 6, Secord 7 Gurowka 4, DiMartile 0 Roberts 7, Knippelberg 11 Jenkins 7

Seventh round—Secord 9 Fawcett 3, Varey 8 Gurowka 3, DiMartile 9 Jenkins 6, Knippelberg 10 Roberts 8.

Track Team 'Respected' In NY Meet

NEW YORK (CP) — Bolstered by a three-for-three showing in its last appearance, Canada's track squad was viewed with respect in advance assessments of tonight's national Amateur Athletic Union championships at Madison Square Garden.

Bill Crothers, of the University of Toronto, who won the 500-yard race and anchored the East York Track Club to victory in the two-mile relay in his last garden appearance Feb. 16, was favored in the 600 yards tonight but faced stiff competition from Jack Yerman of the U.S. Army.

Crothers' fellow-student at U. of T., Bruce Kidd, had a return engagement in the three-mile race with Sandor Iharos, the onetime Hungarian Olympic star whom he beat over two miles last time out.

One sports star missing from the meet is John Uelses, the world's first 16-foot pole vaulter, who is down with the flu.

Ron Delany of Ireland had bowed out of the mile earlier because of a heel injury, and Parry O'Brien, winner the last nine years, pulled out of the shot put.

Galt Terriers

'Lack Spirit and Desire'

CALGARY (CP) — Galt Terriers so far "just don't have the spirit and desire" they'll need for the world hockey championship, says team manager Len Gaudette.

"They're darned browned off with their own play," Gaudette sayd Thursday night, prior to Terriers' 10-3 exhibition victory over Calgary's Adderson Builders.

The Allan Cup champions, on a western swing before next month's world tournament in Colorado, are winning little better than 50 per cent of their games. They have been beaten three times, twice by wide margins.

Said Jack Roxburgh, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association:

"They're playing poorly. Galt has got the horses to win the world cup but right now they have problems. . . .

"There is definitely something wrong, but we'll find it."

Mustangs Whip Varsity 65-45

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Western Mustangs moved into first place in the Senior Intercollegiate basketball standings Friday night, whipping the University of Toronto 65-45.

Three Quickies Did It

Pepsi's Defeat Lindsay

By GEO. H. CARVER
Sports Editor

Three third-period goals in 63 seconds broke up a nip-and-tuck hockey tilt here last night and launched the Pepsi's to a 12-6 victory over the Lindsay Lumbermen.

The win gave the Lamirande crew first blood in the eastern Intermediate "A" round robin playdowns. They meet Kingston in the second leg on Monday night in the Limestone city.

The Lumberman had surged into a 5-5 tie at the end of a hard-fought second period after trailing 3-2 in the first. At this point it was anybody's ball game. It looked as though victory could swing either way.

Then it happened. After five minutes of the home-stretch period Ronny Hull gave the Pepsi's a 6-5 lead. Botly and Crawford fired home quickies in 13 seconds and the press box reached for obituary forms.

Chuck Rowbotham put the game beyond all reach of the fighting Lumbermen a half-minute later and the Pepsi's had it neatly wrapped up. They scored three more to Lindsay's single return before Ned Vitarelli's whistle sounded "Taps".

The Lumbermen proved the toughest opposition the Pepsi's have met so far. They are a fast-skating two-way hard checking crew and they know what to do when in front of the enemy net. They will give the big red club quite a tussle when the teams clash in Lindsay.

"Rags" Raglan was unable to play due to work commitments. Davy Jones did not dress due to illness and "Wiener" Brown also was absent from the Pepsi lineup.

It was one of the better games seen here this season until the roof fell in on the Lumbermen in that 63-second Pepsi splurge.

Bob Taylor playing his best game of the season sparked the Pepsi's offensive scoring three goals and garnering two assists.

Ron Hull with one and three and Gary Goyer with six assists also stood out. Lionel Botly and Keith MacDonald came up with two goals and an assist with Crawford, Doran and Rowbotham scoring singles. Shaker Baker also had a one and one record.

The Horton-Kelly-Jewell line was the power circuit of the Lumbermen. Horton paced the club with three goals and two assists; Jewell had one and four and Kelly one and two. Reeds scored the sixth Lindsay goal.

The game was a heavy-bumping affair with Referee Vitarelli calling them "close to the vest." He handed out 14 sentences, ten to the Pepsi's. Eddie Marineau drew two minors and a misconduct and a game misconduct.

Nearly 600 fans saw a tight, fast hockey game for two periods with the final score not indicating the play. Both Kemp and Barclay, the respective goalies, came up with fine, close-in saves, Jewell missed giving the Lumbermen a third-period 6-5 lead when he broke away alone only to have Barclay beat him Previously he had scored on a similar play.

The second period produced the best hockey of the night. Down a goal, the Lumbermen unleashed their best effort and in seven minutes Jewell and Reeds gave them a 4-3 lead. Taylor lashed back to tie it and Horton again gave the victors the edge but Taylor, roaring in close, knotted the 5-5 count.

Came the third-period trio of Pepsi's quickies and that was that.

Offered $100,000 For Club

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dave Dauphinee, general manager of Vancouver Canucks said Friday he has received a firm offer of $100,000 from a California businessman to buy the Western Hockey League team.

Whip Red Wings 5-2

Guelph Springs Upset

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The underdogs had their day in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior Series Friday night as the fourth-place Guelph Royals kept Hamilton Red Wings from tying for first place with Montreal.

As Guelph trimmed Hamilton 5-2, fifth-place Niagara Falls Flyers defeated third-place St. Catharines Teepees 4-2. Guelph retained its two-point hold on the fourth and last playoff berth

In Guelph, the win was the first over Hamilton in nine starts this season. Billy Taylor paced the Royals with a pair of goals, his 19th and 20th of the season. Singles were added by Duke Harris, Don Dibernardino and Dave McComb. Ron Harris and Wayne Rivers were the Hamilton scorers.

MAY MAKE PLAYOFFS

In Niagara Falls, the Flyers' win sparked hopes for ousting Guelph from the last playoff spot. Niagara Falls has 38 points to Guelph's 40 and both have four games remaining in the schedule.

Rival goalies Wayne Rutledge of the Flyers and Rodger Crozier of the Teepees turned in excellent performances in a game which produced 79 shots on goal.

Gary Dornhoefer, Gary Harmer, Barry Kibbs and Jean Paul scored for the Flyers. St. Catharines counted goals by Fred Stanfield and Doug Jarrett.

After two periods of quiet play and two minor penalties, the third frame was marred by scrambles which produced six penalties, five to the Flyers.

ROCHESTER, N.U. (AP)—Bobby Perreault posted his second shutout of the season Friday night as Hershey Bears defeated Rochester Americans 3-0 in an American Hockey League game.

Al Johnson, Clete Morison and Hec Lalande scored Hershey's goals—the last two coming in the final three minutes.

Juliet Prowse Won't Be Third Mrs. Sinatra

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Dancer Juliet Prowse won't be the third Mrs. Frank Sinatra.

She and the singer broke off their engagement Thursday night, blaming career trouble

Sinatra and Miss Prowse announced six weeks ago they planned to marry.

The break came suddenly. There was a terse announcement:

"A conflict of career interests has led us to make this decision jointly. We both feel it is better to make it now rather than later."

Friends provided amplification. The prevailing theory:

Sinatra wanted his bride to be Mrs. Sinatra, and just that: No more career. Apparently she agreed.

"Frankie's word is going to be law after we're married," she told a reporter.

Then film, TV and stage offers poured in for Miss Prowse—prompted, a cynical few said, by news of her impending marriage to one of Hollywood's best known actors. She began to toy again with career ideas.

Sinatra's press representative made the formal announcement about cocktail time, giving the Sunset Strip big news to digest along with the maritini olives. The Sinatra-Prowse affair had been one of the spectacular developments in Hollywood's winter social season.

Sinatra, 46, long a bachelor, a milionaire with a string of gorgeous girls, surprised even close friends when he announced he planned to marry the leggy dancer from South Africa.

Miss Prowse, 25, never married before and new in Hollywood, was much less famous than some of Sinatra's dates and less flashy than others.

Sinatra's two previous marriages—to childhood sweetheart Nancy Barbato and actress Ava Gardner — also were plagued with career troubles. His skyrocketing fame as a crooner rocked the first and Miss Gardner's prominence for a while outstripped his own.

Sweden May Bar Pro Boxing

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Professional boxing may be banned in Sweden after a controversial decision by the Swedish Boxing Federation.

A Liberal legislator and staunch anti - boxing man, Yngve Hamrin, has asked parliament for an all-out ban on pro boxing in Sweden. This year the motion may well be carried.

Polling lawmakers Friday, Stockholm papers said odds for a ban are 50-50.

In the other game, the Gaels took the lead on a goal by Howie Green at the 37-second mark but Jim McLellan tied the count shortly after. Queen's scored three goals in less than six minutes and had a 4-2 lead going into the second period.

Other scorers for Queen's were Andy McDougall with two goals and Lawrence Windover, Jim Vanbrunt, Romeo Lavasseur and Pete McEwen with one each. Bob Brown and Pete Randle scored the Marlins other goals.

STARTS MONDAY "TOWN WITHOUT PITY" VIOLENT DRAMA, PREMIERES LOCALLY

"Town Without Pity," starring Kirk Douglas, will have its Belleville premiere on Monday at the Park Theatre. Produced and directed by the noted international film - maker Gottfried Reinhardt, the United Artists release introduces to American audiences Christine Kaufmann, the popular young teenage German actress.

Silvia Reinhardt and Georg Hurdalek wrote the screenplay based on the celebrated, widely translated book by Manfred Gregor, whose first German novel, "The Bridge," was also made into a highly-acclaimed motion picture.

"Town Without Pity" is a violent tale dealing with four American G.I.'s stationed in Europe who are acused of assaulting a pretty young German girl and are tried for their lives before a U.S. military court martial. Douglas portrays the defense attorney in the production which was photographed entirely on European locations in France, Germany and Austria. One of America's most able actors, E. G. Marshall, co-stars as the prosecuting attorney.

The musical score of "Town Without Pity" was composed by Academy Award winner Dimitri Tiomkin, who teamed with Ned Washington for the title song. Kurt Hasse was cinematographer and Hermann Teller edited the drama.

Astrological Forecast

For February 25

By SYDNEY OMARR

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): You could fool yourself by depending too much on abilities and promises of others. Seek spiritual guidance, strength. Be self-reliant. Check budget, goals, ambitions. Remain calm.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): Fine day for doing more listening than talking. Cycle not at peak . . . best to be cautious about actions, agreements, promises. Friends could prove very comforting.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21): Take care of the little things . . . and the big ones will take care of themselves. Check details . . . ask if you do not know. Features in your newspaper could provide answers, inspiration, ideas.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21): Like Gemini, it's very necessary for you to check fine print . . . to attend to so-called minor matters. Trying to put over big deal today could cause embarrassment. Loved ones need attention.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21): There could be some opposition to plans . . . some minor irritation. But, Leo, challenge is spice of life for you . . .. you can win over those who, at first, appear as opponents. Be sincere.

Virgo (Aug 22 to Sept. 22): Be charming to relatives, visitors. A gift, a kind word, understanding . . could react so favorably that you may profit materially. Check tendency to argue. Take care while travelling.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Excellent for hobbies . . . especially those which provide you with creative outlet. Strive for self-improvement . . . emphasis is on relaxation, reading, spiritual guidance. Meditate.

Scorpio (Oct 23 to Nov. 21): Cycle up. Make plans which will pay off in future. Try to be realistic . . . take one step at a time. Tendency is to view persons, situations through rosy haze.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Time for engaging in activities based on selfless motives. This includes church, charity work. Today put thoughts, ideas on paper. Take broad view.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Being with friends is important today. Strive for harmony. Discuss ideas, problems. Stress mature action. A sense of humor may be required in evening . . . one close to you could make faux pas.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You could make important new contact today. Don't press for action . . . a relaxed attitude best now. Let others talk . . . you listen. This works to your advantage.

Pisces (Feb 20 to Mar. 20): Look below surface . . . strive for truth. Don't believe fantastic tales — it's not profitable. Eliminate "fluff." Know what you really desire — and strive to achieve it.

• • •

If today is your birthday—excellent year for expanding activities. You are sensitive to feelings of others . . . often you bend over backwards to avoid offending. Unfortunately, others play upon your sympathy. This year do a few favors for yourself.

• • •

General Tendencies — Day when international figure could make statements which seem to contradict previous position. Be prepared for surprises, revelations. Make sure you know all the facts.

Monday, February 26

By SYDNEY OMARR

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19)—Today you may find yourself working very hard . . . accomplishing little. Knowing this, relieve self-pressure. Do what you can . . . but don't buck the odds. Watch and wait.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20)—A kind of aggressive quality is apt to come to the fore today. Basically, this is good. Those around you may get their backs up. Try a little self-restraint, patience.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21)—Much power gathering in your favor . . . but today not time to test influence. Be willing to cooperate with those who seek aid . . . be especially considerate of fellow workers. Be sympathetic.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21)—Now is time for expressing love, creative abilities desires. Be vibrant, alive. Personal magnetism shines through, attracting others. Take a chance . . . . make change . . . accept challenge!

Leo (July 2 2to Aug. 21)—Aspects today are not at top for you. But you still have opportunity to get house in order. Take time to think, plan. Withhold direct action, if possible.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22)—You may feel as if a load has been lifted from your shoulders. Strive for greater independence by discussing ideas with right person . . . then shape your future plans.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)—Good news could be received in connection with money matters. Recent days saw you quite concerned . . . now, pressure lifts. Tonight, share interests with friends.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)—Cycle up, but over-confidence is to be avoided. Tendency is to be so sure that you make mistakes which ordinarily would never get by. Take a little extra time with details.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) — A little uncertainty could cause a great deal of self-pity. Refuse to permit emotional excess. Be practical. Practise self-discipline. Don't "let yourself go"!

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) — Wishful thinking may be fine for relaxation . . . but you are imbued with sense of reality. Fooling yourself can become a dangerous game . . . face facts!

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Tendency is toward impatience. You want to accomplish . . . to discern results. Your wishes could turn into realities if you don't force the issue. Take it easy!

Pisces (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20)—Favorable luner aspect to your sign means you can turn hopes, ambitions into realities . . . If you take time to assure that your abilities, talents are not wasted.

If today is your birthday . . . this year should see you entering new projects, displaying greater independence of thought, action. You are a great example of both practicality and imagination. You would never, for example, write poetry without believing that eventually it would be pulished.

General Tendencies: General is toward restless mood. Cycle up for Scorpio, Sagittarius, Capricorn. Those with soothing words, attitude gain most. If you attempt to push, press . . . you will be rebuffed.

Earn As You Serve
For Six Weeks
In The Militia

If you are between 18 and 50, and meet enrolment standards, you can help Canada and yourself by taking part in the Special Militia Training Program. One hundred thousand additional men are needed as soon as possible to help the Canadian Army Militia carry out National Survival Operations in the event of nuclear attack. Six-week training courses for these new citizen soldiers are being held in your own community — the next one starting February 26th. Last course begins April 16th.

During the course you are given all-day training five days a week. You live at home and receive the same pay as a regular soldier, plus a living allowance.

To be sure of a vacancy, you should act right away. Get full details NOW, without obligation, at the address below that is nearest to your home:

Thomasburg

THOMASBURG — On the evening of February 9, Stirling Odd Fellows lodge visited the Thomasburg lodge. The District Deputy, Brother George Carlisle, who is a member of the Stirling lodge, made his official visit to Thomasburg lodge. A social half-hour was enjoyed at the close of the lodge proceedings.

Mr. Thomas Bull was a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Yorke and Mrs. J. E. Chappell in the Carmel neighborhood one day last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Lorne H. Thompson of Trenton, were Sunday evening visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Thompson.

At the recent regular service of Thomasburg United Church a beautiful plaque depicting the symbols of the United Church, made by Indian residents near Norway House, Northern Manitoba, was dedicated by the pastor, Mr. Geo. Dyson.

The Rev. Donald and Mrs. Richardson, formerly of Thomasburg and stationed for the past couple of years at Norway House, forwarded the lovely masterpiece of intricate colored beadwork, tastefully framed to Thomasburg church.

The pupils and teachers of Thomasburg school, enjoyed their annual Valentine party on Wednesday afternoon in the school.

The potluck supper, sponsored by the United Church Women in the vestry on Thursday evening, was well attended.

A short program followed the supper. Mrs. Daniel Walker rendered a piano solo; the Explorers group sang "When Mothers of Salem" and Mr. Geo. Dyson gave an English folk song as a solo, after which Mrs. Ernest Morton showed colored slides of various historic areas in Florida, which she and her husband had visited in their trip to Florida last year.

Until this week Thomasburg has been fortunate as regards the amount of snow, but the weatherman is making up for lost time now. With the continued cold weather, icy roads and now a great deal of snow, no one will quickly forget the winter of '62.

Madoc Junction

Congratulations are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Fred White on the birth of their daughter, Janice Marie at Belleville General Hospital on February 14th.

Mrs. Barker, who had been convalescing at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Bridges for the past few weks, has returned to her home in Stirling.

Those who attended the annual Ladies' Night of Stirling Lodge No. 69 A.F. and A.M. on Friday, February 16th, were Mr. Maurice G. Clancy W.M. and Mrs. Clancy; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Fitchett.

Lloyd Clancy was a supper guest on Friday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Harlow, of Stirling.

There was a fairly good number in attendance at the afternoon service held at Eggleton United Church on Sundy. Mr. Dyson delivered an inspiring sermon taking for his text — St. Matthew 19:16th verse.

Fake Telegram Sent in Name Of President

TORONTO (CP) — Howard D. Graham, president of the Toronto Stock Exchange, said a fake telegram was sent in his name Friday to the London and Dublin exchanges stating that trade in Northgate Exploration Ltd. shares had been suspended here.

Mr. Graham said the exchange would investigate the telegram, filed by telephone, but it would be difficult to trace. Meanwhile he has asked telegraph companies not to accept future wires without confirmation.

Mr. Graham said it was not the first fake telegram sent in his name or the names of other Toronto Exchange officials.

"People do it when they want to influence the trading in a stock," he said.

Don't Replace Parts Without Good Reason

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

Most motorists are aware that the ignition system is a favorite breeding place for many little 'bugs' which disturb engine pep and money-saving performance. Except for wiring defects, none is readily obvious when you glance under the hood, so the average owner relies on an expert's inspection. This is fine — smart car care — or at least it starts out this way. But then, there's a tendency to go a bit overboard and actually waste money on new plugs and points.

For example, it's anybody's guess how many sets of good spark plugs are dumped and replaced when cleaning and regapping would have done the job nicely. And, how many times are badly fouled plugs replaced with the same type, when a hotter or colder plug is really needed? The same holds true for ignition points. Sure — they're comparatively cheap, but it doesn't follow that they must always be replaced. Often, only a slight gap adjustment is the cure.

From M.H.: "Is it true that low gear is better when roads are icy with an automatic transmission?"

(A) It's no cure-all . . but low gear will help cut wheelspin.

N.A. writes: "My car is 8 years old. Ever since it was new, I've used premium gas as specified in the manual. This year, however, I am experimenting with regular and find that the engine runs just as well and mileage is just as good. Have I been wasting money all this time?"

(A) As mentioned some time ago, octane ratings are ever changing. Today's regular grades match the octane value of premiums of years ago.

H.P. asks: "I have a very tight turn to make from my garage to the street. My know-it-all neighbor says it's ruining my front tires. I don't get what he's driving at, do you?"

From T.P.: "Remind your readers that if every one always drove the way they do during the first 1000 miles of breaking in a new car, insurance rates would really shrink."

(A) Right — and so would car repair bills.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

OUR ROBIN

By WINIFRED E. WILSON

If you have already seen a robin this year you need not be sure that it is a new arrival. Probably it wintered in Canada, for it is not very uncommon to see one any month of the year. Robins manage to survive the cold largely on account of their fondness for wild fruit that has been hanging on trees since late summer — the fruit of mountain ash, high bush cranberry, mulberry, cherry, and so on. Naturalists tell us that the robins we see in winter are most likely birds that nested considerably farther north. Those that summer with us generally spend the cold weather somewhat farther south, and return only when they are able to find some patches of lawn free from snow and soft enough for them to dig down their long bills and reach their favorite earthworms.

SPRING ON WAY

How glad we are to hear the loud "tut-tut-tut" of a robin! It makes us feel that spring must surely be on the way. And who does not thrill at the first robin song of spring? Surely the translation "cheer-up, cheerily" is a good one! However, it is rarely given as early as this, even though it is the male birds, the singers, that come back first. They look for a suitable nesting site, and when they have made a choice tell the world in song that here is home and no intruders will be permitted.

The spot is very often close to a dwelling, for in spite of their frantic actions when disturbed robins seem to have a fondness for human beings. In fact they are noted for building on verandah ledges, over front doors, and on window-seats, so near to us that we can easily distinguish between the father, with his black head and red breast, and the mother, in her duller costume. No doubt you have even seen the three little white marks around the eye that form a broken circle.

FLOCK IN AUTUMN

Although so determined to hold a territory for the breeding season with no near relatives, robins flock in autumn, and are to be found in groups of hundreds in their southern, winter resorts.

People fresh from England are confused when our robin is pointed out to them. Their own robin is a cousin of the European nightingale, quite unrelated to our American bird. The British robin is smaller, and has a much shorter bill. Actually, the red of the breast is one of the few points of similarity.

The father stickleback fish loves children and looks after them by himself as they grow up. He builds a nest by sticking plants together.
Then he courts a lady friend by gesturing with his head and persuades her to lay eggs in the nest.
Until the eggs hatch, he will flap his fins above the eggs to be sure they have a constant supply of fresh water.
If Junior tries to escape, father will grab him and put him back. Soon they become too big to keep, and they escape, never to come back.
After the tiny fish are born, they grow quickly and become very curious about what is going on outside their nest.
Mr. Stickleback then builds another nest and starts a whole new family.

'61 Moose Kill In Tweed Region Was 45 Animals

By WILLIAM BITTLE

Moose hunters in the Tweed district of the Lands and Forests Department registered a kill of 45 animals in the 1961 season.

The hunt last year was favorable in comparison to the previous three seasons.

The first open season was declared in 1956 when 36 moose were taken. In 1958 the second season 41 animals were harvested and in 1960 52 were killed.

Of the 1961, 45 kill, 14 were bulls, 19 cows and 12 were calves. The dozen calves consisted of six males and six females.

Alternate year seasons were considered inadequate to properly exploit the increasing moose herd, therefore, regulations were made for an annual open season on moose to coincide with the open season for deer. At the same time licence fees were reduced from $26.00 to $10.00 to encourage more hunting.

District records show that 362 licences were purchased in Tweed. Licence return cards show 209 licensed moose hunters hunted in this district and 21 persons did not apparently seem interested in filing returns with the Department indicating their hunting success.

Actually there were many more than 209 persons after moose. In numerous cases a hunt group of 8 or 10 men would have one or two moose licences aside from deer licences. Everyone in the gang was a potential moose hunter. The actual success was far less than the 21 per cent indicated.

It was felt by some groups that an annual season would result in the annihilation of the moose herd. However, from observations and reports it would appear that hunting to date has had no adverse effect on the moose population.

Keeping a close watch on the present population to foretell future use is partly the hunters' responsibility. This is why the department needs every Moose Hunter Return Card properly filled in, regardless of whether a moose was killed or not.

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Pulver motored to Newburgh on Thursday and were guests at the wedding anniversary dinner for Mr. and Mrs. Percy Hudgins, at the home of their son, Mr. Burton Hudgins. The Newburgh U.C.W. served a turkey dinner.

Housing Project Manager Fired For Helping Tenants Pay Rent

ST. LOUIS (AP) — When tenants of a low-rent housing project here couldn't pay all of a month's rent, Burt Steingruby made up the difference.

That cost him his job Wednesday as manager of the project, which houses 708 families.

"I have no regrets," said Steingruby. "I would do the same thing all over again."

Steingruby, 43, father of five, resigned when the St. Louis Housing Authority gave him the option of quitting or being fired.

Charles Farris, director of the authority, said Steingruby violated agency policy by accepting part payments on rent and by keeping his own books. No money was missing.

DIDN'T CHARGE INTEREST

Steingruby explained "Some families came to me with a partial payment, and I used my own money to make up the balance of their rent."

Steingruby said he never charged interest.

"I never lost a penny. I don't consider it as money lost. It's charity helping these people. I made $600 a month, that's more than I needed."

Steingruby admitted that during his four years as manager of several housing projects he had not been repaid about $1,000.

But, he said, the alternative to helping the tenants was eviction. "There's no point in moving these families into the project to help them and then throwing them out in the street again."

Steingruby now has a job as a foreman in a small plant earning about half his salary as project manager.

Science at Work

FATS AND CANCER

Promising leads to the treatment of cancer and atherosclerosis (fatty deposits in the arteries) have been disclosed by the medical school of the University of California at Los Angeles.

Noting that cancer cells need lots of certain fats, the school said research by Dr. James Mead "has suggested the possibility of making lipids (fats) structurally similar to those required by the cancer but which could not be utilized by it."

"The cancer would be fooled into faking the useless lipids and thus would be starved."

Mead also has discovered peroxide compounds, not normally found in body tissues, in the fatty deposits which cause heart and blood vessel disease.

"The body has many ways of destroying these poisonous compounds," Mead said. "There doesn't seem to be a good reason why they should remain in the body long enough to be deposited in the arteries. Perhaps when we solve this mystery we may have a good lead to the cause of atherosclerosis."

SHELTER BYPRODUCT

Thirty-five serious kids in Newport Beach, Calif., have built a fallout shelter to study the problems of life in crowded quarters such as spaceships.

The students are members of Science Explorer Scout Post 201, sponsored by scientists.

Last April, while their fellow teenagers were surfing and sailing nearby, the scouts began building a shelter 20 feet long, five feet wide and six feet high.

The kids call it a "sealed systems research cell." They plan such projects as how long can you stay inside without getting claustrophobia.

BUILT FOR BUGS

They call it the bug house.

It's a room - size box in which a make-believe sun will rise and set and a cloudburst happen whenever scientists desire.

Built by Minneapolis Honeywell's ordnance division for Purdue University's department of entomology, it will duplicate temperature, humidity, rainfall and solar conditions found in the natural habitat of insects anywhere in the world.

The chamber will help scientists study the life habits of insects.

Dear Henry—My name is Mary. I am 8 years old. I have a 2-year-old brother. I don't like him. It is because everyone likes him better than me. And they don't pay attention to me either when he is around. What should I do?—IGNORED.

Dear Ignored—Don't worry, your parents love you just as much or more than your brother, but babies need lots of attention. You be a good sister and help your brother and mother.—HENRY.

Dear Henry—Every time I go to visit my sister some 300 miles from here, my 7-year-old girl acts as if I would never come back. She keeps crying and makes parting miserable.—MISERABLE.

Dear Miserable:—Your daughter loves you and that's quite normal. Show her on the map that you are going away only a very short distance, about 2 inches. Promise her a present so that your going will be looked forward to.—HENRY (with help from sister Anne.)

Dear Henry:—My son is a nut over wrestling. Every Saturday he runs in and turns on the wrestling. He is now talking about being a wrestler. I do not want him to be a bruiser.—A WRESTLER'S MOTHER.

Dear Wrestler's Mother:—It is a lot easier to watch on TV a big 250 pounder get his feathers ruffled than it is to do the ruffling. There is the same difference between being interested in wrestling and being a wrestler.—HENRY.

Dear Henry:—I don't like to brag, but all the boys that see me ask me for a date and to go steady. Every boy that I meet asks that and I don't know what to say. Could you help me? How can I hide my fatal beauty?. I am 11. —BEAUTIFUL.

Dear Beautiful:—Don't try to hide your fatal beauty, and you will have a bigger choice when you are older. Right now you are too young to date or to go steady. You can tell the rest of the crowd that too.—HENRY.

S.A. Terrorists Shoot Down Innocent Arabs

Press Drive to Ruin Algerian Peace Plans

CP from AP-Reuters

ALGIERS — European secret army guerrillas were shooting down innocent Moslems at random today.

At least 10 Moslems were killed within a few hours as the right-wing extremists pressed their cold-blooded terrorist drive to sabotage Algerian peace plans.

Six Arabs were shot dead in the Rue Michelet, a main Algiers street. Another four were killed by a hail of gunfire from a car speeding down the neighboring Rue Messienier.

Riot troops with armored cars rolled down the Rue Michelet while police sealed off the area of the indiscriminate slaughter.

Algeria's provisional government was expected to approve a peace agreement with France today, and even more terrorism was expected from the Secret Army Organization battling to block a cease-fire and independence for the French North African territory.

MAKES ARRESTS

Police said today they had arrested two Europeans who had admitted to carrying out at least six attacks each on Saturday.

The murders have provoked a series of strikes by professionals and tradesmen as well as students to back demands for better police protection.

Moslem students walked out of classes today at Algiers University and announced they would not return until firm control and security was established.

Postmen also were on strike. They walked off their jobs last Thursday after five of their number were shot on their rounds.

Informed sources said Algerian leaders attending the conference of the rebel government's national council in Tripoli, Libya, probably would hold up an announcement of their acceptance of the peace terms until rebel premier Ben Youssef Khedda returns to Tunis, the insurgent headquarters.

The French cabinet already has approved the agreement to end the Moslem rebellion. The 54 members of the rebel parliament have been holding secret sessions in Tripoli since last Thursday.

As Sunday night's session ended, Ferhat Abbas, former premier of the provisional government, hinted that agreement was near.

The fighting — much of it French against French—carries on. Police said 66 persons were killed during a weekend that marked one of the heaviest raids by the right-wing secret army so far—a bazooka rocket attack Sunday night on the French military barracks at Maison Caree, a suburb of Algiers.

The rockets set afire gasoline storage tanks and at least two persons were known to have died. But it was feared that possibly eight others were killed or wounded in the attack.

In the western port city of Oran heavily - armed troops sealed off an entire European quarter where nine persons

26 Fatalities Across Canada During Weekend

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Traffic accidents accounted for 16 of the 26 accidental deaths in Canada during the weekend.

Quebec had the highest toll, with seven road deaths, three by fire, one drowning and one from exposure.

Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Manitoba and Alberta reported fatality - free weekends in a Canadian Press survey from 6 p.m. local time Friday to midnight EST Sunday.

There were three road deaths in Ontario, two persons died in fires and one was killed apparently in a hunting accident.

In British Columbia a boy choked to death on sawdust and four persons died on the roads. Saskatchewan reported a single traffic death as did Nova Scotia, which also reported one death from other causes.

The survey does not include industrial accidents, known suicides or slayings.

Ontario dead

Albert Poirier, 58, and his wife Albertine, 51, of Oshawa, when their car collided with a truck Saturday on Highway 401, nine miles east of Prescott.

Barney Walch, St. Thomas businessman, found shot Saturday night in a field a few miles from St. Thomas after a day's hunting.

Thomas Bailey, 37, when his new frame home at Vernon, 18 miles south of Ottawa, was destroyed by fire Saturday night.

Herbert Chincourt, 61, of Windsor, when his car smashed into a hydro pole in Windsor Sunday.

Cold Weather Will Follow Freezing Rain

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Freezing rain Monday spread a hazardous layer of ice over deep banks of snow in southern Ontario and was moving eastwards into Quebec. The rain became snow around the Georgian Bay area of Ontario.

West of Ontario the weather was mainly sunny and cold.

Newfoundland, hit by a series of heavy snow storms this month, also had sunny, cold weather for a change.

The bad weather moving across southern Ontario and Quebec was expected to bring cloud and snow to the Maritime provinces later.

Snow - clearing crews were still working on the accumulation from three central Canadian snow storms last week when the rain came, icing sidewalks and roads in the early morning but melting as temperatures climbed.

The cloud and rain were expected to clear by Monday night to be followed by the West's clear, cold weather.

Today's Chuckle

The average girl needs more beauty than brains because the average man can see better than he can think.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: A storm that moved out of the southwestern United States over the weekend will move through southern Ontario today. Precipitation from this storm is expected to begin as freezing rain in the extreme southern part of Ontario and then with rising temperatures to change to rain during the forenoon. Snow is expected in regions north of Georgian Bay. Major snowfalls of three to six inches are likely to accumulate in a belt through northern Georgian Bay and Timagami regions.

PRIME MINISTER IS CONFIDENT OF OUTCOME

Spells Out Policy On Many Issues

EDMONTON (CP) — Prime Minister Diefenbaker spoke confidently about the outcome of the next federal general election and spelled out Conservative governsent policy on a number of issues Saturday in a whirlwind visit to the heartland of Social Credit.

"We look forward with anticipation to the election, however near or far it is," he told the windup banquet of the Alberta Progressive Conservative convention.

Earlier, at a press conference, he indicated that if war broke out Canadian forces would be armed with nuclear weapons.

"Should war come, are we going to arm Canadians with bows and arrows?" he asked. Then he noted that Canada's 65 Voodoo interceptors and bomarc missiles will be more effective with nuclear warheads, adding "should war come we must have available the necessary instruments."

SPEEDY DELIVERY?

Asked whether this country could get these warheads fast enough from the United States in the event of war if Canada did not already have them, he said he could not reply for security reasons. But he referred to a recent report that the warheads could be made available in 30 minutes to an hour.

At the same time, the prime minister reiterated that disarmament is Canada's chief international goal. "We don't want to do anything that will increase the nuclear family of nations."

He dealt with a number of other subjects at the press conference.

1. Trade with Cuba:

Canada's desire was for multilateral trade to the widest possible extent. "We are not concerned with the ideological views of the countries with which we trade."

May Take Lawsuit to Decide Owner of Hoard of Gold Found

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A hoard of gold coins, totalling $2,300 so far buried by a thrifty housewife more than half a century ago, has been unearthed at Heber, Utah.

Now, say those involved, it may take a lawsuit to decide whose money it is.

The cache was unearthed by a bulldozer pushing back the mud around a new bowling alley after last month's heavy rains. In the mud, the caterpillar operator, Bob Reese of Payson, Utah, spotted $5, $10 and $20 gold pieces.

This is how they came there, says Mrs. G. J. Woolstenhulme of Taft, Calif.:

The site formerly was that of the family home of Jane McDonald Clyde, Mrs. Woolstenhulme's grandmother, and her husband, rancher George Washington Clyde. They completed the home in 1868.

Through the 40 years Mrs. Woolstenhulme lived in that house, she and her brother and three sisters kept hearing about a pot of gold their grandmother was supposed to have hidden.

Clyde died in 1899 and Mrs. Clyde died in 1903.

"Grandma was forgetful at the end and she told her children she couldn't remember where she had hidden the gold," Mrs. Woolstenhulme said. "I know they dug around for it, but they never could find it. When I was a child, we used to play the game of looking for the pot of gold."

Seven years ago surviving heirs sold the property. It was acquired soon afterward by the state of Utah, which needed part of it for a highway. The old house burned and the debris was scooped into the cellar. Last fall the bowling alley was built there.

When word spread that Reese had gathtred up about $1,400 in gold coins, townspeople hurried to the scene with shovels and found another $900.

Members of the Clyde family, indicating they may sue for recovery, contend that under Utah's treasure trove law, buried treasure must revert to the rightful heirs.

Expect 250,000 to Line Route

Heavy Rains Greet Glenn On Arrival at Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — Astronaut John H. Glenn Jr. flew to Washington in a heavy rain today to receive new honors for being the first American to orbit the earth.

The presidential jet plane—President Kennedy was host on the flight — touched down at nearby Andrews Air Force Base after a flight from West Palm Beach, Fla.

The rain was so heavy it "scrubbed" plans for Glenn and the president to fly to the White House in a helicopter. Instead, they turned to a motorcade.

In order: the schedule was: A White House ceremony, a triumphant parade along Pennsylvania Avenue and an appearance before Congress.

It was the U.S. Army band that met the party. But it was the U.S. marine band—Glenn is a Lieutenant Colonel in the marines—that had the sole musical role in the parade from the White House to the capitol.

Cloudy skies and occasional rain were likely during the day. Even so, 250,000 persons were expected to line the route as Glenn steers the traditional course of U.S. heroes—a motorcade from the White House to the Capitol.

Government workers released at President Kennedy's direction and school children enjoying a special holiday will pack the sidewalks, with 17 bands blaring out their tunes at one or two-block intervals.

Nehru's Congress Party Takes Early Lead in Election

CP from AP-Reuters

NEW DELHI — Prime Minister Nehru's ruling Congress Party has taken an early lead in preliminary returns from India's national and state elections that ended Sunday.

On the national level, the Congress Party clinched the first three seats declared so far in the Lok Sabha (lower house).

On the state level, Congress candidates and their allies won 314 of the first 452 seats declared in 13 state assemblies and appeared assured of another five years of power in 13 of the 15 states.

The other two states held midterm elections in 1960 and 1961. The results were that the congress party held control of Orissa state and shared control in Kerala state with the Praja Socialists.

Partial returns showed however, that the party's grip may be weaker. In the early counting the Congress party lost 45 assembly seats it won in the 1957 eltctions and picked up only 20 seats from its opponents.

Nearly 15,000 candidates contested the 494 seats in the Lok Sabha and the 2,930 seats in the state assemblies.

Also at stake were the posts of chief minister in the states. Five of the minsters have been re-election and a sixth — the chief minister of Madras state—has a 14,000-vote majority.

As the counting of about 100,000,000 votes continued, Nehru's Congress Party appeared to be maintaining control but suffering occasional losses on the state level.

The key contest for Defence Minister V. K. Krishna Menon's North Bombay election district was not expected to be declared before Wednesday.

The battle, on which Nehru has staked his prestige, has become the focal point of the leftist-rightist struggle for primaly in the election.

Menon, 64, is opposed by Acharya Kripalanai, a 74-year-old Gandhian disciple, who alleges Menon is a Communist "fellow - traveller" leading the Congress Party on a hazardous leftist course.

The North Bombay contest was one of the most violent in the staggered 10-day election—the third since India became independent from Britain in 1947.

In one incident, a canvasser for Kripalani was stabbed to death Saturday night in Bombay. Police arrested 44 persons in the city for election offences.

PC MP Tells Young Tories Of Separatist Feelings

MONTREAL (CP) — Jean-Noel Tremblay, Progressive-Conservative member of Parliament for the Quebec riding of Roberval, said Saturday a political party is "a free association of free men," not an association that must bind its members together in permanent pursuit of the same interests and values.

Mr. Tremblay was addressing the annual convention of the Quebec Young Conservative Association, whose president — Pierre Durand of Montreal — had said earlier this week that the Roberval member favors Quebec separatism and should therefore be expelled from the party.

After Mr. Tremblay spoke, Mr. Durand said he would not introduce a resolution demanding his expulsion because "a man of the sincerity and integrity he has demonstrated here today is entitled to make his own decision about leaving or staying with the party.

"I am sure that if he really is a separatist, he will resign of his own accord," he said.

Mr. Tremblay said the principles "that guide us and cause us to act together in a political group must be reviewed and reexamined ceaselessly."

He said an elected representative did not fulfill his duties if he followed party directives blindly or followed a certain course of action just because most other members of the party were doing so.

" . . . I denounced the bumpy functioning of a regime that has not yet recognized in practice the rights of French-Canadians as full - fledged citizens."

There was room for diverse opinions now, just as at the time of Confederation, about how a valid and durable state should be formed. He considered the 1867 pact "a point on the path of our constitutional evolution, a stage and not a limit."

State Secretary Noel Dorion, speaking earlier in the day, said "Separatists are trying to divert us (French - speaking Canadians) from collaboration with our English - speaking compatriots at a time when they are showing more and more signs of understanding French - Canada's needs and aspirations."

The convention passed resolutions asking that the federal government give Canada a distinctive flag, make O Canada the national anthem and remedy a "deplorable" lack of high ranking bilingual persons in the civil service.

Before being passed, however, each resolution was amended from the floor to read "before the next election."

Thirty Freight Cars Derailed At Lansdowne

LANSDOWNE, Ont. (CP)—Railway gangs worked at this Leeds County station today to clear away the wreckage of 30 derailed freight cars that shattered three buildings and ripped up CNR main line tracks when they jumped the rails early Sunday.

The westbound line between Montreal and Toronto was cleared for traffic some 16 hours after the accident. CNR officials said the eastbound line was expected to be open to traffic late tonight or early Tuesday. Some traffic is being diverted via Ottawa or to the CPR line.

An eastbound freight train, 98 cars long, was moving toward this station before dawn Sunday, when one section buckled and crashed off the track. Officials believe a wheel bearing on one car seized up.

One runaway car smashed into the CNR baggage shed, penetrating 10 feet. The derailed section also smashed into a CNR cold storage building and commercially - owned lumber sheds, splintering a pile of lumber.

Several hundred feet of track were torn up and the steel box cars, carrying a mixed cargo of flour, lumber and other merchandise, were wrecked.

Lansdowne is 35 miles east of Kingston.

FIRST SUPPLY MOTION TO BE HOTLY DEBATED

Somewhere Ahead Budget Anticipated

OTTAWA (CP)—The opposition gets its first chance to hit the government with a specific grievance motion in the Commons today.

The mystery topic will be unveiled when the government moves to get Commons study of its spending estimates on the first supply motion of the current session.

The supply motion allows the opposition to raise a motion on any topic of urgency or grievance that it chooses.

Generally, the opportunity is played to the hilt — with the lead - off opposition spokesman starting out in scatter-gun fashion on a range of topics, then zeroing in just as the government benches start to fidget.

The topic could be unemployment, foreign affairs, economic trends, farm problems or almost anything.

STARTS DEBATE

The grievance motion then becomes the pivot of a two-day debate.

Liberal J. W. Pickersgill, MP for Bonavista-Twillingate, made an attempt just before the Commons closed Friday to find out government plans for this week.

"I will give the program for the entire week if he will announce the subject of the supply motion which will be debated on Monday and Tuesday," replied government House Leader Gordon Churchill, veterans affairs minister.

"The seductive invitation of the hon. gentleman is of course entirely subversive to all the rights of an opposition," said Mr. Pickersgill.

Mr. Churchill said that the Commons will likely deal with the estimates of government spending on Thursday and Friday, with Wednesday devoted to supplementary spending estimates unfinished last week.

CANNOT SAY

"Whether or not some legislation will be introduced, I cannot say at this moment," he added.

The throne speech debate, eight sitting days allotted to free-wheeling speeches on just about any subject, was concluded last week. The House settles down now to study of the spending plans of the government, legislation and some private members' bills at allotted times.

Somewhere ahead, a budget is anticipated.

It has been promised for this year—but so far no government spokesman has said whether it will be before or after a general election.

Guides Blazing Craft to Landing, 4 Escape as Fire Engulfs Craft

HARRISON, Mich. (AP) — With flames searing his boots, a Detroit oil company executive guided his burning twin-engined plane to an emergency landing on an expressway near here Sunday.

Richard H. Sucher, 34, president of the Tulsa Oil Company, and three companions escaped from the plane seconds before it was engulfed by fire.

The four were flying back to Detroit from a skiing trip to northern Michigan when fire broke out in the plane at 1,800 feet. Flames and smoke began pouring from the instrument panel.

"I had no choice," said Sucher. "I had to get down in a hurry."

He said the smoke was so thick he could hardly see, but was able to get in line with traffic on the expressway and make the landing. Motorists slowed down to give the plane landing room, state police said.

Sucher's boots caught fire as he stood on the brakes to stop the aircraft once it landed. The plane, a $70,000 Aero Commander, and the group's personal belongings were destroyed.

With Sucher were John Curran, 43, a construction contractor, the latter's son Lawrence, 11, and Robert Nichols, 23.

Geneva Progress Could Lead To Summit, Kennedy

Rejects Proposal Heads Attend Talks March 14

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy has told Soviet Premier Khrushchev he hopes developments at the forthcoming Geneva disarmament conference may lead to a summit meeting by June 1.

At the same time the United States and its Western allies are reported to be considering short-range disarmament proposals which they hope Russia may accept quickly at Geneva, thus providing a basis for a summit meeting in May.

Among these is a proposal to ban the transfer of nuclear weapons to other countries.

Kennedy's views were expressed to Khrushchev during the weekend in a 1,000 - word note rejecting Khrushchev's second proposal that the heads of the 18 nations involved—Canada included—attend the opening of the Geneva talks March 14.

Prime Minister Macmillan of Britain, who conferred with Kennedy by telephone Friday when the president was drafting his reply to Khrushchev, also rejected the Soviet Premier's summit bid.

AT WRONG END

Kennedy, who wants the talks opened at the foreign ministers' level, told Khrushchev that to have a heads - of - government meeting at the beginning of the conference "would be to begin with the wrong end of the problem."

Kennedy expressed his hope that "developments in the conference and internationally would make it useful to arrange for personal participation of the heads of government before June 1."

In London, British officials said Macmillan's reply, like Kennedy's, repeated the view that the conference should open at the level of foreign ministers.

The tone of Kennedy's note was restrained and not as truculent as Khrushchev's most recent one. The president said he did not question Khrushchev's motives for seeking a quick summit session. Khrushchev's note had implied Kennedy and Macmillan were not sincere in wanting some preliminary results to come from the Geneva talks before plunging into a summit session.

But Kennedy firmly rejected Khrushchev's contention that

LONDON (Reuters) — Prime Minister Macmillan has told Soviet Premier Khrushchev that a summit disarmament conference may be fruitful if disarmament negotiations are making definite progress or when such negotiations are deadlocked.

But the prime minister, in a letter to Khrushchev, said he still feels the Anglo-American plan for opening the Geneva disarmament conference at foreign minister's level "is the best method for reaching what we all want."

Macmillan reiterated that he is prepared to undertake personal participation in the 18-power Geneva disarmament conference "when it seems that the presence of heads of government can be of positive value."

The prime minister's letter, delivered in Moscow today, answered Khrushchev's letter of last Thursday in which the Soviet leader repeated his proposal for the conference to begin at the heads-government level.

GIVES INSTANCES

Two situations may arise in which the summit disarmament conference method could be fruitful, Macmillan said.

"The first is if the conference is making satisfactory and definite progress. In such a case a meeting of the heads of government might well serve to consolidate what had been achieved and to make a further step towards an actual agreement.

"The second situation is one in which certain major and clear points of disagreement have emerged which threaten to hold up further progress. In that case the heads of government should perhaps meet in order to try to break the deadlock."

Bank Holdup Suspect Shoots Self in Head

PLENTY, Sask. (CP)—Police said Sunday that a suspect in a $20,000 bank holdup shot himself in the head after his car overturned into a snow - filled ditch on a lonely municipal road Friday.

Police identified the suspect as Joseph Probe, 48, of the Weyburn-Midale district. Earlier reports said it appeared the man was killed in the crash.

The smashed car and body were found near Driver, 30 miles west of here, a few hours after a masked man in green suede shoes held up a branch of the Royal Bank of Canada in this village 85 miles south-west of Saskatoon.

A suitcase containing $19,901 was recovered, police said. They also said they found a .38-calibre revolver in the car beside the body.

Premier Castro Attends Game, Gets Two Hits

HAVANA (AP) — Looking healthy and happy, Premier Fidel Castro emerged from 12 days of silence and seclusion Sunday for a baseball and television appearance.

Castro lined out two hits one with two strikes against him—after making an unannounced appearance at a doubleheader in Latino Americano Stadium.

The crowd of 32,000 cheered and the country's television audience watched as Castro accepted "the challenge of two pitchers to strike him out.

Castro drove a grounder through shortstop with the count at two balls and two strikes, then hit a single into centre field off the second pitcher after taking one strike.

Castro's disappearance from the public eye set a variety of rumors to flying. One was that he had gone to Moscow, another that he had taken asylum in the Mexican embassy.

CHARGES PLOT

Sunday the Communist party newspaper Hoy published a long communique over Castro's name charging the United States was plotting an invasion and thanking the Soviet Union for pledging support of Cuba.

Says Limited Number Favors Separatism

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Postmaster - General Hamilton said today that separatism in its extreme position is "supported by only a limited number."

Mr. Hamilton said that as long as Canada is a nation of two languages and two cultures "there will be those who will feel the balance is unfavorable to one group or another."

A former Montreal city councillor and still a resident of the city, Mr. Hamilton told a Rotary club Brotherhood Week luncheon:

"Particularly in my own province of Quebec there are those today who have a view that their own interests would be better served if they were not part of the entire Canadian picture; that life would be richer for them as a separate national entity.

". . . I cannot agree with this point of view and I think, in its extreme position, it is supported by only a limited number."

But Mr. Hamilton said he welcomed discussion and debate of the problems of French Canadians.

Text of his speech was issued to the press before delivery.

Retirement 'Breaks Up' Brother Team

A two-brother railway team extending back for over 40 years was broken in Belleville Saturday as Charles W. Coleman, Geddes Street, "Piggy Back" conductor with the CNR, went into retirement.

Saturday afternoon Mr. Coleman completed his final run as friends and relatives met him at the station to extend congratulations. Later Mr. Coleman was honored at a reception at his home.

"Bill" Coleman, the other half of the Coleman brothers' railway team, still has about a year and a half to go before he retires as engineer.

Born in the Bancroft area, the Coleman brothers were overseas in World War I, serving with the 155th and 21st Battalions.

After the war the brothers joined the CNR, Charlie as a brakeman and his brother as a fireman.

A trip to California to see their daughter, Mrs. Ray Wood, is in the immediate retirement plans for Mr. Coleman and his wife. The couple will leave tomorrow on a month's holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. Coleman have two sons, neither of whom followed in their father's footsteps as a railroader. Bernard is with a steel firm in Toronto, while Douglas is also in steel at Lebanon in Pennsylvania.

'Jackies' Trip To India Is Postponed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House announced today that because of a sinus infection, Mrs. John F. Kennedy, wife of the president, has been forced to postpone by eight days the start of her India-Pakistan trip for a week. She now is due to begin the journey March 12.

The postponement was decided upon on the advice of her physician.

She has been suffering from "a low-grade sinus infection for several months," Press Secretary Pierre Salinger said. The infection has caused an occasional fever, he added, but the fevers have been low.

Mrs. Kennedy was at the airport in West Palm Beach, Fla., today to see her husband off on the flight bringing astronaut John H. Glenn Jr., and his family to Washington for a day of honors.

Widow and Boy Friend Charged With Slaying

NEW YORK (AP) — A 36-year-old widow and her 19-year-old boy friend stood silently together in a Queens court Sunday and were arraigned for the hammer-and-knife slaying of her husband, a doctor.

Magistrate Milton Solomon would allow no bail for Mrs. Jean Difede and Armando Cossentino. A hearing was set for March 5.

The pyjama-clad Dr. Joseph Difede, 39, was battered and slashed to death in the bedroom of his Queens apartment last last Dec. 7.

Police brought the charges on the story of a young man whom Deputy Chief Inspector James Knott said witnessed the slaying and had heard the couple talking about it beforehand.

Knott did not identify the witness, but District Attorney Frank O'Connor said he was Anastasio Prestigiacomo, 21, a Sicilian who overstayed his U.S visa and is being held in lieu of $100,000 bail as a material witness. Prestigiacomo had been a friend of Cossentino.

Knott said Cossentino had a key to the Difede residence, given to him while the physician was visiting his mother in Italy. Difede was slain eight days after he returned from abroad.

The eyewitness said he saw Cossentino stab the doctor and said he helped the pair clean up the bloody apartment after the slaying because he feared for his own life, Knott said

The witness' statement said Cossentino attacked the sleeping doctor —first with the hammer, then with a carving knife —while the doctor's nightgown-clad wife waited in the kitchen.

Police said Prestigiacomo told them the doctor cried out: "I forgive you everything! Don't kill me! Please don't kill me!"

But Cossentino replied, "Die! die! die!" and repeatedly plunged the knife into Difede's chest, police quoted the witness as saying.

Fisticuffs Mark 'Model' Parliament

MONTREAL (CP) — What was supposed to be a model parliament session by a group of university students was dissolved Saturday in a fistic skirmish.

The students squared off after two hours of debate in the annual mock parliament at Sir George Williams University

No one was hurt but one observer described the flare-up as "spirited."

It started with a vote of non-confidence in the 22-member Liberal student government by 14 students representing the Progressive Conservatives and 13 of the New Democratic Party.

The Liberal leader Lionel Chetwynd decided to call a new election by the student body. But there was fierce protest and the Liberals stalked from the floor to the visitor's gallery.

When the members of the two other parties started to continue the session undeterred, the Liberals seated in the gallery broke into loud singing and threw taunts.

Sitting members rushed into the gallery to evict them and the fight was on.

When things calmed down, the three parties agreed another election should be held March 7.

Trade Unions Suffers From Member Loss

PORT ARTHUR (CP) — The Canadian trade union movement, suffering from declining membership, is in danger, says Donald MacDonald, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Labor Congress.

"We are in danger of losing everything we have gained over the past 30 years," he told 300 persons Saturday at the windup banquet of a congress education institute.

He said union membership declined last year for the first time since 1937. The loss was 12,000 members.

"If we allow ourselves to become a diminishing segment in society we will have less and less influence," he said. As unions become weaker the opposition will grow stronger.

Snow Blocks Main Roads In Britain

LONDON (Reuters)—A heavy snowfall covered most of Britain today, blocking some main roads with six-foot drifts and causing long delays in rail and airport traffic.

Snowplows were called out to villages isolated by blizzards in northern hills.

Thousands of cars were abandoned by motorists wary of the snowcovered ice. Officials appealed to Britons to leave their cars at home.

One traffic jam in London was four miles long.

public in all but strategic materials. "They are not getting the dollars; we are." The trade balance was heavily in Canada's favor.

2. Hazen Argue's jump from the New Democrats to the Liberals:

About a year ago the prime minister had said a key issue in the next election would be free enterprise versus socialism. "I suggested at the time that the Liberals were becoming more and more a socialist party. I don't feel that recent events should cause me to derogate from that suggestion."

3. Federal budgetary deficits:

Since 1957 the Conservative government had provided an extra $500,000,000 to the provinces. Without this and the heavy burden of the hospital insurance program, there would have been no deficits. "We'll be meeting the deficit situation in the very near future."

4. A second trans - Canada highway:

Consideration must be given to this even before completion of the present trans-Canada highway work. "I personally hope that in the development of the second-five-year program on the part of the government that first consideration would be given to a second trans-Canada highway."

TELLS OF SUCCESS

Later, at the Conservative banquet, Mr. Diefebaker detailed how his government had kept its promises and got the economy rolling again through its export and national development policies.

The Liberals, he said, had sung "a calamity chorus for four long years." They had been "talking unemployment as policy and little else since 1957."

Now Opposition Leader Pearson was saying "things are getting better," but we've got to watch."

"That's all they're going to do," Mr. Diefenbaker declared.

"While I don't like elections—frequently — I do look forward to placing our record of national development before the people of Canada."

Arrest Editor, Husband in Negro Dispute

CENTREVILLE, Md. (AP)—The fashion editor of the Washington Post and her husband were arrested Sunday during a dispute at a restaurant which refused to seat four Negroes.

Gerald G. Wagner, 42, of Kingston, Md., was held in lieu of $1,500 bond on charges of trespassing and resisting arrest. Mrs. Ruth Wagner, 39, the editor, was freed in her own custody after authorities charged her with interfering with a police officer. Her bond was set at $500.

State police gave this account of the dispute

The Wagners and their two children were seated in Harley's restaurant at Queenstown, Md., when four Negro students sought service and were told they could only buy food to take out.

Wagner, offering to explain the state's trespassing law to the Negroes, escorted them to his car. Meanwhile, a waitress summoned state police.

Two troopers arrived, ordered Wagner to leave and arrested him when he put up a brief argument.

Police arrested the fashion editor when she protested her husband's arrest. The Negroes drove off in another car.

A spokesman at the Easton, Md., barracks said he did not know why the waitress called police in the first place.

However, the spokesman said the trespassing law empowers the proprietor of such an establishment to summon officers if patrons ordered to leave decline to do so.

The law allows the proprietor to decline service and to dismiss unwanted customers, state police said.

Negro Crowds Dispersed With Gunfire, Gas

KAMPALA, Uganda (Reuters)—Strict security measures were clamped on northern Buganda today following an outbreak of weekend violence that shook this British protectorate, scheduled to receive internal self-rule in three days.

Strong police detachments were patrolling the northern counties of Buyaga and Bugangazi, where crowds of Negroes were dispersed with gunfire and tear gas.

No over-all casualty toll was available but five persons were known to have been injured in one incident. At least 38 persons were arrested.

One police patrol opened fire after coming under attack from a mob of 800 Negroes hurling sticks and stones. The patrol had gone to the scene after the mob set fire to a market.

ATTACK POLICE

At another centre, 300 Negroes attacked a police patrol and an official who was erecting a curfew notice. Curfews have been enforced in both counties, which were declared "disturbed areas" last week by Governor Sir Walter Coutts.

In another incident, 200 Negroes, some armed with bows and arrows, attacked police and a local chief.

The violent outbreaks were linked with elections last week in Buganda and a territorial dispute over Buyaga and Bugangazi.

The counties are part of an area claimed by neighboring Bunyord kingdom, which demands the return of its "lost" territory annexed by Britain in 1894 and placed under Buganda rule.

Both Buganda and Bunyord have native kingdom status within the Uganda protectorate.

Will Open School Tenders On Tuesday

TRENTON—Tenders for the construction of a new addition to Trenton High School, called for today, will be opened tomorrow night at the Trenton Board of Education office in North Trenton public school.

Originally, architects Barnett and Reider had called for the tenders to be in by Feb. 14, but extended the date at the first of this month.

The addition, which will serve to accomodate those students wishing to take technical and vocational courses, will have the end result of changing the school from a high school to a "composite" school.

Under a federal-provincial government plan, the school will be erected and equipped by the two governments.

With the new addition, a school population of around 1500 may be accomodated; 750 of whom may be students taking technical courses.

It will be necessary for the school board to hire a new principal for the school, since W. J. Huson, the present head, advised the board that he wished to be relieved of his duties at the end of June this year, a few weeks ago.

S.A. TERRORISTS

were killed Sunday. Machineguns were mounted at strategic points.

One of the dead was the wife of a Moslem school teacher who was shot before her husband's eyes.

Police said the outlawed secret army has launched a campaign to provoke Moslems into violent retaliation and thus wreck chances for an imminent settlement in the Moslem insurgent war, now in its eighth year.

In Paris, President de Gaulle said Sunday that an "honorable" end to the Algerian insurrection was possible within days.

Speaking at a public meeting in his home village of Colombey-les-Deux-Eglises, de Gaulle said the government had informed the Algerian National Movement—rival of the powerful insurgent National Liberation Front—of the peace agreement.

An Unworthy Suggestion

Dr. C. E. Phillips, director of graduate studies at the Ontario College of Education, is evidently a man with an independent mind. For instance, he would like to see Ontario universities made responsible for teacher education, a course opposed by the Ontario Department of Education and the University of Toronto. He says this proposal, because it is an American plan, "is suspect in the eyes of those who are fearful of threats to academic purity," and adds bitingly that "we may have to wait until Scotland adopts it—it will then, of course, be respectable in Ontario." Dr. Phillips opposes the Ontario Secondary School Teachers Federation proposal to separate academically superior pupils at or near the beginning of high school—"in my opinion it is academic arrogance to classify youngsters as superior or inferior as if scholarship were the only virtue in the world." He not only has the temerity to mock the machine in an age of advancing automation, but he does it by quoting a risque limerick—

"From the wonderful teaching machine
The king, from reports I have seen,
Gets his sex education,
The best in the nation,
With no trouble at all to the queen."

Altogether an admirable performance, and one which is vastly reassuring to those who may entertain any fears as to the auspices under which our future teachers are receiving their final polishing.

It is therefore doubly disappointing to discover him in the shoddy error of espousing an unorthodox remedy for a pressing problem for obviously unworthy reasons. This has the wholly undesirable effect of calling all unorthodoxy into question.

There is today a rising demand for the propagation of birth control information as a solution for some of the world's problems, for many of which any other solution appears difficult, if not impossible, to discover.

This demand is meeting with the stiffest of opposition.

What, then, can be said for a man of Dr. Phillips' intelligence who advocates birth control, not as a means to prevent mass starvation in over-populated lands or to avoid the danger of population pressures breeding devastating wars, but as a means of balancing the budget in prosperous Ontario? "Reducing the number of pupils by more human means than atomic warfare can no longer be dismissed as an infringement of the rights of individuals—neither here nor in countries where the peril is strikingly apparent," he told an educational conference of the Ontario Federation of Labor.

Now there may be good arguments why under-populated Canada, as well as over-populated lands, should consider deliberately controlling its birth rate, but the high cost of education is certainly not one of them. There are a hundred and one luxuries which we could forego before making such an abject confession that we are too poor to educate properly all our children. By this over-emphasizing the admittedly heavy burden of educational costs, Dr. Phillips performs a singular disservice to the cause of education, not to mention the manner in which he arms the opponents of birth control in those fields in which it may be a proper, and perhaps the only morally acceptable, solution to problems of the greatest urgency.

Such a suggestion, coming from a man of lesser station in life and, even more important, of less evident mental stature, could have been safely ignored by us, in the happy certainty that it would receive a similar fate from all. But Dr. Phillips displays such a lively intellect that we cannot let his comment pass without censure.

African Protest

Two hundred Negro children marched into Salisbury, Rhodesia, and demanded an interview with the minister of native education.

Their complaint—no school.

Before we conclude that people whose children are as backward as all this are certainly not ready for self-rule, we had better reflect.

The "hate-school" attitude has gone out of style here. Most children today like school and many of them will admit it—until they reach the sophisticated teens and are confronted with algebra and Latin.

All the same, we doubt whether enthusiasm for school reaches such heights in Canada that one could organize a protest march—particularly if it had to face police using leashed dogs.

This hunger for knowledge does the African much credit.

Finns Breed Fine Trees

Finlandia Pictorial

There is a story about a man who crossed an apple tree with a daschund dog and so got himself a tree on which the fruit hung sufficiently low for easy picking. It is a good idea, perhaps, but we have not made quite such spectacular progress yet. Trees are bred, but in other ways.

Finland lives from wood. It needs vast quantities, and the wood must be of good quality. It is not all forests that grow first-grade timber. In some forests that were once good, man and his poor management have turned the tree "race" into an inferior one.

• • •

Farmers have known about plant breeding for centuries. Forest tree breeding, too, has long been a topical subject, but it was only in 1947 that the Foundation For Forest Tree Breeding was established in Finland. The whole point about tree breeding is to increase the productivity of the trees. The growth rate can be improved and the tree's susceptibility to damage by numerous insects can be reduced. The branchiness of the trees, the straightness of the stem, the thickness of the bark, the tree's toleration of severe climatic condition, the length of wood fibres, the formation of curly grains—all these are things that can be influenced by tree breeding. They are all points of importance to the paper and furniture industries.

• • •

The commonest and best-known method of breeding trees is by direct selection, picking out a number of what are called "plus trees." Like a man, a tree is the result of the combined infuence of internal genetic factors and external or environment growth factors. Only the genetic factors matter in selecting plus trees, and thus the forester doing the job must know his tree as a physician knows his patient.

The ideal plus stand of trees is one in which the trees have never been felled. It has one dominant species growing in it, all the trees of roughly the same age and possessing technically good growth qualities.

These specially selected mother trees are needed for grafting. A branch cut off a plus tree is grafted onto the trunk of, for example, a 4-year-old spruce seedling tree. In about 15 years the seedling will grow into a good tree. It then becomes a seed tree whose seeds are planted in special nurseries.

It takes a long time to get all this established on a sufficiently large scale. Until there are enough grafted trees yielding seeds, plus stands will be used to obtain the seeds needed for the work. The seeds are sown in May in the nurseries of the Foundation For Forest Tree Breeding. Spruce seeds are sown out of doors in good soil, pine seeds and the seeds of deciduous species in plastic greenhouses. They are watched over carefully and helped along in their growth.

After growing for two years, the seedlings are transplanted and spaced out. This helps the roots to get used to transplanting and they then tolerate the final planting out better. Wild seedlings do not take kindly to transplanting.

The essential basis of the whole operation is selection. The Foundation For Forest Tree Breeding has a "stud book," in which are already entered over 2,000 indigenous trees, 700 foreign trees and 2,500 hectares of plus stands.

Crossing is another method of tree breeding. The progeny of two closely related species often grow more quickly than either of the parent species. For instance, good aspen has been obtained by crossing American and Finnish aspen.

The third method is chromosome breeding. It offers opportunities of improving foreign tree species in particular—they are often branchy and otherwise poor. The main species involved in Finland are oak, ash, elm, maple and mountain ash.

The good seedlings are bought both by the State and by private forest owners. Some time in the future, presumably, we will come to a state of affairs in which there are no poor forests, only a superior breed of

Milk Ads Boost Sales

Rural Co-operator

Although the Ontario Whole Milk Producers League voted strongly in favor of a single marketing plan for all Ontario milk at the recent convention, several members spoke against one.

Blake Sanford, a Kingsville producer, cited numerous jurisdictions in North America where milk marketing plans have, he declared, resulted in a fall in the proportion of Grade A milk marketed. What is needed, Mr. Blake told the convention, is advertising and promotion.

He described the way in which the Windsor market, to which he ships milk, has increased per capita consumption of fluid milk by six per cent despite a static population and increasing unemployment in the area. Other markets showing increase in per capita consumption, he said, are Guelph and Hamilton. These markets have advertising programs.

He contrasted this with the Toronto market, where, without an advertising program, consumption per head of population has dropped seven per cent.

Mr. Blake said the Windsor market has promoted milk for school children, and restaurateurs now report an increase in the number of teenagers ordering milk rather than soft drinks. "We're creating adult milk drinkers", declared Mr. Blake.

He urged delegates to "think before getting into a marketing plan".

A Newmarket Guernsey producer, Ernest Crosslands, challenged concentrated milk producers to "take my business if they can". He said he was prepared to operate without any protective legislation.

"We are being stampeded into a marketing plan because somebody said 'Dance', "complained Mr. Crosslands, who is a director of the Channel Island Breeds Milk Producers Association. He warned that the government will provide legislation to let producers into a marketing plan, but may not provide legistlation to let them out.

He also supported school milk plans. Canada is the last Western nation to have one he said.

Mr. Crosslands told delegates milk producers should advertise as their competitors do. He said beer sales in Toronto increased 12 per cent in 1960 to $41,000,000. The beer industry spent $1,500,000 on advertising, he said. Soft drink companies spent $2,500,000 on Toronto advertising last year, he added.

Need Uniform Time Change

Brantford Expositor

In Sarnia an alderman has given notice of motion of a resolution asking for province-wide uniformity in the matter of establishing the annual period of daylight saving time.

This is not the first time such a proposal has been made but it is a sound idea and it is regrettable that it has not been given effect long before now.

It is true that a considerable degree of accord has been reached among the municipalities, mainly as a matter of business necessity, but this, in all common sense, is not something that should be left, year after year, to the whims or prejudices of local councils. It should have been handled from the first by the provincial government, if not by the federal government, which would be still more preferable.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

THE ONE REMAINS

Are you discouraged?

So many people are, these days. So many people, especially those who are older, find the world of the 1960's a fantastic, frightening place that seems to have lost its stability. The face of the earth has shrunk so that our enemies are only a few hours away by missile and airplane. The old familiar skies are criss-crossed by the paths of space vehicles travelling at unheard-of speeds, some, perhaps, the potential bearers of our destruction. Unrest, tyranny, and open strife in a dozen different areas threaten the peace of the world. The present is dark, and the future looks darker. No wonder so many people are utterly discouraged with life.

The things of this world do not offer us security. They never have; they never will. When we put our trust in people, in weapons, in money, in human power, our trust will fail us sooner or later, for all things will pass away, as they always have.

The One remains, the many change and pass;
Heaven's light forever shines, earth's shadows fly.

To put aside discouragement, to find real security, we must lift our eyes above the missiles, and the ominous clouds, and the orbiting satellites, to God.

Strictly Personal

Weather Most Minded When Damp, Windy

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

During a spell of bad weather recently, I noticed again that the grim days were not the cold ones, but the raw and windy ones. It is not low temperature, but a combination of dampness and velocity of wind that we most detest.

This is what the army meteorologists now call the "windchill weather has shown that men most suffer — both physically and emotionally — not when the mercury is 30 below but when temperature, wind and wetness combine in a cruelly cutting manner.

This new (and more realistic) evaluation of the "wind-chill factor," it seems to me, can be just as fruitfully applied to our life situation as to our weather conditions.

Most of us can withstand "low temperature" in any one area of our personal lives. One man may be wretched in his job, but somehow he manages to get along. Another may be unhappy in a marriage, but he is able to function in a more or less productive way. Still another may have poor health, but he copes for years without collapsing.

Those who keep afloat despite these handicaps are invariably those who achieve some major gratification in another area of life. The man with the miserable job is nourished by a good family life; the man with the unfortunate marriage is doing a job he enjoys; the sickly man is sustained by work or love, or both.

The psychological "wind-chill factor" assails us when no single element is very bad — and no single element is very good. We can withstand catastrophe better than general bleak ness, just as we can put up with extraordinary cold if there is sun and no wind, but are pulverized on a warmer, wetter and more depressing day.

Our capacity to survive a crushing blow in almost any department of our lives is phenomenal — so long as some compensation exists elsewhere, so long as the sun can be glimpsed somewhere along our psychic horizon. Many an abrasive marriage has survived because the husband is happy in his work, and the wife is content with her children.

But when no abundant gratification exists in any area, then even minor discomforts plunge us into major crises. When our emotional sky is a pallid gray in all directions, wherever we look, then the fabric of our being begins to unravel, and "going to pieces" becomes more than a figure of speech.

Aspirin Good Medication For Osteoarthritis Victim

Dear Dr. Molner: My husband has a mild form of osteoarthritis which affects the spine in the neck. It causes frequent and rather severe headaches. We would appreciate knowing of medication and other measures to treat it. — Mrs. W.C.T.

People with osteoarthritis of the spine in the neck often slouch — and that's just asking for more trouble. Correction of posture is necessary.

Medication? Aspirin remains one of the best discovered for this. Occasionally stronger pain-relievers are needed. To relieve muscle spasm — heat, gentle massage, sometimes muscle-relaxing drugs.

In my experience neck traction has been quite effective. This can be done at home with suitable apparatus, and relief after a series of treatments often lasts for a considerable time.

Dear Dr. Molner: Please send me your booklet on pinworm. According to your instructions, I am enclosing 20 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

How long do eggs of pinworm remain dormant or alive?

Regardless of boiled bedding and clothes, plus sulphur or gentian violet cures, we have recurring infections after a few months. Could such infections lurk in a diverticulum after the rest of the tract has been cleared?

Do dogs and cats carry the worms? — A.P.

The complete cycle, from swallowed eggs to hatched worms, takes two to three weeks.

Recurrent attacks raise suspicion of (a) incomplete treatment to start with, or (b) reinfection from other members of the household — adults as well as children. There are newer and more effective medications now than the ones you mentioned. The booklet names some.

Yes, pinworms are known to lurk in the appendix, for example, so perhaps could infest a diverticulum.

Animals do not carry pin worm.

Dear Dr. Molner: I read in your column that a woman was told that using deodorant would stop up the glands and you said it wasn't true.

A few months ago I had the same trouble and the doctor said the deodorant stopped up the glands. I had six abcesses under my arm and spent a week in the hospital. — Mrs. G.S.

I'd like to hedge a bit on this or at least define some things. I find no reason to believe that deodorants cause abcesses or infections. I will grant that they can tighten up the pores, and if some germs are present, especially the prevalent staphylococcus, the astringent action, tightening the pores, might help trap the germs.

I've certainly known many people who regularly use such deodorants without the slightest trouble with infection. And I've also known abcesses to afflict people who never have used deodorants.

The underarm area, being warm and moist, is ideal for germs to flourish, given half a chance. I can't put the blame on deodorants — but I can't say their astringent action may not be a contributing factor at times. I'd say that any irritation directly from the deodorant would manifest itself as a red or itchy condition not as an abcess.

For those who want to avoid the astringent effect, a strong baking soda solution may serve as well as a deodorant. Antiseptic soaps also are effective.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

DECIDE AND ACT

Men of action run and rule the world. Everything in life and nature must move, progress and grow. Time moves forward, not backward.

When initiative dies, the heart ceases to beat.

Back of all action lies the decision. The decision may be wrong and the action that follows wrong as well, but he who is able to decide and back his decision with action, serves himself and the world.

You can replace the man who merely carries out orders and does as he is told. But you have to find a man of like stature when you are compelled to replace the man of decision and action.

To a greater or lesser degree, all men who are able to decide and act upon their decisions, are great.

People are not blamed so much for doing things wrongly as they are for not doing things at all! This is a charitable world. To all of us who remain as human as we were made in the first place, this is a very good and satisfactory world. But the man who merely stands around and watches the procession go by, wondering whether to join it or merely to think about it after it has gone on, earns nothing but ultimate oblivion. It would be better could he be presented with this gift at the start.

Learn to decide. The oftener you decide, the oftener you become able to decide rightly.

Then the natural thing that presents itself is to act upon the decision you make, till it becomes a habit.

Think, decide — act! The result will take care of itself.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

At tea in a friend's house I was standing at the living room window when I saw an elderly man tottering slowly past in the snow outside. His hat was tilted forward in the fashion old men afefct. He clutched a brief case and newspapers under his arm. And in cautious short paces, he appeared to be feeling his footing as he went. An infirm old gentleman, out in the snow.

I called my host's attention to him.

"Aw, no," said he, coming to the window. "There's nothing to worry about him. He hasn't changed in forty years. I remember him all my life. He was a tottery old man when I was a boy."

"How old is he?" I enquired.

"Away over eighty, I'm sure," said my friend. "He was a crony of my father's, who has been dead twenty years. That great old boy, there, has never hurried in his life. He's an easy-going man. I never saw him walk any faster than that back in 1930. My dad and probably everybody else in that generation are all gone long ago. They were hustlers. They were up-to-date, full of vim and vigor. But look at him!"

I watched him totter up his front walk and up his steps.

Probably home to a good dinner.

Ottawa Fires Leave 4 Dead, $450,000 Lose

OTTAWA (CP)—Three fires in the Ottawa area left four dead over the weekend and razed the Ottawa Hunt and Golf Club, one of the capital's society gathering places.

Most serious of the blazes occurred Saturday at Gatineau, Que., 10 miles east of here. Three children ranging in age from one to eight died when fire levelled their three - family wooden dwelling.

The fire occurred in Mr. Baillie's new frame home shortly before midnight while his wife and daughter were visiting relatives in Ottawa.

CHILDREN DIE

The three children killed in th Gatineau fire were Rolande Girard, 3, and her 11-month-old sister Micheline, children of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Girard; and Richard Barbier, 8, son of Mrs Auore Barbier.

Eighteen persns escaped the building in sub-zero temperatures.

Firemen said early reports at the scene indicated that all occupants had escaped. They did not find out until later that the three children were still inside

Mr. and Mrs. Girard were visiting friends and had left the children in charge of a babysitter when the fire broke out at 10:30 p.m.

An oil stove explosion in one of the other apartments is believed to have triggered the fire.

Gatineau Fire Chief James O'Farrell said walls of the 32-year-old building were insulated with sawdust. The fire was out of control for two hours.

STARTS IN KITCHEN

The golf club fire broke out Sunday afternoon in the vicinity of the kitchen.

The club, an Ottawa landmark, was built in 1907 and has been the scene of many national golfing events.

Vice-President Tom Bryson estimated it would cost about $450,000 to replace the clubhouse. Another $7,000 in trophies was lost.

Slight damage was done to a two - year - old $200,000 curling club annexed to the main club house. A fire-wall between the two prevented the fire from spreading.

Some 40 curlers and 10 staff members escaped uninjured.

The tempo is expected to increase today as Joseph Godber, British minister of state for foreign affairs, and Arthur Dean, the U.S. disarmament negotiator, join the talks at the state department.

Lord Snowdon Joins Union Of Journalists

LONDON (Reuters) — Princess Margaret's husband, Lord Snowdon, has joined Britain's union for journalists, it was learned Sunday night.

No member of the British Royal Family has been known previously to be a card - carrying member of a union. Some Royal Family members have been honorary union members.

Snowdon is artistic director of the Sunday Times, owned by Canadian Roy Thomson. He took up the post this year as his first paid job since his 1960 marriage to Margaret.

Snowdon, former society photographer Antony Armstrong-Jones, applied to join the 15,300-member National Union of Journalists last week.

The NUJ national executive approved the application during the weekend but Snowdon's name was not immediately put on any union branch's roll.

The NUJ is a member of Britain's giant Trade Unions Congress. It is bound by TUC decisions, including those on strikes.

Snowdon will be required to pay his 12 shillings ($1.68) monthly dues.

Appointment of the 31-year-old peer to the Sunday Times post evoked a rash of criticism from other British papers.

Thomson maintained Snowdon was hired for his talent with a camera and not for publicity.

U.S. Soldiers in Korea Given Tough Training Plan

By KENNETH ISHII

SEOUL (AP)—U.S. Soldiers in Korea are regularly subjected to torture and brutality—hung by their wrists, rolled in mud, trapped inside boxes, set upon by dogs and made to drape live snakes around their necks.

A rasping voice booms at them from a loudspeaker

"You are prisoners of a peaceful nation which will bring the imperialist aggressors to their knees. Co-operate and you will learn the truth about peace-loving people!"

The prison camp scene is not real. It's a part of a training program conducted by the 7th Infantry Division.

The U.S. armed forces newspaper Pacific Stars and Stripes recently explained that "perhap the most important part is the vivid enactment of enemy actions towards captured soldiers."

Describing the training, the paper said one recent test assumed that "aggressor" forces had over-run friendly positions at night. Those "captured" were put in a prison camp.

UNDERGO BRAINWASHING

"After capture, the prisoners were taken to the compound," the story said. "Inside, they were stripped of their weapons and boots and underwent an hour of brainwashing and threats.

Prisoners were humiliated and "tortured" when they refused to give information beyond their name, rank, serial number and date of birth.

"Take the prisoner out and loosen his tongue," the voice behind the bright light would say. "When he wants to talk bring him back to me."

"Aggressor" guards push some prisoners into a sweat box —a wall locker suspended over a hot fire. A variation is to keep the prisoner in the locker while guards pound on the outside with clubs.

Another technique is to tempt the shivering prisoners with blankets. They are told that if they answer questions, they will receive a blanket and be permitted to go to bed.

CATCH TO IT

If they fall for the bait they must sign a receipt before getting a blanket. The "receipt" turns out to be a confession of waging germ warfare.

Switching strategy, occasionally a prisoner is given a blanket without signing for it. But he is forced to walk through the camp in full sight of his fellow prisoners with the blanket on his arm. The idea is to breed distrust and suspicion among the prisoners.

Other techniques duplicated at the camp unco-operative prisoners are strung up by their hands to a pole; a dog is permitted to rip their clothing; snakes are draped around their necks as they crawl between lines of guards, each asking for information; they are brought before mock firing squads.

DRY SPELL ENDS

TOKYO (AP)—Rain here Sunday night ended a 37-day dry spell. Officials said the lack of rain had brought on an unusually large number of fires—an average of 12 a day—and had created a water shortage.

Dutch Leaders Hope Talks Would Help

THE HAGUE (AP)—U.S. Attorney-General Robert Kennedy discussed the Dutch-Indonesian conflict over West New Guinea with Foreign Minister Joseph M. A. H. Luns of The Netherlands but aides said Kennedy brought no message from the Indonesian government to the Dutch.

The aides stressed that Kennedy was on a world fact-finding tour and would report to his brother, President Kennedy.

Kennedy, in his talks with Dutch officials, stressed—as he did in Indonesia—that the U.S. is anxious to see the Dutch-Indonesian dispute solved peacefully. Dutch leaders had high hopes that his talks in Indonesia and in The Netherlands would help bring about such a solution.

Kennedy arrived Sunday from Bonn for a busy round of calls before flying on today to Paris, his last stop before flying home.

Exchange of Barbarities Almost Daily Occurrence In Strife-Torn Algeria

Dave Oancia of the London bureau of The Canadian Press went to Algeria to report on the explosive situation there. In this story he tells how violance and barbarity have become almost routine in Algiers.

By DAVE OANCIA

ALGIERS (CP) — The exchange of barbarities has become the daily rule in Algeria

Working on the principle that the essence of war is violence and that moderation is imbecility, these hot - blooded people seem to have concluded they have no recourse other than to the grenade, bomb, machine-gun, pistol or rifle.

The rule of law appears to be breaking down, the rule of brute force taking its place.

The action unfolding on the eve of an anticipated ceasefire announcement between France and the Moslem rebels has all the elements of a macabre movie thriller.

DEATH IS NORMAL

It provides the said spectacle of a populace which virtually accepts intrigue, terror, torture, suffering and death is an almost normal way of life.

The participants in this sanguinary drama include Moslem fedayeens, European killer commandos, shadowy secret servicemen, tough steel-helmed gendarmes and vast numbers of troops.

Shops are burned, houses bombed, grenades thrown into crowded cafes, bus queues machine - gunned and men and women tortured or murdered in cold blood in the multi - sided campaign of terror.

"We'll fight to the bitter end," said a hawk-faced gunman in Bab-el-Oued, a European working class district which has become a stronghold of the illegal Secret Army Organization.

"It's better to die now with a gun in my hand than to wait to get a knife stuck in my back after the Moslems take over."

Within five minutes of my arrival in his area from midtown Algiers, a white city spilling down the hilside to the blue Mediterranean, he had tapped me on the shoulder and asked to see my identity papers.

SETTLERS SUPPORT

He was one of the 500 or 600 desperate killer commandos belonging to the OAS, the French initials for the secret army led by fugitive former general Raoul Salan. This group now commands the support of most of the 1,000,000 European settlers in Algeria.

It is determined to scuttle any agreement between the Algerian National Liberation Front an President de Gaulle's government.

Unlike the Moslems who loo on an accord as a prelude t independence, the settlers vie it as a sell-out to the Moslem nationalist and the first step towards Communist domination o the territory.

Many of the OAS are not even French. Of the six I met, two were Germans, one Italian and one Spanish.

The army they belong to publishes a clandestine newspaper makes pirate radio broadcasts collects taxes from the settler and robs banks to fill its wa chest and wages intense psychological warfare to whip u frenzied support for its "Algerie Francaise" campaign

MOSLEMS HAVE OWN

The Moslems, too, have their commandos. Six hundred tough disciplined fedayeens are said t have infiltrated the teemin Casbah, the Arab quarter in th heart of Algiers.

In recent weeks they've bee relatively quiet. They are sai to have been ordered to preven any communal clashes with th Europeans which could scuttl the rebel organization's talk with the French government.

Also in the field in this underground warfare that regularly erupts into the open ar France's own "G-men."

In the local parlance they'r called "barbouzes," bearde ones, largely because they ar supposed to operate in various disguises. Their orders are t fight the secret army with its own weapons.

Embittered Europeans, bot hating and fearing them, cal them the "Gaullist Gestapo." They have no connection with the local police forces and ar responsible only to the interior ministry in Paris.

Find Overseas Volunteers To Enable Young Canadians Teach in Foreign Lands

OTTAWA (CP)—When Anne Jones begins her classes in Greek philosophy at a rural Indian school, her attempts to explain Socrates are apt to be interrupted by the clatter of bullock carts or the bubbling of a cow-dung gas energy plant.

A 22-year-old philosophy graduate from the University of Toronto, she is one of 15 young Canadians sent out by the Canadian Overseas Volunteers to teach in India, Ceylon and Sarawak.

The Volunteers, an organization founded to find ways to enable young Canadians to assist underdeveloped countries, plans this year to send 30 recruits into the field. Orientation classes are under way at the University of Toronto.

Miss Jones, who worked three summers as a counsellor in camps for crippled children, finds the girls' residence at her school, or institute, in the Punjab comfortable, although not luxurious.

TEACHES ENGLISH

About 12 feet square, her room is furnished with a "charpay" bed of twine matting stretched taut over a wooden frame, two small tables, chair, hot plate and a clay pot to keep water cool and fresh.

"I now teach 17 40-minute periods a week of English and five periods a week of a course called the Story of Civilization, whose material as vast as its name implies, is comparable to that of sociology and philosophy at U. of T.," she writes in a report, distributed here.

The medium of instruction for the 103 boys and 40 girls at the school normally is Hindi, but an exception has been made for Anne. However, she is trying to learn the Indian language.

Her typical day begins at six o'clock with housework and then a breakfast of coffee and peeots, a kind of bread. Classes are from 8 A.M. to 1 P.M., followed by a lunch of rice, vegetables, curds and fruit.

Afternoon activities include cycling to the nearby village of Ratpura, culture programs and extension work in villages in the area surrounding the institute.

PRAYER PERIOD

At five o'clock all the students join in communal, non-denominational prayers outside a model of a hut which Gandhi used to occupy at his model co-operative village at Sevagram. The 15-minute service consists of a series of chants in Hindi during which everyone spins handwoven cotton thread.

Dinner is at 8 P.M. and bedtime around 10.

Another recruit, Edward Enkin, 21, of Windsor, Ont., was posted to Sevagram, where he participated in a program to co-ordinate agricultural and industrial programs at the village level.

An engineering physics graduate of the University of Toronto, Mr. Enkin helped prepare a draft on the selective mechanization of methods to pound paddy. At present this is largely done by hand.

When he returns to take up post-graduate study in Canada, he hopes to have mastered the art of Indian cooking.

County Home LA Visits Residents

The monthly meeting of the Hastings County Home Auxiliary was held in the Home on February 19th, with a fair attendance. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Clarence Holmes, the past president, Mrs. M. McLean presided and opened the meeting.

Various reports were given, stating that 22 birthday cards had been sent to the residents during the month and 31 visits had been made to the Home since the previous meeting.

Mrs. Bongard thanked the members for their valued assistance in the therapy room.

Mrs. Kempston reported favorably on the mobile tuck-shop. This is proving of great value and service to the residents.

It was aannounced that the next executive meeting would be held on March 15th.

After the business meeting adjourned the ladies met with the residents in the dining room for the usual birthday party for those residents having birthdays in February.

A lively singsong was enjoyed with Mrs. Bird at the piano. The birthday song was sung to the guests and a special Happy Birthday to Mrs. Yorke.

Mrs. Connaughty, age 93, cut the lovely birthday cake, while Mrs. Mayell and Mrs. Nobes poured tea.

Everyone enjoyed a delicious lunch together.

U.C.W. Meetings

COLLEGE HILL UNITED

The monthly meeting of the afternoon unit of the College Hill U.C.W. was held in the church on February 14th.

The leader, Mrs. A. Dickens, was in charge of the meeting which opened with singing of the theme hymn. Mrs. C. Bailey opened the devotion. Mrs. D. Hunter read the Scripture from 1 Corinthians 12:27 and 13:8. Mrs. K. Balcour gave the theme message "What Is the Church?" The devotion closed with a prayer.

During the business period it was decided to save a penny a day for 1962 — proceeds to go to the U.C.W., and to have the same 'phoning committee as the past year. The social convener reported that a turkey supper will be held on Wednesday, March 21st.

Following the business period Mrs. R. Vessey conducted a study program consisting of five parts taken from the book entitled "Signals for the Sixties."

Some of the topics discussed were "church and community life," "What is the church doing" to meet the needs of this age?"; "What is the purpose of the church in the community?"; "Do we examine ourselves concerning church life?" and "Is it possible to have too much religion and not enough Christianity?"

This was followed by a most interesting buzz session for which those present divided into groups.

A lovely Valentine lunch was was served by Mrs. G. Waite and Mrs. H. Clarke, bringing the afternoon meeting to a close.

New Library Opened At St. Michael's Academy

The week of February 18-24, Catholic Book Week was observed in a particularly appropriate manner at St. Michael's Academy. As a result of the generosity of a benefactor who perfers to remain anonymous, a library was made available at the school for the use of the students of the Intermediate Division.

To highlight the opening of the library, Dr. Edith Peterkin addressed an assembly of the students on Wednesday morning. The following is a brief summation of Dr. Peterkin's lecture.

"There is a difference between an ordinary book and a really well - written literary work. Many students have happy memories of Louisa M. Alcott's "Little Women" or Robert Louis Stevenson's "Tressure Island".

However there are other books still that are different. They are read and re-read until the binding becomes worn and the pages dog-eared; even on the twentieth re-reading you experience new joys, make new discoveries and finally set the book down to find the world some-what transformed through the new understanding you have acquired. You have become a different person.

In the best and deepest sense the Bible is such a book. Other great books open up new vistas in other ways. For instance, Plato lived a long time ago, in ancient Greece, but people still like to study his dialogues. Thomas a. Kempis was a humble Flemish monk of the fourteenth century and devout Christians still find help and encouragement in his imitation of Christ. Dostoevski was a Russian novelist of the 19th century. Anyone wanting to understand poverty or the sufferings of the poor will find his books a moving experience.

People read books for hundreds of reasons: to put in time, to overcome boredom, to put themselves to sleep (surely the oddest of reasons) and to acquire new knowledge.

The Englishman, C. S. Lewis says: "In reading great literature I become a thousand men and yet remain myself." A great book brings beauty and truth into their lives. It will lead us to understand all the emotions of which man is capable; it will help us to understand better the situation and experiences of our fellow men. Reading a fine novel, or the biography of a genius or a great man, can lift us out of our own small world, enabling us to see and feel and understand more deeply — in order to love more surely the world, every man in it, and above all, God.

Long ago a man wrote a book entitled "Asound the World In Eighty Days." Only yesterday Colonel Glenn circled the earth in somewhat over eighty minutes. The world grows smaller every day. A man in the moon is not as far-fetched a possibility as we once imagined. The day is fast approaching, perhaps in your time, when the world's population will be predominately colored people. Are we learning enough about these people to break down barriers?

The Christian is a man who understands the meaning of joy. He really loves God's world. He rejoices in the exploration of outer space. He finds himself more and more sensitive to the beauty of fine poetry, music or art. Through great books, through the best of literature, he will deepen his knowledge enlarge his vision and better understand himself and his fellow men."

Inspired by such an address, it was no wonder that over 350 books were checked out by the students at the Academy during the first two days that the new library was open.

INCLUDES HOUSEWIFE

MONTREAL (CP)—For the first time since it first appeared 119 years ago, Lovell's Montreal city directory has recognized the housewife. Her Christian name now appears alongside her husband's in this fashion: "Smith, John (Mary) . . . ."

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Nina R. — She says she prefers the single life and will never remarry.

Ethel M. — I'm happier this way, even though my sister doubts it.

• • •

Nina R. — My husband and I have just learned that my sister turned down a very attractive man to whom we introduced her. She told him flatly that she has no interest in marriage and is planning to settle down for the long haul, as a bachelor girl.

She's 38 and was widowed five years ago after an eight-year marriage to a merchant seaman He died of a tropical disease contracted in Sumatra. His long absences conditioned her to being alone and now she says she prefers to stay that way.

This worries me. Ethel's the only one in the family living alone. All her girl friends are married, too. It's all right now, but what of the future? There's not much comfort in four walls.

• • •

Ethel M. — I had my taste of marriage and, I might add, my fill of it too. Poor Carl was a good enough husband. But I found myself feeling very cramped whenever he was in port and just praying that he'd get a call to sail. Sometimes when he was ashore for months at a time we'd get into ugly arguments from getting on each other's nerves, underfoot and in the way at every turn.

It's only because his work eased the pressure we each felt from the other's presence, that our marriage lasted as long as it did. On a day in, day out basis, I know I can't stand the demands of a husband.

I'm content this way. Nina and my married friends try to tell me I'm making a mistake. All I can figure is that they're envious!

• • •

The Council: In 1949 a book was published called "Why Are You Single?" (Farrar, Straus & Co.). Concerned relatives and friends used to slip it to people like Ethel, hoping they'd find out what's wrong and correct it. Eminent authorities offered explanations. But one answer offered a tidy escape. Some people, said the experts, are simply not "marriage material." Ethel may be one of these and Nina might as well save her breath — plus the unsuspecting males she introduces to her sister.

Ethel is far from alone. Over 30,000,000 people of marriageable age in the U.S.A. are single. Let's say half of these are women. Subtracting those who plan to marry, want to marry and try to marry, there still remains a hard core of a few millions who may prefer not to marry — and whom no warnings, scares, lures or appeals can budge. In a brand new book, "The Single Women," Phyllis Rosenteur catalogues for these the ways to live happily ever after, without marrying the prince.

But, books aside, what are the flesh-and-blood considerations to raise for these sisters? Nina must concede the possibility that Ethel is selecting a state of single-blessedness with her eyes wide open. She is not 'driven' into marriage by financial, emotional or social need, evidently. Nor will she let herself be 'bullied' into it by prods from Nina and others.

It's her life and she has her personal blueprint for making it peaceful and satisfying. In her present self-confident state, she may regard Nina's importunings as prompted by fear that as 'next of kin' she may be responsible for Ethel's care some day. Hence she'd rather see Ethel "settled."

Granted that Ethel has the courage and resourcefulness necessary for the go-it-alone life. However, let us suggest that she air her views to an impartial family counselor with special emphasis upon the reasons for her choice. Can it be that she doesn't really know marriage or herself? Or knowing them how can she best plan ahead — without depending on (or turning on!) — loved ones like Nina?

Frontier Nursing Service Most Welcome in Kentucky

By GEORGE HACKETT

WENDOVER, Ky. (AP)—The minimum fee is $2 a year, but it buys some of the finest home nursing care in the world for more than 10,000 men, women and children of the mountains of Kentucky.

They are scattered over 700 square miles of forests and streams, an area covered by the women in the blue - grey uniforms of the Frontier Nursing Service.

If a nurse cannot reach a patient by jeep, she rides a horse. If the horse can't make it, she walks. Her heavy saddlebags contain all the equipment needed to handle anything from gunshot wounds to pregnancies.

Since 1925 these professional nurse-midwives, many of them from England, have delivered some 14,000 babies under medical direction. They lost only 11 mothers.

Before the FNS came into the mountains, neighbor assisted neighbor at births in this sparsely settled land of tiny farms, scattered little coal mines, lumber mills and cabins of lonely trappers.

Now, mothers who register with the service get extensive prenatal care. After the birth, nurses visit new babies daily for the first 10 days, then once a month for a year.

PAY WITH EGGS

The cost for a delivery, either at home or in the hospital, is $50, payable in cash, eggs, or what have you. No mother, however, is turned away for lack of funds.

As for the $2 yearly fee, it covers home visits, shots and related services. Medicines are sold at cost.

The success of the FNS is no surprise to its founder, Mrs. Mary Breckinridge, daughter of a prominent southern family.

After the death of her two small children, she wanted to help the mothers and children of isolated rural areas. A registered nurse, she went to England to take graduate training as a midwife, passed the examination and became the first American nurse-midwife.

Returning to Kentucky, she opened the Frontier Nursing Service in a log cabin.

Today, at 81, and bedridden most of the time from a broken back suffered years ago, Mrs. Breckinridge still watches over a staff that includes 30 nurses and a medical director in a modern hospital at nearby Hyden, and the administrative headquarters at Wendover, where she lives.

Mrs. John McInroy, Mrs. Goldie McInroy and Mrs. Mac Sarles were appointed as nominating committee to bring in new slate of officers for next year.

Mrs. Haggerty introduced, Mrs. Rex Rollins district president, who gave an interesting talk on the 65 anniversary program and luncheon she attended in Toronto on February 19. with over 1,400 women present.

Mrs. Elmer Wood, convener for agriculture, presided for the program which opened with Community singing.

Mrs. James MacMillan gave a Valentine reading. Mrs. H. Vinnecombe read a paper, "How Wheat Comes to the Table". A piano solo by Mrs. Reg Haggerty was enjoyed. Mrs. John McInroy gave a reading followed by a paper on "Agriculture", by Mrs. Wood.

Is a Telephone Calling for You?

Miss Doris Clark, Master of Social Work, has had special training in psychology and vocational guidance. In preparing this series, "Careers for Girls," Miss Clark has interviewed career women in the fields she is covering, as well as employers and guidance counsellors.

Doris Clark's human relations column, "Successful Living" runs regularly in The Ontario Intelligencer.

by Doris C. Clark, M.S.W.

(Third in a series for teen-agers on Careers for Girls)

Chief Operator Dorothy Brown sorted Long Distance slips, received a payment from a customer, altered the listed address of a subscriber who had moved, as she kept one eye on her small town switchboard.

Suddenly she noticed the winkink light on her board and plugged in. A young girl's voice, tingling with excitement was saying:

"Operator, operator!"

"Number, please," answered Dorothy.

"Oh operator, can you get my mother for me? She's in the hospital, in Hamlet, eighty miles away."

"May I have her name please, and the name of the hospital?"

"She is Mrs. John Hamilton, and it's the Hamlet General Hospital, and oh do please hurry, operator!"

"Just a moment, please."

Indeed it took only a few seconds. Then:

"Oh Mummy, hello. I passed my exams with first class honors. Daddy's going to buy me a new tennis racquet. Isn't it wonderful?"

"Jean, dear, I'm so proud of you. We'll have to have a special celebration when I get home next week!"

For a few magic minutes these two pals made plans and revelled in each other's nearness - by telephone. Although the operator did not hear what was said, she was aware of the joy a long distance contact had brought into two lives.

She remembered the time when there was a bush fire near a small log cabin. Neighbors had seen the smoke; Dorothy had done the rest: called out a fire brigade; reassured nearby folk; gave details to the newspaper.

She thought of other times when she had been called upon to solve difficult problems, calling on emergency services; finding elusive relatives, or delivering urgent news.

Dorothy felt herself to be an indispensable link in a chain of human relations; an important part of the life of young and old around her.

WOMEN BEST OPERATORS

Operating telephones is a job particularly suited to girls and women. With direct distance dialing, the calls the operator handles are now only those which need some special assistance. Today's operator has become more like a secretary. This increases the interest of the job at the same time as it reduces routine.

Girls can gain high skill as helpful, courteous workers; they can develop ability to solve problems and remain unruffled.

WHAT IS NEEDED

While high school graduates are better equipped for most telephone service jobs, the basic requirement for applicents is usually grade eleven. A pleasant voice is a "must", as well as alertness and an ability to adjust quickly to a customer's problem. Accuracy and patience with detail are needed. A knowledge of geography is helpful when it comes to the proper routing of long distance calls.

WHAT IS OFFERED?

You earn while you learn, through training on the job.

You can depend on steady employment, as service goes on throughout the year. Regular salary increases are the rule. Promotion to higher posts is entirely from within the ranks of the company. One out of every two or three employees' will be a supervisor or have a senior job after five years of employment.

Telephone operators have the advantages of medical service and of benefit payments in the advent of illness. In some companies there is a pension plan provided with all costs by the employer. Two weeks' holidays (which become three if taken in the winter months) are the rule.

IT'S NOT ALL FUN

Practically every business, and a great majority of Canadian homes find they cannot get along without a telephone —or many telephones. This means that service must be there when it is needed — every hour of the day or night.

So the operators work on six seven or eight -hour shifts, depending on size and set-up of the office, and all take their turn, usually changing shift every three weeks. The girls learn to take full advantage of these unoccupied daytime hours.

Many operators marry and leave the service every year so that in spite of the introduction of the automatic dial system, operators and service workers are constantly in demand. They are needed, not only in the telephone offices, but in many other businesses, to operate small and large company switchboards.

So if the telepohne seems to be calling you — think about answering the call. The chief operator in your local telephone office will let you see how she operates and will tell you about opportunities in your own area.

(The new secondary school program in Ontario broadens your choice of subjects. To learn more about the career of a telephone operator and what studies will lead you into it, ask the teacher or guidance counsellor in your own high school.)

The next article "Is social work the career for you?" will appear Thursday, Mar. 1st 1962.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

ORGANIZING THE CHILD'S PLAYTIME

If you want to see a population explode, just look in the backyard sandbox.

A mother may put two or three pre-schoolers out to play and in a matter of minutes count at least half a dozen heads busily bent over construction of a sand castle.

Some yards seem to attract more of a crowd than others. The play larder may be better stocked than most, and the tiny custodians are generous about letting their friends ride their "trikes," chin on the jungle gym and play nursemaid to an extensive family of dolls.

In the meantime, though, how does mother feel about having a flock of children dotting the landscape? If the truth were known, sometimts she feels like a captive baby-sitter, especially when youngsters descend on a regular daily basis.

Supervising a group of active pre-schoolers often becomes a full-time job. Squabbles have to be settled, noses wiped, feelings soothed, games organized and water and bandages dispensed as needed. About the only time she can tend to the house is when the children nap. And even then she has to race against time, knowing that the army will storm the gates again the minute the clock in the steeple strikes two.

A conscientious mother naturally wants her children to feel free to have friends over, and will go out of her way to make them welcome. But playing den mother to a pack of cubs can be wearing when it becomes a day-in, day-out routine.

For this reason, many mothers divvy up the job of supervising. The crowd may play at Johnny's in the morning and Mary's in the afternoon. Or, the mothers may work it out so each does a stint one day a week. Aside from assuring fair play on the maternal level, it also gives each child practice in playing the part of host, and prompts him to share his possessions, instead of always expecting others to share with him.

Arranging visits also lets children know, even at an early age, that hospitality is something that shouldn't be taken for granted. If, for instance, a child is dying to go to Jimmy's house to play trains on a rainy afternoon, then his mother should call and ask permission instead of bundling him off down the block. At other times, it sets a good example to call and invite a special friend over for lunch and play, so the youngster will learn why an invitation is extendtd and how it's done correctly.

When youngsters go visiting, even if it's just next door, mothers also would be wise to tuck a few reminders on courtesy under their caps: Obey the house rules about where to play; don't play indoors when the other children are outside; don't go into the garage or tool shed; don't turn on outside watertaps and leave them running; take turns with the toys; come home when Johnny's mother says so and be sure to thank her before you leave. This simple list should make any child socially acceptable for a morning, at least.

Question: My husband and I are going to a formal dinner shortly, but we've also been invited to a cocktail party earlier at the home of friends who will not be attending the dinner. If we go to the cocktail party at five, we'd have to wear our dinner clothes, so that we could arrive at the dinner by seven. Would it be correct to do so? — Mrs. R.C., Chicago, Ill.

Answer: No. Not only would you feel out of place in dress clothes at such an early hour, but you would be broadcasting the fact that you have a more "important" engagement later on. If you can't change between parties, it would be better form to refuse the cocktail invitation.

Cuban Women Outnumber Men at Rallies

By JOHN BLAND

HAVANA (Reuters) — Long-haired, bushy-bearded men directed the revolution in the hills of Cuba but now it is the women who are to a large degree maintaining its momentum.

Women and girls outnumber men at the frequent mass rallies held to mark an anniversary or some new landmark in the revolution's progress.

And when the crowds take up a favorite slogan — Fidel, Seguro, a Los Yanquis Dale Duro (Fidel, for sure, hit the Yankees Hard) or even Paredon To the Wall) — it is the female voices which prevail in the shouting.

High in prestige among the revolutionary organizations is the federation of Cuban women.

Under the presidency of Vilma Espin de Castro, wife of the premier's brother, Armed Forces Minister Raul Castro the federation was started in August, 1960, mainly as an organization of women from the professions.

GREW QUICKLY

Later, it absorbed a body known as feminine unity, composed chiefly of housewives, working women and peasant wives.

In a year and a half, the federation has played a major role in whipping up solidarity for the revolution, creating the vigilante groups called Committees for the Defence of the Revolution and undertaking many organizing tasks.

The women mobilized armies of voluntary cane-cutters to ensure a large sugar harvest in the first five months of 1961.

The federation claims to have recruited about 150,000 new members during 1961, to have won 20,000 new militia women for the revolution, operated 795 "dressmaking schools" for thousands of peasant girls, and got another 20,000 girls to volunteer as teachers in an anti-illiteracy campaign.

One campaign, to encourage more women to enter industry, has not yet borne fruit on a large scale. This will be a major aim of the federation in 1962.

Fresh Salads Are Essential To Good Health

by Mary Moore

We have had a serious conference. From our observation of the past few weeks of dining out we have decided that cooks are not serving salads once per day.

For properly nourishing your family you should serve a fresh salad every day — prepared the last few minutes before dinner is served

Salads need not be expensive. All you need is the conviction that they are necessary to the nutrition of your family.

I made the following salad for dinner last night and Susan ate a wooden bowl full.

MONDAY

Dinner Menu

Smoked Sausages; Dill Pickles; Candied Sweet Potatoes; Braised Cabbage; Head Lettuce and Green Pepper Salad with Roquefort Dressing; Canned or Fresh Pear Halves with Orange Sherbet; Coffee.

EASY ECONOMICAL VEGETABLE SALAD

1 medium carrot, shredded finely, ½ small hard head lettuce, 1 cup finely sliced inner celery stalks and little green leaves, 1 finely sliced green onion or 1 teaspoon grated onion (onion is optional), shake of garlic salt, ¼ cup grated old Cheddar cheese, dressing.

Just before dinner prepare above ingredients and toss in bowl with enough mayonnaise or mayonnaise and sour cream to moisten.

INDIVIDUAL ECONOMICAL FRUIT SALADS

These take the place of a tossed vegetable salad and serve as dessert too if cheese and crackers are provided.

Try to make each individual salad a picture. Plan your arrangement. Because grapefruits are one of the best fruit buys on the market now use grapefruit sections, soft big prunes, canned peaches, inner lettuce leaves and white cream or cottage cheese. Wash and dry well inner head lettuce leaves. Arrange 2 of them overlapping like cups, on each tea plate. In each cup arrange at centre one-half peach hollow side up and around it arrange 3 grapefruit sections Outside lettuce cup place 2 seeded prunes stuffed with an almond or a walnut. Make 1" balls of white cheese or mounds of cottage cheese and place in hollow of peach. Pass mayonnaise or simple Sweet-Sour Fruit Salad Dressing —Mix together in a saucepan 1 teaspoon each salt, dry mustard and paprika, ¾ cup sugar, ½ teaspoon celery seed and 1-3 cup vinegar or lemon juice. Heat to dissolve sugar. Cool. Add 1 cup salad oil and 1 tablespoon grated onion. Store covered in refrigerator. Just before serving whip with fork. Keeps very well.

In a week or so I will give you more ideas for salads.

Rigors of Russia's Tough Educational System Subject Of Editorials in Pravda

By JOHN MILLER

MOSCOW (Reuters) — A letter from a worried father in the official Communist party newspaper Pravda spotlights parental fears about the rigors of Russia's tough educational system.

The father, who works in an electrical factory outside Moscow, complained his eight-year-old son toiled through a mountain of homework in five subjects every night.

If the boy went for a walk or played with his friends, the father said, it meant his homework was not done—with a resulting bad mark in school next morning.

"What can I, as a father, do about it?" he asked.

Pravda published the letter together with several others like it, in an article demanding the ministry of education and Soviet teachers cut down homework and revise school programs.

NO TIME FOR FUN

The campaign was started by a letter from a woman teacher who said Soviet schoolchildren get "no time for rest, for games or for reading."

"The factory working-day is seven hours," she wrote, "But the sons and daughters of the factory worker study 10 to 12 hours a day — six hours at school, three to four hours for homework and another hour or two for outside school activities."

Three weeks after the letter appeared, Pravda reported it was getting "scores of letters a day" on the subject.

Pravda thundered: "Something must be done about this question of homework. The education ministries of the Soviet republics must begin to ask themselves a few questions."

School programs, it declared, should be revised, text books reviewed and the number of lessons reduced.

Picture of PC Meeting Sent Free to Papers

TORONTO (CP) — A photographer of the Ontario department of travel and publicity Thursday night took a group picture at a meeting of the Trinity Young Progressive Conservative Association here.

The matter came to light when eight-by-10 - inch glossy prints arrived at Toronto's three daily newspapers Friday in an envelope with a department sticker describing the contents as an "official publication for free distribution."

Travel and Publicity Minister Bryan Cathcart said Friday the department had no right to be there or to send prints to the newspapers. He said he was unaware the photographer had been assigned to the meeting.

"The only explanation I can think of is that this is an oversight on the part of some news photographer in our office. We don't follow this formula for any party, regardless of who they are."

Mr. Cathcart later issued an order to his staff that any future assignment with a political connotation must be brought to his attention.

Kenneth Carson, chairman of the association, said he had telephoned the photography section of the department last week for coverage. "I didn't know there was anything wrong in doing that."

Liberal Leader John Wintermeyer commented:

"We can understand that this association needs publicity, but we doubt whether the taxpayers' money should be spent for this purpose."

'Britain in Europe' Could Develop Into Major Theme In Next General Election

By DAVID OANCIA

LONDON (CP)—A feeling of uneasiness appears to be creeping into the discussions of Britain's bid to become a member of the European Economic Community.

The soul - searching is being reflected in newspaper columns, pub conversations, workshops and conference rooms.

It reached a point recently where some cabinet ministers were pointedly leaking to political correspondents reports that the timetable for Britain's entry may be delayed.

These inspired stories are taken as a government attempt to damp down what it feels may be incautious optimism over the chances of British membership in the community launched by Germany, France, Italy, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg.

FACE INTERNAL STRIFE

They are viewed also as an indication of the recognition by Prime Minister Macmillan's Conservative government of the formidable political struggle it faces in its own ranks over the common market issue.

They could also be a reflection of government feeling that the skilful public relations program to sell the common market idea in Britain may not be as successful as was hoped at the outset.

The sell-the-six program has been concentrated almost entirely on the economic advantages Britain would gain by joining the moves toward broader European union.

Little has been said about the political implications either for the Mother country or for the Commonwealth it heads. Most informed observers accept that Britain will almost certainly have to sacrifice some of her sovereignty if she becomes a community member.

This raises the question of her future relationship with the colonies she fostered into empire and eventually into the family of nations. And this is one of the questions that most worries the staunch Tories who have felt more at home in the little Englands around the world than they have in Bonn, Paris or Rome.

IDEA UNDERPLAYED

Cabinet ministers selling the idea of union in Europe have deliberately underplayed the idea that the goal of economic union is ultimately the political union of the Western half of the old continent.

With community membership the British Parliament, which has been supreme in the land, will give up some of its sovereign powers of national choice to the majority rule of the common market's member states.

It is on this aspect that the empire-minded Tories are building up their campaign against Britain throwing in her lot with that of her continental neighbors.

If the negotiations on the British application in Brussels drag on, these forces may be able to muster enough power to jeopardize seriously the moves to draw closer to the continent.

The hope still appears to be that the broad outlines of any membership settlement will be known by July at the latest. Since the government has rejected the idea of a national referendum on joining, the common market debate could then take place in Parliament before the summer recess.

This also would permit the convening of a Commonwealth prime ministers' conference to discuss the family's future following the development of closer Western European Union.

NEED ACTION BY FALL

But if no clear pattern of settlement emerges before the British political party conferences in the fall, Prime Minister Macmillan's government may be in for some serious internal strife.

The conference traditionally has provided a forum for speakers who have been far more right-wing and empire-conscious than the party's Parliamentary leadership.

Macmillan is determined to take Britain into Europe both economically and, as far as possible, politically. "Britain in Europe" could develop into a major theme during the next British election.

But observers stress that neither the prime minister nor his colleagues have any illusions about the political difficulties these moves present for the government leaders at home.

Hungarian Partridge Thrives In New Habitat on Prairies

EDMONTON (CP)—How can a little bird from Europe survive an Alberta winter night at 40 degrees below zero?

The way of the Hungarian partridge is to eat a lot and sleep close to its friends.

This is one of the findings of Dr. Kaj Westerskov, chief biologist of the New Zealand internal affairs department wildlife division, who is in Edmonton for a year to study the bird.

Dr. Westerskov already has written several papers on the popular game bird which he has studied in Europe and the United States.

Dr. Westerskov says he is particularly interested in the Hungarian partridge in Alberta because it has done so well here.

QUICK TAKEOFF

The bird has become one of the most popular game birds and is considered a delicacy by Alberta hunters.

Flushed from a field of stubble by a stalking hunter or dog it makes a jet - propelled takeoff and is a challenge to a quick aim before it disappears over a knoll, lands and scurries along the ground for cover. The bird has an in - flight speed approaching 30 miles an hour.

"The partridges which were liberated at Calgary in 1908 were a classic case of game introduction," Dr. Westerskov says. "The Prairies have since become the best area in North America for the bird, though thousands have been introduced elsewhere."

Three years ago, Dr. Westerskov introduced the partridge to New Zealand, flying in the eggs. Many were misled by the season change and began breeding too early. Another 500 adult birds have since been liberated in the islands.

LIVES ON GROUND

Dr. Westerskov says Alberta is ideally suited to the bird, which lives on the ground rather than in trees, and prefers flat, cleared land.

It grows to about 14 ounces on a diet of seeds, insects and greenstuff, thriving on the waste grain and weed seeds of Alberta's farm fields.

Alberta's comparatively light snowfall also helps the partridge, for its food supply is not hopelessly buried in winter.

Extreme cold does not seem to worry the bird, which keeps itself well stocked with calories in winter and is noticeably heavier then.

Partridges usually spend the winter in coveys of eight or more, Dr. Westerskov says, and at night they squeeze together in a sheltered spot on the ground. If many in the original group are shot, several coveys join together.

In 1961 hunters in northern Alberta chased the bird over hill and dale from Oct. 7 to Dec. 9 in trying for their daily bag limit of 10. In the south the season was Oct. 7-31 and Nov. 11-Dec. 9 and the daily limit five.

Canada Outdoors

By STAN McCABE

WINNIPEG (CP) — One of the first problems encountered in the planting of wild turkeys in southern Manitoba has been to keep them wild.

The project in the Pembina Valley, near the international border 60 miles south of Winnipeg, has been carried out by a private organization known as Wild Gobblers Unlimited.

Andy Blatz of Morden, Man., president of the organization, was asked in an interview how the big game birds are doing in the severe winter that has hit southern Manitoba.

"We think they are wintering very well. The severe weather is not doing them any harm at all."

There had been some losses from a late hatch but these were not unexpected.

GAINING KNOWLEDGE

Mr. Blatz was questioned about the fears of some wildlife experts that when times get tough the turkeys move into civilization, scrounging for feed in cattle feed lots and around farmyards. He admitted this was the case with some turkeys released earlier but the latest crop "are getting wild."

As far as the first flocks are concerned, "what we are losing by domestication we are regaining in knowledge of the birds."

About 185 birds now are spread out along the Pembina Valley. Although they have trouble, as ground feeders, getting through 15 to 20 inches of snow for food, Mr. Blatz says "they'll take a lot of abuse; the least of our worries is the winter."

FEAR PREDATORS

The hatching season is the most difficult. Predators, the worst of which are skunks, get at the nests. Other natural enemies are horned owls and crows.

However, birds checked as recently as early February were in the pink of condition.

Last fall, some were trapped and weighed. A scale with a capacity of 25 pounds couldn't handle some of the year-old toms.

Some game officials are worried that the wild birds will mix with domesticated turkeys and ruin the wild strain. But Howie Larkie, representative of a brewery which is one of the organization's supporters, says that as far as he knows all the groups backing the project are satisfied with progress.

Twelve to 14 organizations belong to the association which is open to any group interested in promoting the project. They pay $50 initiation fees.

Widow Wants to Meet Widower

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—How can I meet a lonely widower who is interested in meeting me? I can't get the one who tells me about him to introduce us as he says he is jealous of me (although he himself is married.)—LONELY WIDOW.

DEAR LONELY WIDOW:—Your friend is a dog in the manger. Can't have you himself but won't let anybody else have you either. A real friend would recognize loneliness and be helpful.

He may be giving the widower a build-up just to tease you. Try showing you doubt his descriptions. Seeing is believing—and you may just be able to tempt him into bringing you together to prove something to you.

• • •

DEAR DORIS:—I am a disabled man of 30 and my worst problem is loneliness. I had an attack of paralysis of some kind when I was little and this has left my legs smaller than my body.

I walk quite well and can also drive a car, but tire easily. I live with my mother, who thinks I should be content to stay with her and watch TV. That I should not think of girl friends; that it is just not to be.

People stare and one person has implied that I am not all there. Also people say I smell bad because of my health. I can't face the smirks and whispers. I have never been out with a girl in my life.

I used to get invitations to dances but I don't go. Male friends says, "Get going. You don't look too bad," and my uncle says, "Why not try getting a girl and getting married?"

Should I try and keep up with the times more? Or should I be content to be just as I am and take a chance on going mad?—FED UP.

DEAR FED UP:—Get going. A man is as able as he thinks he is. Whole families are raised by men more disabled than you are.

Do you see people smirking? Do you hear the whispers? Any one of us could be put off by unkind looks and chatter.

There are lonely girls in this world who need friendliness. If you have a b.o. problem, bathe every single day and before you go out. Ask your doctor about a specific remedy for this in your case.

• • •

DEAR DORIS:—I am forty-two and in love with a man ten years younger. Before I get too involved with him I want to know if a difference like this would make a difference in later years.

We get along very nicely together, seems we like the same things: the country, music, books. I could never read in the presence of my former husband but this man loves me to read to him.

Many things like this give me a relaxed feeling that I never had before. Please what shall I do? I am so at a loss to do the right thing.—TINKA.

DEAR TINKA — The odds are against you.

Right now the age difference doesn't matter. Later on the effort to keep up with your youthful spouse could be overwhelming and eventually disastrous. But there have been happy exceptions and the decision must be yours.

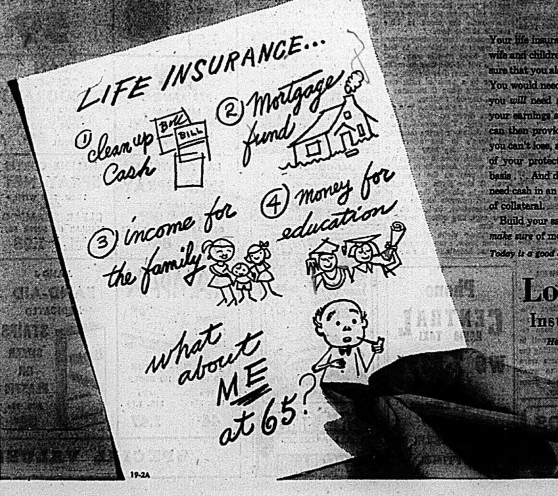
Make sure that you provide for yourself in your Life Insurance program...



Your life insurance should, first of all, provide for your wife and children. But the job doesn't stop there. Make sure that you also include INCOME FOR YOURSELF. You would need it, if you should become disabled. And you will need money to live on when you retire and your earnings stop. Life insurance with savings values can then provide you with a guaranteed income which you can't lose, and can't outlive. At the same time, part of your protection can be continued on a "paid-up" basis . . . And during your savings period, if you should need cash in an emergency, it will serve as the best kind of collateral.

Mother Works To Finance Legal Battle

TORONTO (CP) — An attractive blonde mother has taken a job as bookbinder to help finance her legal battle on both sides of the Atlantic for custody of her two children taken by her estranged husband to his Southampton, England, home.

Mrs. Charles Sabine, 25, said Friday: "I'll never give up—I wouldn't be a mother if I did."

Her 27 - year - old husband, who was a clerk for an oil company here, flew to England Christmas Eve with Lindsay Anne, now 6, and Michael, 2.

A custody action here is due for hearing in March, but Mr. Sabine said in England he could not wait for the Ontario courts to take their course.

An interim order for return of the childen issued Jan. 2 by Judge Robert Forsyth has been ignored by the father.

"I want to get a custody order here to strengthen my case later in the English courts," said Mrs. Sabine.

"I'll have to go to England myself and I'm saving every cent I can. I've got almost enough for my passage, but I want to bring the children back to Toronto so they can grow up here."

Secret Army Organization Dedicated to Maintaining European Rule in Algeria

The end of the seven-year war in Algeria appears to be in sight, but the fighting may not be over. In this story Dave Oancia of the London bureau of The Canadian Press, who went to Algeria, discusses prospects for achieving peace after a truce is reached.

By DAVE OANCIA

ALGIERS (CP) — Barring last-minute hitches, the French government and the Algerian National Liberation Front will announce a cease - fire within days.

Officials are optimistic that it will end the murderous war that for seven years has ravaged a land stretching from the palm-fringed Mediterranean, across the snow - capped Atlas Mountains and deep into the Sahara.

The announcement will launch the North African territory on the road to full independence. This is precisely what the Pied-noirs — Europeans born in Algeria — are striving to prevent.

They fear an independent Algeria governed and policed by Moslems. Their hatred of President de Gaulle and his supporters, who have taken the decisive step in granting the Algerians self - determination, could hardly be more intense.

And desperation born of fear and hatred has led them to support either actively or passively the extremist Secret Army Organization dedicated to maintaining European rule in Algeria.

PEACE NOT CERTAIN

This provides the seeds of the new conflict that appears to be shaping up.

This is what indicates observers to discount the official optimism that a cease - fire announcement will bring a quick end to strife in this volatile community of 9,000,000 Moslems and 1,000,000 Europeans.

Some estimate it may take as much as half a decade and the flight of up to 400,000 Europeans from Algeria to restore a semblance of peace.

The terror that one sees in the streets of this whitewashed city and the deep cleavage developing between the Moslem and European communities bear out this view.

In suburban Bab-el-Oued, residential area of the angry European working class, a white-robed Moslem woman tried to throw a grenade under a school. She fumbled and it exploded, severely injuring her.

BEATEN TO DEATH

Enraged European mothers who had been waiting to take their children home kicked and clubbed her to death.

In Belcourt, a mixed residential area, a Moslem heaved a grenade into a cafe. A mob seized and battered him against a stone wall. In 30 seconds all that was left was a bloody mess. Some of the Europeans spat on the remains.

The Secret Army Organization headed by ex - general Raoul Salan has engaged in a systematic campaign of terror both in Algeria and Metropolitan France.

Its killer commandos mow people down in the streets, sometimes while local police look the other way. In secret weeks they have shot up a train load of civil servants, an airport bus and half a dozen postmen. Strikes followed each of the incidents.

The actions seem to be aimed at crippling the administration and making it impossible to implement any agreement reached between the French government and the Moslem rebels.

WOULD FORCE BATTLE

The second aim is to force the army into a major clash with the Moslems in an attempt to scuttle any accord.

Tough security guards who wear the steel helmets and bullet - proof vests have been brought in from France to help maintain order. They can be seen in many parts of Algiers in their armored cars or patrolling in twos or threes with their sub - machine - guns at the ready.

They have, however, made no attempt to take control of the European Bab - el - Oued district or much of Oran — Algiers' second city — which are strongholds of the secret army.

Special undercover agents called Barbouzes have also been brought in from the mainland to fight the secret army with its own methods. They lend a Chicago gangland atmosphere to the many - sided conflict now visible in the streets here.

It is against this background on hatred, terror, strife and distrust that de Gaulle is trying to win peace. His hopes and that of his followers is that Europeans will view as reasonable the accord with the rebels. The agreements soon to be announced, will make a big point of detailing the safeguards for the European population in an independent Algeria ruled by the Moslem majority.

The government, however, is taking no chances. More than 50,000 army troops — many of them conscripts with little sympathy for the Algerian settlers —have been moved into positions around the major cities.

The cease - fire will be the first hurdle the government must clear in the days ahead.

But probably as difficult will be the attempt to establish a transitional executive body with a Moslem majority to organize the referendum on Algeria's future.

If the vote is for an independent Algeria — and few doubt that it will be — then this body will have the responsibility of preparing the elections for the first Algerian constituent assembly.

It is almost certain that the campaign of terror now being waged by the secret army will reach a crescendo before these steps are taken.

North America Once Chinese Colony Say Communists

By HO CHANG PANG

HONG KONG (Reuters)—The Chinese Communists have claimed that all of North America was once a Chinese colony.

A recent issue of the magazine China Youth said the Chinese settled in North America following their discovery of the continent 1,000 years before the voyages of Columbus.

The Chinese colonists "exerted a far-reaching influence" on the natives of North America, according to the magazine.

It cited archeological evidence to support its claim and says that excavations in Mexico and Canada provide the most clues.

One of the most significant discoveries, it said, was made in 1923, at Teotihuacan, about 27 miles north of Mexico City.

Excavations of a tower there uncovered hieroglyphic carvings and a Peking government official who visited the site recently identified three Chinese characters "sun," "eye," and "city" from the hieroglyphs.

Archeologists also have found old Chinese coins, bricks, carvings and tablets with Han (Chinese) inscriptions in Mexico, money used in China about 1,000 years ago in Ecuador and a stone tablet with Chinese characters in Peru, the publication said.

To the north, on the Atlantic coast of Canada, they found some early Chinese character forms carved on a stone pillar.

China Youth said North America, 1,500 years ago, was either contiguous to Asia or separated from it by a narrow waterway, and it was easy for the Chinese, with their knowledge of navigation, to cross over.

Scout Officials Concerned About Appeal of Program For Many of Older Boys

By RON LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian boys are joining the scouting movement in droves but the growth is chiefly among the younger lads and scout officials are concerned about the appeal of its program for older boys.

Today's more - sophisticated teen - agers are apparently losing interest in the knee-pants-and-campfire style of scouting.

Since 1959 a special subcommittee of the national executive has been studying this trend and ways to reverse it.

Headed by J. Barry Cale of Montreal, the group has asked for more time to complete its "complex task."

It has rejected for the moment suggestions that the traditional short pants be discarded as part of a general modernization of the uniform.

In a recent report the subcommittee wrote: "Before any suggestions for adaptation or modification can be made, it will be necessary to know just what the youth of Canada, sitting on an H-bomb volcano at the dawn of space travel, needs.

"They need help first as youths and second to develop into adults well fitted for the world in which they will have to live."

EXPAND PROGRAM

While this basic study continues, the Scout program is being broadened steadily. It's reflected in the observance of Boy Scout Week Feb. 18-25.

Scout strength has more than trebled since 1945. The increase was 25,000 in the last three years alone. But most of these gains were made among younger boys. There are 167,200 Wolf Cubs (the eight-to-11 age group) compared with 106,200 Boy Scouts (11 to 18) and 4,500 Rover Scouts (18 to 23).

Scouts are branching out into a wide range of new activities. They are studying winter scouting and survival, assisting welfare agencies, operating ham radio stations, helping train retarded children.

New Scout troops have been established at Canadian NATO bases in Europe and in remote northern communities such as Frobisher Bay and Cape Dorset.

Plans are under way for the fourth Canadian Rover Moot to be held near Trois - Rivieres, Que., Aug. 27 - Sept. 4, and for the 11th World Jamboree in Greece in July, 1963.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

With victory scalps already hanging at their belts, two city hockey squads go a-questing for further OHA round-robin honors tonight.

The Pepsi's, after a two-period scare at the hands of the hard-punching Lindsay Lumbermen, came out with a 12-6 win in their intermediate "A" series, and tonight trek to Kingston, 50 miles east 'o here, to take on the representatives of the Limestone City. The Lamiranders defeated the Kingston squad in an exhibition set-to earlier in the season.

The McFarland juniors, currently playing their best hockey of the season, junket to Peterborough to wind up the home-and-home round robin junior "B" series with the Liftlock youngsters. They blanked the Petes 3-0 in a hard-fought battle here in the first meeting. And they edged the hard-fighting Kingston Frontenacs 3-2 in their opener to chalk up a 2-0 record.

Gordie Bell's youngsters have flashed a full potential in their last two or three times out. And their "apogee" comes at the right time. They played brilliant hockey to defeat their all-season nemesis, the Kingson younkers, who had the Indian sign on them almost every time out. But with the chips down—and off their shoulders—the McFarlands have kept their heads up and their sticks down and developed into a fast-skating, hard-fighting young crew.

But Coach Gordie Bell is not letting two early-round victories go to the squad's collective heads. He knows and he has left the Macs know that one or two wins do not constitute a championship or a series award. The Petes and the Frontenacs are not treating their inaugural setbacks lightly. Tonight the Macs must needs go all out to turn back the fired-up Monsens in their Peterborough backyard.

And next Friday, Memorial Arena should be the setting for one of the best junior tilts seen here this or any other season. The Frontenacs still smarting from that first-game 3-2 overtime setback, will be going all out for victory in their return game with the McFarlands.

Wednesday night the Kingston intermediate "A" entry will be the guests of the Pepsi's in their second game of their home-and-home round-robin series.

There was a day when the announcement "Kingston versus Belleville" here was the rallying cry of the faithful. They "rode the rafters of the Old Lady of the Market Square" here and jammed cars and sometimes railway passenger cars when the teams squared off in Roddenville.

Time was when we jumped the crevices and skirted the precipices in the old Jock Harty arena to watch Belleville and Kingston puck gladiators battle in the ampitheatre.

Later it was Kingston and Belleville teams that opened the new Kingston Community Centre before a crowd that exceeded 4,000, a lot of whish as Don Miguel Roddeno put it hardly knew a puck from a football.

And as fate would have it, and perhaps fittingly, the Kingston team nudged our side by a 2-1 score, an event that sent Mike Rodden into orbit in the press box. Mike took off a second or so before Maxie Jackson hit the stratosphere after he extracted the public address microphone from between clenched jaws.

Later that season, or was it the next, our mayor led Kingston's "Mister Ed" down the town's main-street with the local chief magistrate riding the nag's poopdeck. It was the result of a good-natured, inter-city mayoralty wager.

In any event we lost the hockey series but won the horse parade. Our mayor came home with two aching legs, but the Limestone City "boss" ate his meals off the mantelpiece for the next two weeks.

Jerry Serviss' second goal of the game was the winner for Windsor, scored in the last period in spectacular fashion from a kneeling position with his back to the net.

Two goals by Jack McIlwain and one from Barry Hearn for Stratford had erased the Bulldogs' lead when Serviss gave Windsor the lead. Tom Walker also scored twice for Windsor and Walter Pawlyshyn added the final tally, hitting an empty net with nine seconds left.

THREE FAST GOALS

Woodstock, third-place regular-season finisher, broke open a hard-fought 2-2 game with sixth - place Waterloo, scoring three goals in the first five minutes of the final period.

Hawks, Leafs Feast On Wings, Bruins

Habs Win, Tie Blues

By LAURENT CHIASSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A whopping 46 goals were scored in National Hockey League weekend play. Toronto Maple Leafs and Chicago Black Hawks were the chief benefactors.

The Leafs and Hawks, battling for second place, each took turns feasting on Boston Bruins and Detroit Red Wings.

Toronto, led by Dave Keon, George Armstrong and Ed Litzenberger, slapped down the hapless Bruins 7-2 on home ice Saturday night, then followed up with an 8-2 rout of the Wings at Detroit Sunday night.

The trio accounted for 19 scoring points, Keon getting seven and Armstrong and Litzenberger six each.

Chicago, meanwhile, drubbed the Wings 6-1 in a Saturday game at Detroit and belted the Bruins 8-0 on home ice Sunday night as goalie Glenn Hall kicked out 27 shots for his shutout of the season.

SCORES IN EACH GAME

The runaway Montreal Canadians emerged with a win and a tie in a home - and - home series with New York Rangers.

The Habitants, led by Dickie Moore's two goals, whipped the Rangers 4-2 at Montreal Saturday night. At New York Sunday night, the Canadiens needed a late goal by Bobby Rousseau o earn a 3-3 tie.

Keon and Litzenberger each scored twice for the Leafs while Armstrong, Frank Mahovlich and Red Kelly added singles. Charley Burns and Larry Leich counted for the Bruins.

At Detroit, Bob Pulford had two goals for the Leafs while Keon, Litzenberger, Armstrong, Mahovlich, Billy Harris and defenceman Tim Horton each got one.

Both Detroit goals came late in the second period with Claude Laforge and rookie Larry Jeffrey getting them.

Substitute goalie Hank Bassen was the victim of the Toronto onslaught. He was back in the nets after veteran Terry Sawchuk, returning to action after a three - week layoff, was bombed by the Hawks Saturday.

Ab McDonald potted two of Chicago's goals in the Hawks' massacre of the Wings. Hull, Ken Wharram, Eric Nesterenko and Bronco Horvath got the others. Detroit got its only goal on a close - in shot by Norm Ullman early in the second period.

GETS SIX ASSISTS

Nesterenko was the Hawks' only two - goal scorer Sunday night. Hull, Bill (Red) Hay, McDonald, Horvath, Murray Balfour and defenceman Pierre Pilote got the others. Stan Mikita picked up six assists, four in the Detroit game, for the Hawks.

At Montreal, Moore scored two goals. Gilles Tremblay and Phil Goyette were the other Montreal goal-getters.

Both New York goals, by Guy Gendron and Earl Ingarfield, came in the last five minutes of play.

At New York, the Canadiens were turned back time and again by Lorne Worsley's good and often spectacular netminding. Worsley, back in the nets after missing two games with the flu, was credited with 48 saves.

He was beaten by Henri Richard in the first period, Jean Beliveau in the second and Rousseau at 16:11 of the third.

Andy Bathgate, Dean Prentice and defenceman Al Langlois scored for the Rangers.

There are no games in the league until Wednesday night when Chicago plays at Toronto and Boston is at New York.

Yankees' Top Rookie

Owes Chance to Miracle

By JOE REICHLER

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP)—Joe Pepitone, a 21-year-old rookie whose name sounds like a miracle drug, owes his big league chance with New York Yankees to a true miracle.

The impressive - looking outfielder and first baseman has been nominated as the youngster with the best chance of making the team. Just four years ago, the Brooklyn-born hopeful was given a slim chance to live.

A classmate brought a loaded gun to school and shot Joe in the stomach. His doctor dispaired of his life, declaring only a miracle could pull him through.

"The kid was one of those wild ones you read about," said Joe. "He found this rusty gun on the docks and brought it to school. We were just finishing our last class, in office machines, and I was getting my coat.

PULLS TRIGGER

"This boy stuck the gun in my stomach and barked, 'Hands up.' I was so frightened, I backed right into the clothes closet. The next thing I knew he had pulled the trigger. The strange thing about it, I didn't feel a thing. I looked at my stomach and saw a hole, there was no blood, that's all I remembered until after the operation."

Joe was in the hospital 12 days on the critical list. The doctor who operated told Joe's mother he didn't think her son could survive the operation. Joe lay on the operating table nine hours.

Before the accident, no fewer than 12 major league clubs sought the boy's services. Joe had been the star outfielder of the high school baseball team.

"After the shooting, all the clubs dropped out except the Dodgers, Cubs and Yankees. Finally only the Dodgers and Yankees were left. The Dodgers gave me a fine offer and so did the Yankees. I chose the Yankees for two reasons. First from the very begining, Joe DiMaggio had been my idol.

"Second and most important, it was my father's wish that I play with the Yankees., pop died about a month after my operation."

Beavers, Kingston Top Tied

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

"Beavers started off strong Saturday night by swamping Sault Ste. Marie 9-4. Sunday they were held to a 2-2 tie by North Bay Trappers.

Frontenacs snapped a three-game losing streak Saturday when they blanked the visiting Trappers 2-0.

The shutout was Ed Chadwick's second of the season. Kingston scorers were Pete Panagabko and Don Blackburn.

TO-MORROW'S NAVAL OFFICER COULD BE YOU

NEW YORK (CP)—Two Canadian runners captured first places Saturday night among athletes who took part in the 74th United States Amateur Athletic Union indoor track and field championships.

Bruce Kidd, 18, a freshman at the University of Toronto, retained the title in the AAU three-mile event with a winning time of 13 minutes, 48.8 seconds. He first won the three-mile AAU title in 1961.

Another U. of T. student, Bill Crothers, won the 600-yard title in one minute, 10.8 seconds—1½ seconds off the indoor record of 1:09.3 that he had hoped to break.

Both Crothers and Kidd ran under the colors of the East York Track Club in the championships at Madison Square Garden before a crowd of 16,864.

American Jim Beatty gave New York its fastest indoor mile ever by completing the distance in 4:00.2.

KIDD LEADS THE WAY

Kidd, his arms waggling, left behind Pat Clohessy of Houston, Sandor Iharos of Hungary and Jared Nourse of Duke University. Kidd took over from Iharos shortly after the first mile and led the rest of the way.

Crothers won by a good five yards over his nearest rival, Jack Yerman, a U.S. Army lieutenant. Crothers held back at first and then moved up smartly, roaring into the lead with a lap to go.

Villanova captured the team title with 18 points, with the East York Club winding up fourth with 10 points.

Steve Ball of Toronto won the mile run during AAU interscholastic events in the afternoon on the same track. The Etobicoke Collegiate Institute student missed the record of 4:16.9, recording a time of 4:19.0.

Juvenile Game 'Disgraceful'

Kingston Ousts Minors

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Writer

Belleville's minor hockey teams bowed, but far from gracefully, out of the Ontario Minor Hockey Association playdowns here Saturday.

Kingston bantams whipped the local kids 9-2 to win their series 12-4; the visiting midgets took a 7-1 victory and a 15-2 decision on the round and Kingston juveniles blanked Belleville 6-0 in a disgraceful excuse for hockey, copping that series 12-1.

JUVENILE

With hockey apparently the farthest thing from their minds, the juvenile teams set out to injure as many opposing players as possible while showing complete disrespect for referees Gord Lowe of Kingston and Gord Gregory of Belleville.

Lowe and Gregory handed out 116 minutes in penalties in all, 83 of them to Belleville. The penalty bench was crowded throughout with often as many as five and six players serving time at once.

Police were finally called to the arena, as protection for the Kingston goal judge, and at one time came to the penalty box to prevent fights that had started on the ice from continuing there.

One Belleville player, Norm Richards, received a misconduct, a game misconduct and a match penalty when he argued with Lowe, shoved him and threatened him. Misconduct penalties were also handed out to Wayne Branton and Bruce Seames and a game misconduct to Don Goodfelow, all of Belleville.

Both clubs used high sticks, butt ends and every possible means to try and batter their opponents. Players stood threatening each other at times while the puck slid past them, completely ignored.

In the hockey part, Kingston got two goals each from Don Smith, one of the Kingston bad[illegible]en, and Gary Cox. Winston Dowdell, with a goal and two assists, and Ron Earl, also scored. The score by periods was 2-0, 3-0 and 6-0.

KINGSTON: Perry, Stevens, Smith, Earl, Aylesworth, Dowdell, Mulholland, Skegg, Riddell, K. White, Cashman, Cox, Leonard, Clancy, B. White.

BELLEVILLE: D. Boomhower, D. Goodfellow, B. Seames, C. Boomhower, N. Richards, G. McMillan, J. St. Denis, P. Emerson, J. Rutherford, B. Symons, K. Johnson, M. Foxon, W. Branton, R. Turner, J. Woodcock.

MIDGET

Kingston took a 4-1 first period lead in this one and added one marker in the second and two in the third.

After a quiet two periods, this tilt turned into a mass of penalties too. Three fights featured the third period, one coming after the game's final whistle when Kingston's Danny White slashed Belleville's Harold Babcock. Goalie Bob Moon of the losers, joined this battle and picked up a major and misconduct.

Kingston drew 12 penalties, including four majors, while Belleville had seven sentences in all, including four majors and a misconduct.

Belleville enjoyed a two-man advantage at one time in the third period but could not score. The losers' lone goal was scored by Frank Farrell.

Chris Roberts paced Kingston with a pair of goals while Bill Douglas, Brian Roe, Doug Percival and Danny White got Jim Spratt got the others.

BELLEVILLE — B. Moon, [illegible] Schwindt, Ethier, Farrell, Boyle, Hallam, Denard, Law, McGuire, Goodfellow, Babcock, Rathwell, Soule, Langabeer, Stewart.

BANTAM

Kingston's fast - skating, sharp-shooting squad took a 2-0 lead in the first period and ran the count to 6-0 in the second.

Jim Dorey, with two goals and two assists, and Paul Kelly, with two and one, stood out on the winners' attack. Al Breck, Bill Meyers, Jim Shea and Rick Burns potted the other goals.

For Belleville, Dave Beresford and Steve White each triggered one goal while Ron Hannah had the lone assist.

This was the only clean game of the day, at least in comparison to the other two games. Kingston picked up five of nine minor penalties.

KINGSTON — Lovett, Dorey, Gibson, Breck, Ivan, Kelly, Burns, MacKay, Myers, Sudengaard, Flanigan, Shea, K. Smith, R. Smith, Mullen.

BELLEVILLE — V. Whalen, J. Murphy, B. Young, H. Townsend, D. Dickey, D. Beresford, B. Snowdon, D. Emerson, R. Bateman, G. Lucas, R. Hannah, C. McFarlane, D. Muldoon, S. White, J. Pringle.

Napanee Ties Rollins 4-4, Booths Win

Napanee Pringle's lost their chance to overtake Joyce Real Estate for the Industrial Hockey League's top spot last night when they blew a 4-0 lead and had to settle for a 4-4 tie with Rollins Construction.

In the other game, Booth TV's dumped Vagden Mills 5-1. It was Vagden's tenth defeat of the campaign.

With just one scheduled game apiece left to play, Napanee can only gain a tie for first place, should they win next weekend while Joyces lose. The club finishing in first has its choice of opponents in the semi-finals.

Napanee, starting the game with just seven players, took a 3-0 lead in the first half and made it 4-0 early in the second half. A couple more players turned up but Rollins surged back in the second half for four consecutive goals of their own to get the tie. Gary Little scored the tying goal with less than two minutes left to play.

Little paced the Rollins scorers with two goals and one assist. Jack Hughes and Carl Boomhower had the other goals with single assists going to Doug Lucas, Wayne Waite, Boomhower, Gary McMillan and George Crabb.

Carl Gray scored twice for Napanee while Doug Yearwood and Pat Maracle had the other goals. Jerry Brady drew two assists, Bartch, Yearwood, Dave Brady and Lou Fish one each.

Rollins drew six of the game's eight penalties, including a misconduct to Beattie Huntley.

Booth's took a 4-0 first-half lead against Vagden's before Jim Woodcock spoiled Claude Carr's bid for a shut-out at 13.20 of second half. Woodcock also scored the losers' other goal. Jim Rutherford, Bob Duggan and Norm Richards had assists.

Don Wilma and Phil Cornell each triggered two goals to spearhead the Booth attack. Kaye Elliott had the other goal. Bob Hughes earned two assists with one apiece for Don Bishop, Gord St. Louis, Junior Day and Jackie Gill.

The TV's had eight minor penalties in this one, Vagden's five.

Canada's Figure Skaters

'Strongest Team We've Ever Had!'

TORONTO (CP)—Canada will field its strongest-ever team at the world figure skating championships in Prague next month, an official said Saturday night at the close of the Canadian championships.

Nigel Stephens, president of the Canadian Figure Skating Association, said the 16 skaters who will wear Canada's colors March 14-19 make up "the strongest team we've ever had."

All but two of the 16 come from Ontario, and Ontario skaters also made a clean sweep of the national titles.

The team: Men—Don Jackson, Oshawa; Don McPherson, Stratford.

Ladies—Wendy Griner, Petra Burka, both of Toronto.

Dance — Virginia Thompson and Bill McLachlan, Toronto; Lee and John Mitchell, Vancouver; Paulette Doan and Ken Ormsby, Toronto.

Paris—Maria and Otto Jelinek, Bronte, Ont.; Gertrude Desjardins and Maurice Lafrance Toronto; Debbie Wilkes and Guy Revell, Unionville.

RETAIN TITLES

During the exacting competition defending senior champions all retained their Canadian titles. Miss Griner, a pretty 17-year-old, retained her women's senior title; Jackson, 21, had little difficulty keeping his men's title; the Jelineks turned in a top performance in capturing the pairs and Miss Thompson and McLachlan's routine kept them the senior dance trophy.

Loudest applause of the Saturday night finals went to Jackson, when he executed the daring triple lutz—three complete mid-air turns from a backward take-off. All five judges placed Jackson first in both the compulsory figures and the free skating. In each case the runner-up was McPherson.

Miss Griner's compulsory and free skating exhibition received the same high praise from the judges and in each case Miss Burka was second.

In the senior class Miss Griner finished with 948.40 points and Miss Burka with 882.24. Rose Bilyk, Owen Sound, was seventh. In free skating the figures were 55.0 and 54.8 respectively for Miss Griner and Miss Burka. Miss Bilyk again was seventh.

CLOSE BEHIND

In the senior pairs the brother-and-sister Jelineks had 57.5 points and Miss Desjardins and Lafrance had 52.7.

Miss Thompson and McLachlan finished with 220.78 points in the senior dance competition, a comfortable margin over Miss Lee and Mitchell, who had 210.24. Paulette Doan, St. Thomas and Ken Ormsby, Toronto, were third with 209.92.

Earlier in the competition junior skaters from Ontario took all the junior titles. Valerie Jones, 13, of Toronto, won handily over 10 other competitors in the women's competition while Bill Neale, 18, Fort Erie, came from behind to win the junior men's crown.

In seventh place in the junior women's competition was Judy Cosby, St. Catharines; Carol Kieser, Stratford was eighth; Selja Hinkkuri, Timmins, ninth and Susan Martin, St. Thomas 11th.

Will Name Title Event By Mar. 13

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—Floyd Patterson said Sunday his next heavyweight title event will be announced by March 13, the deadline set by the National Boxing Association.

Patterson said he also agrees with the NBA that Sonny Liston is the logical contender.

He expects the toughest fight of his career "if and when" he meets Liston, Patterson added.

Earlier, in Chicago, the NBA, closing a two - day meeting, said that if Patterson failed to defend his title by March 13 the usual procedure would be carried out.

This could mean that the NBA might withdraw its recognition of Patterson as champion.

Bisons Lose But Retain Lead Margin

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Buffalo Bisons, for two weeks the hottest team in the American Hockey League, were thoroughly cooled off over the weekend, but didn't lose an inch of ground in the Western Division chase.

The Bisons had their eight game winning streak halted 3-2 by Pittsburgh Hornets Saturday, and a 10-game home winning string was clipped 5-3 by Hershey Bears Sunday night.

But the Bisons retained their five-point lead as their challengers, Cleveland and Rochester, lost their games. The Barons fell before Hershey 4-2 Saturday and the Americans lost to Quebec Aces 4-3 in overtime Sunday night.

Providence Reds put together a big last period comeback for a 7-4 triumph over Pittsburgh in Sunday night's other game. Springfield Indians beat Quebec 4-2 Saturday.

NFL Tangles With AFL, Purse 10 M

BALTIMORE (AP) — The American and National Football Leagues will battle in the same arena for the first time starting today as opponents in a $10,000,000 anti-trust suit.

The AFL, in existence for just two seasons' contends the 32-year-old NFL engaged in an illegal conspiracy to exclude the young league from a fair share in the professional football business.

An all-star cast of witnesses, including owners, players coaches and scouts, are expected to be subpoenaed for the trial in United States district court, which may last three months. Chief Judge Roszel C. Thomsen will hear the case without a jury.

The suit also asks that the National League be forced to withdraw its team from Dallas, and that the court retain jurisdiction to require approval before any further expansion by the NFL.

In its first expansion move in 10 years the NFL voted on Jan. 29, 1960—after the AFL was formed—to put a team in Dallas at once. The AFL had a team in Dallas.

Favored To Retain Curl Title

REGINA (CP)—A curling perfectionist from Saskatoon starts today's Canadian women's curling championships as the odds-on favorite to retain her Dominion title.

Joyce McKee, 27, went through the first annual championships in Ottawa last year undefeated. The year before, she won the western title undefeated and won the unofficial east-west championship.

This year, she is back with her same rink and with the same unblemished record.

The McKee rink meets Ontario's Fern Irwin in the afternoon first round of the round-robin championships.

Her evening second-round opponent, Vera Reed of Calgary, is rated as one of the stronger rinks in the championships.

All 10 provinces are represented in the championships. Two rounds are played today, three Tuesday, two Wednesday and two Thursday.

All games are 10 ends.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Bo Wininger shot a four-under-par 68 on the windswept City Park course Sunday to win the $30,000 Greater New Orleans open golf tournament with a 72-hole total of 281.

Wininger picked up $4,300 for the victory. It was nearly twice as much as he won in nine tournaments last year.

Bob Rosburg finished second, two strokes behind Wininger. Rosburg had a 69 in the final round.

It was the first tournament victory in nearly six years for Wininger, who now plays the PGA circuit only occasionally.

Defending champion Doug Sanders finished third with a 285 after shooting a 71 Sunday.

"I almost gave it away a couple of times," Wininger said, referring to two over-par holes on the back nine when Rosburg gained a stroke.

But it was all over on the 18th when Wininger was over the green on the fringe in two and then sank a 10-foot putt for a birdie four.

Phil Rodgers, 23, a former marine from La Jolla, Calif., who won two earlier tournaments this year, again mushroomed over par with a 74 for a 288 and a tie for fourth place. Rodgers had the lead at the half-way mark.

WAS MAJOR LEAGUER

WAYNESBORO, Pa. (AP)—Max Bishop, 62, coach of the U.S. Naval Academy baseball team at Annapolis, Md., and a former major league infielder, died Sunday while visiting here.

Bishop was a star of the Baltimore Orioles from 1919 to 1923 when they were winning the first five of seven consecutive pennants in the International League. He was sold to the Philadelphia Athletics where he played 10 years.

After two more years with the Boston Red Sox, Bishop wound up his active playing days with Baltimore in 1936 and then scouted a year for Detroit Tigers.

Whip Petes 5-2

Hablets Almost Nail Top

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Montreal Canadiens defeated Peterborough Petes 5-2 Sunday on defenceman Jacques Laperriere's three second-period goals and all but nailed down first place in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

The Baby Habs' home victory opened a four-point spread over second - place Hamilton Red Wings with three games left for each team in the 50-game schedule.

One more Montreal win combined with a Hamilton defeat will clinch it.

In the weekend's other game, the Teepees fired four unanswered goals in the third period Saturday night at St. Catharines to beat Guelph 7-2 and assure themselves of no worse than a tie for the fourth and last play-off spot.

SIX-POINT LEAD

The third-place Teepees, with 46 points, are six ahead of Guelph and eight up on the Flyers, who have four games remaining.

Laperriere's three goals brought the lanky 20-year-old's output to 26 for the season. Bob Charlesbois got the other two. Peterborough scorers were Ernie Grenier and Ron Naud, the latter picking up his first of the season.

Ray Cullen was a four-goal man for the Teepees and started the third-period rout. Jim Sanko had a pair and Fred Stanfield a single. Don DiBernardino and Duke Harris tallied for Guelph.

The Royals visit Niagara Falls in Tuesday's other game.

In the OHA metropolitan Toronto Junior A circuit, Toronto Marlboros edged St. Michael's College Majors 5-4 and Brampton downed Unionville 3-1 in a Sunday doubleheader.

Eagles Were Top Aerial Team

NEW YORK (AP)—The pass-happy Philadelphia Eagles, led by surprising Sonny Jurgensen, retained their title as the National Football League's best aerial team and Cleveland Browns quarterback Milt Plum also kept his crown as the league's best passer.

Official NFL statistics released today showed the Eagles, dethroned league champions, gained 3,605 yards during the 14-game, 1961 regular season. Enroute to their 1960 NFL title, Philadelphia gained 2,816 yards in 13 games with quarterback Norm Van Brocklin at the helm.

Plum led the NFL's quarterbacks mainly on his high per cent of completions (58.6) and low percentage of interceptions (3.3), two of six categories that are considered in picking the team and individual leader.

Jurgensen, a benchwarmer for three years under Van Brocklin, led in four categories, including a record number of completions (235) and yards gained (3,723), a record-tying number of touchdown passes (32), and the not-so-gaudy interceptions total, 24.

Quebec Peewees

QUEBEC (CP) — The week-long international Peewee hockey tournament is barely under way, but 10 of the 54 entries already have been knocked out of the running for the grand championship.

Eight of the teams—all from Quebec province—were eliminated by losing during the first rounds of play Saturday and today.

Another team from Cranston, R.I., a suburb of Providence, was forced out of contention by default and a club from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., withdrew because of an outbreak of influenza among its players.

As a result of the forfeited game, Sillery, Que., reached the quarter-finals of the A section without even playing a game.

McGill University of Montreal clinched second place in the Eastern Division of the Ontario-Quebec Senior Intercollegiate Hockey League, defeating first-place University of Toronto 4-3 Saturday in the season's finale for both teams.

Western Division champion McMaster University of Hamilton, rebounding from its first defeat in two years of intercollegiate play at the hands of Queen's Saturday 4-0.

Dave Flaherty broke a 3-3 tie for McGill late in the third period, scoring on a power play. Goerge Maughan tallied two earlier goals and Colin Moseley the other.

Toronto scorers were Steve Monteith, Bill Kennedy and Jim Murchie.

Ray Brown's first-period goal gave McMaster the lead and was followed by insurance goals from Pete Randall, Butch Hyde and Bob Pond.

Western Hockey

The surging Spokane Comets Sunday night trounced Los Angeles Blades 5-2 to move within eight points of first place in the Western Hockey League Southern Division.

The win, on home ice before 3,001 fans followed the Comets' 5-3 Saturday decision over Portland Buckaroos, the division leaders.

In a Sunday afternoon game, San Francisco Seals downed Seattle Totems 6-4 before 7,055 San Francisco fans, revenge for a 5-4 overtime defeat Saturday by the Totems.

In another Saturday game, the Northern Division leaders, Edmonton Flyers, lost an 8-3 decision to Calgary Stampeders, leaving the Stamps 10 points out of first place.

Judy Garland Sang for Hour And It Was All Too Short

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Television is full of pretty girls with nice voices and special ways with a song. But none can compare with Judy Garland.

A tiny figure against a dramatic, stark background, Miss Garland sang for most of an hour Sunday night, and it was a special sort of communication between an audience and a great performer.

It wasn't the songs—they were mostly old popular numbers like I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Just in Time and, perhaps her best number, The Man that Got Away. Miss Garland invested them with excitement and emotion.

Actually, it was not the greatest television show of the year. Too much of the time Miss Garland was performing against dark backgrounds, and there were attention-diverting tricks of the camera.

The inclusion of Frank Sinatra and Dean Martin, neither in particularly good voice or well rehearsed, added little. They seemed much more interested in insulting each other and being cute than in backing up the star.

The adaptation of an early Maxwell Anderson play, Saturday's Children, did not come off particularly well in its CBS hour Sunday night.

The story, written more than 30 years ago, showed its age despite efforts to bring it up to date. Inger Stevens and Cliff Robertson worked hard — too hard—as the newly-married couple having their trials and tribulations. Ralph Bellamy played the girl's philosophical father, specializing in little lectures on patience and forbearance.

The rather long hour seemed to consist mostly of door-slamming, furniture quarrels and tears, but not much comedy or even much reason for the fights.

CBS has made it official Jackie Gleason will be back next fall with a new variety hour much like his old one. It is set for Saturday nights in Perry Mason's present time. The courtroom series will be switched to Thursday evening.

French Beauties, Lunatic Antics Enliven Comedy

Boasting that its cast is adorned with some of the most arresting French beauties ever seen on a Canadian stage, and that its intense platoon of French comedians is unexcelled in the fine art of creating — and surviving — hilarious crises, "La Plume de Ma Tante" comes to the O'Keefe Centre, March 5 for two weeks.

A David Merrick - Joseph Kipness production, reported to combine the visual voltage of the "Follies Bergere" and the lunatic shenanigans of an Anglicized French "Hellzapoppin", the musical hit is on a long national tour after playing two years on Broadway, two years in London, and three years in Paris. The version to be seen in Toronto — the same as that presented in New York and London — has been especially "translated" for Canadian audiences. When comedic situations approach the borderline of sophisticated daring, pantomime comes to the rescue.

HEADS LARGE CAST

Robert Clary, stellar Parisian singer-comedian who has become a favorite of U.S. night club and television audiences since his debut nine years ago in "New Faces", heads the large cast of "La Plume". Featured with him in top roles is impish French dancer - comedienne Liliane Montevecchi, European Film star.

Clary serves as master of ceremonies to introduce the company and explain its backstage tribulations. In subsequent zany sketches he runs a gamut of roles — as captain of an unferocious police bicycle squad, a footless gallant at a society ball, an irked waiter serving a late and dawdling diner, an imperious conductor of a festival orchestra, a harassed Parisian trapped in a public comfort station, and a skittish Adam in the Garden of Eden.

Mlle. Montevecchi appears with Clary as a befuddled "speakerine" during the opening introductions, and is seen successively as an insecure society figure, a posturing femme fatale, a strip tease queen demoralized by a stuck zipper, a dancing clown in the Tuileries Gardens, a tempting Eve in the Garden of Eden and a preoccupied acrobat.

Guelph, of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, never was in trouble against the Germans, who are en route to next month's world championships at Colorado Springs, Colo.

OUTDOORS with John Alden Knight

Financial Side of the Story

In this, our atomic age, the word "billion" is bandied about quite a bit in the public print. To most of us it is just a word. Very few including the writer, can grasp the full astronomical import of "billion." Just the same, that word is now an important part of the U.S. economy. Let's take a closer look at "billion" as applied to U.S. outdoor sports, fishing and hunting.

First off, the hunters and fishermen of the U.S. travelled 13.2 billion automobile miles in 1960 to reach and return from hunting and fishing locations. This figure is given us by the 1960 National Survey of Fishing and Hunting, a project of the U.S. Department of the Interior. Well, Mr J. P Linduska of the Remington Arms Co., decided to fool around a bit with this figure.

According to him, this figures out to 144 one-way trips to the sun or 55,000 trips to the moon. Keeping our calculations to this mundane sphere of ours, 13.2 billion miles means approximately 528,000 trips around the world at the equator. Well, so much for that Folks must like to fish and hunt if they'll drive that far to do it.

In the year 1960, the hunters and fishermen of the U.S. spent a combined total of approximately 4 billion dollars. Let's break it down into figures that mean something to us. This means that every month the sportsmen of the nation spent approximately 333 million dollars on fishing and shooting. Moreover, each day they spent almost 11 million. That's another way of saying 456,533 dollars per hour or 7,605 dollars per minute.

Assuming that a Cadillac car costs around five thousand dollars, then 4 billion dollars would buy 800,000 Cadillacs. It would buy more than 500 million bottles of bonded bourbon or 12-year-old scotch and I doubt whether that much alcoholic comfort has yet been distilled.

"BASEBALL IS PEANUTS"

Adding it all up, you can do quite a bit with 4 billion dollars. Folks have the habit of referring to baseball as the U.S. national sport. Shucks! Baseball is peanuts, financially, compared to fishing and hunting. You can take the money spent on baseball in the course of a year and add to it the amount spent on boxing, football, basketball, all the spectator sports, and the total comes to about half, maybe less, of the cost of hunting and fishing.

Actually, you would have more than enough left over to purchase, outright, at fair appraisal values, every baseball park and football stadium in the country.

And, strangely enough, it doesn't require much personal expenditure on the part of each hunter and fisherman to add up to that annual grand total of 4 billion dollars.

According to the National Survey, each fisherman spent $106.26 and each hunter $79.34. And this, mind you, covers everything — auxiliary equipment such as tents, motors, flashlights etc.; privilege fees, such as club dues, fees for private water, etc.; actual fishing equipment; transportation expense, food and lodging; and licences.

Frankly, I think the figures are low. It is most devoutly to be wished that I could wrap up my personal fishing and hunting expenses into $185.60. That approaches Utopia.

In 1960, of the 130 million people in this nation, 50 million of them, over the age of 12 years, went fishing or hunting or both And in so doing, they put in around 650 billion recreation days in the outdoors. Just from the national health standpoint, this fact is important. Spectator sports mean that the individual stands or sits pretty much in one place, getting little exercise.

Conversely, the participation sports of fishing and hunting mean days in the open, getting plenty of healthful exercise, and having a whale of a good time while doing so.

PRETTY MUCH CONFINED

In Great Britain and the majority of the European countries, fishing and shooting are pretty much confined to the moneyed classes. There is little open country in which to hunt and almost no access to trout streams or other fishing water. Just about all of the outdoors not only is privately owned but posted as well.

In the U.S. a fellow does not have to drive very far to find open fishing and shooting territory. In one state, Maine, any lake of ten acres or more (it may be only 5 acres) carries with it, by law, an easement over private lands so that any fisherman can drive to that lake without breaking trespass laws. Most of the states are now concentrating on access areas to fishing waters.

By the same token, states are adding to their state lands which are specially stocked and managed by state employees. Here and there organized state hunts are run for the benefit of the fellow who hunts only now and then and can't afford to belong to a club.

Taking the broad view, hunting and fishing long since have entered the field of big business. And you, my friend, automatically are a stock holder in that business. Fish in public waters and game on public lands or, for that matter, on the farms over which you are lucky enough to be allowed to shoot, belong to all; yours for the taking.

All you need to pay for this unique privilege is the cost of your licences and the use of the normal care and courtesy that is expected of any decent, fair-minded person.

We started off talking about "billions." Well, billions it is—money, miles travelled, and hours or recreation. You contribute to those billions, have a part in their accumulation and their spending. Make it a point when you are in the outdoors to conduct yourself accordingly. Hunting and fishing are a large part of the American heritage. Guard them well.

North Bay Wins Legion Curl Title

KIRKLAND LAKE, Ont. (CP) Gordon MacDonald's North Bay rink Sunday took the Royal Canadian Legion's three-day Ontario provincial curling championship.

MacDonald's foursome will go to Fredericton in March to compete in the Legion Dominion bonspiel. The rink won eight games in as many starts.

MacDonald deflated the hopes of Orillia's Ross Coward rink Sunday with his six-ender in the eighth end of the first draw and went on to win that game 9-2.

His final Sunday draw, against Pete Fergnson of Highland Creek, saw play cease after the sixth end with MacDonald leading 11-0.

Two rinks tied for second place at the end of the bonspiel and did not play a tie-breaker. Co-holders of the runner-up spot are the London Rink of Russ Miller and Murray MacGregor's Guelph foursome. Both rinks rolled up six wins and lost twice.

The Tracks

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

In a spectacular upset, Physician, a rank outsider, won the $145,000 Santa Anita Handicap at Arcadia, Calif., Saturday. Alberta Ranches' four-and-twenty, the 3 - to - 5 choice, finished third.

Physician, a five - year - old gelding who ran as an entry with Prove It and Olden Times, tore out of nowhere in the stretch and was pulling away from Olden Times and Four-and-Twenty at the wire.

The winner, a probable 100-to-1 shot if he had run alone, won by 2½ lengths over Olden Times. Physician carried 114 pounds, 15 less than Four-and-twenty and one more than Olden Times.

It was upset day at Hialeah Track near Miami, Fla., too. There, Calumet Farm's Yorky beat Carry Back by a neck in the $134,800 Widener Handicap.

It was the first victory for Yorky, five - year - old son of Bull Lea, since he won the same stakes last year. Yorky ran as an entry with Beau Price at odds of 19-to-5.

Carry Back, 11-to-10 favorite, staged a pulse - tingling finish and was beaten by a neck. Ambiopoise was third, three lengths back, and Beau Prince fourth.

Physician, running on a good track, covered the 1¼ miles in 2:02 3-5 to win $100,000.

Olden Times picked up $20,000 for second and Four-and-Twenty, owned by Calgary sportsmen Max Bell and Frank McMahon, won $15,000.

Astrological Forecast

By. SYDNEY OMARR

Aries (March 21 to April 19) Your best procedure for getting most out of the day is to get together with friends, and exchange thoughts, ideas. Do so even if this means travel or inconvenience. Use teamwork.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) Check accounts, bills, a little time in this direction could save you much in actual cash. Be sure you are getting your money's worth. At same time, maintain sense of humor, and values.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) Your patience could be tried; tendency is to want to make rash moves. Suggestion: take time to get off by yourself, to think problems through. Plan, formulate ideas, avoid fast action.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21) A display of temper by one of your associates could cause temporary embarrassment. Hold your tongue, others will rally to your cause; later you receive apology.

Leo (July 22 to August 21) Temptation is key word. Easy to give in to urges which cause fatigue, emotional and physical. Let intellect temper desires. Excellent for expressing self; through creative hobbies.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) General tendency is to want to see immediate results. But, like Gemini, you must exercise self-discipline, be patient. If something is worth working, waiting for, do so.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A flurry of activity indicated as you attempt to accomplish a number of things. Make sure you finish one project before going on to the next one. Remember: Haste makes waste!

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You could go on shopping or spending spree, and later ask, "What happened?" Avoid this by taking broad view of future. Purchase what is necessary, entertain loved ones, but remain practical.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Cycle up. You have strength, and should exude confidence. Minor disappointment could change to major victory. Superiors are watching, emphasize Dignity.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Now is time to think of Expansion; this applies to emotional needs, business, personal contacts. Don't stand still in rut of self-satisfaction. Be versatile. Knowledge you seek will soon come.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Do not be afraid to express enthusiasm, for friends, books, features in your newspaper. Permit thoughts, ideas to be communicated to others. Let others know you care.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) Excellent for making basic changes, for seeing situations, persons with new perspective. Romance favored, and so is rediscovery of loved one. Accept position as valid challenge.

If today is your birthday you are valuable member of community in that you often come up with ideas which can be put to practical use, thus, be willing to join in community projects. Month of June could be outstanding.

GENERAL TENDENCIES:—Most persons today tend to display impatience. All signs could benefit from study of today's interpretation for Gemini and Virgo. Best policy is honesty, false claims soon disproved.

Science Now Shrinks Piles Without Pain Or Discomfort

Finds Healing Substance That Relieves Pain And Itching As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids

Toronto, Ont. (Special)—For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids and to relieve pain and itching. Thousands have been relieved with this inexpensive substance right in the privacy of their own home without any discomfort or inconvenience.

In one hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported and verified by doctors' observations.

Pain was promptly relieved. And while gently relieving pain, actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most amazing of all—this improvement was maintained in cases where doctors' observations were continued over a period of many months!

In fact, results were so thorough that sufferers were able to make such statements as "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" And among these sufferers were a very wide variety of hemorrhoid conditions, some of even 10 to 20 years' standing.

All this, without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or astringents of any kind. The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—the discovery of a famous scientific institute. Already, Bio-Dyne is in wide use for healing injured tissue on all parts of the body.

This new healing substance is offered in suppository or ointment form called Preparation H. Ask for individually sealed convenient Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H ointment with special applicator. Preparation H is sold at all drug stores. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

Around-the-World Plant News

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

Over, under, around, or through; it makes a difference how we feed our plants. From Dr. M.H. Miller of O.A.C. we learn that field crops respond differently to where they have to go for their food. Some like it in the ground under the seed before it is planted. Some do best when the food is planted with the seed and still others want it in drills a few inches out from the plant. Overhead foliar feeding gets good results in some plants and not in others.

Will seed packets of the future have this kind of information to help us have better vegetables and flowers?

Also from O.A.C. we learn that many diseases are spread by aphids. Those that stay dormant in potato and other winter vegetable storage bins emerge in the spring to start a new round of disease spread by virus and spores. Any plant material we hold over winter can be host to aphids. Dead, or diseased plants should be burned or wrapped with the garbage to go to the incinerator.

Pink celery! The English gardener has been growing this for several years. It keeps better than the white types and is good for a fall crop. I found it listed in the 1962 Ferry-Morse catelogue.

In spite of the claims for irradiated seed for flowers and vegetables the general feeling is that they are no improvement over the untreated seeds.

I bought a pack of Irradiated marigold sed (Man-In-The-Moon) at one dollar. I gave some to two friends in Windsor and sent some to Elliot Lake and some to Pontiac, Michigan. All reported that they were fine but no better that those of the year before using regular seed. The English have some charming names for common flowers. They call our trillium "Wake Robin". You can buy woodland plants from the Garden Guild, Toronto.

Many nurseries are making use of soil-less composts. One uses spagnum peat moss as the base with sand for increased porosity. Fertilizers are added according to the plants which they wish to grow. This eliminates sterilizing the soil, weed seed and makes for ease in handling.

One way for the gardener to define the arrival of spring is the first date when grass begins to grow, or the average temperature rises above 45 degrees.

Some time before 1880 Thomas Algernon Dorien Smith decided to grow daffodils in the Scilly Isles. They had been growing wild around the ruins of Tresco Abbey. The plants were believed to be the decendants of those planted by the Mediaeval monks. T.D. Smith persuaded a farmer to offer daffodils at Covent Garden Market. When the first flower show was held in the Scilly Isles in 1886 the same Mr. Smith entered 180 varieties of daffodils. Daffodils are one of the chief exports of the Isles.

You can treat tomato plants like espaliered fruit trees. Nail or fasten cross bars to a tall strong stake. Sink the stake near the tomato plant then tie and train it to the cross bars as the plant grows. Try the small types such as red cherry, or pear, yellow cherry or pear. These are quite ornamental as well as edible. The plants are quite long and vine-like cord grass or Spartina is used to stop erosion on the Somerset coast. Perhaps our conservation department can find a similar plant to use at Point Peelee where erosion is eating into our shore line.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

By WINIFRED WILSON

There are so many different kinds of sparrows that the novice bird watcher can become quite confused: song sparrow, white-throated sparrow, white-crowned sparrow, vesper sparrow and so on. When similar appearance and coloring make recognition difficult we must notice particular points: size, characteristic markings, some special feature about bill or legs, odd actions. The time of observation and place of discovery are important. In winter, noted for being the season of silence, there is little opportunity to hear a song, but even a call note helps us.

The tree sparrow, not nearly as common as our little chipping sparrow of summer, is very often taken for one because of the similar red cap, light wing-bars ,and grey underparts. Actually, the tree sparrow, though a good ½ inch larger, sometimes goes by the name "winter chippy". But, perhaps, it even more resembles a field sparrow which, besides having these markings, like the tree has grey over the eye, while the chippy's eye line is very white. The field is between the other two in size.

DISTINGUISHING MARKS

Definite distinguishing marks for the tree sparrow aid identification, but fairly close inspection is necessary. In the centre of the breast there is always a black spot often referred to as "the stickpin," the two wing-bars are decidedly white and the upper and lower sections of the bill are of different colors: the upper dark, the lower yellow.

We never see a tree sparrow in mid-summer because at that season it is living in the region of stunted trees and shrubs farther north than our settlements. It winters just south of the breeding grounds and thus may be found by us where grass and weed seeds are available any time from October to April. Look for it in weedy fields near woodlands when wind has blown the snow, leaving open patches. Leaping from the ground to catch a dangling seed pod is a characteristic action. The feeding note is a musical, two-syllabled word translated as "tee-ler."

Unlike the large majority of birds, the tree sparrow often begins to sing in early February. The song of an individual reminds us of a canary, does not keep to any definite pattern, but always speeds up as it progresses and ends in what bird books call a "jubilant trill." The combined voices of a flock sound like jingling bells.

TROUBLED CORNER OF ASIA—The United States has poured economic and military aid into South Viet Nam in a move to prevent possible communist conquest of the southeast Asian country. There have been reports of Communist infiltration from North Viet Nam and laos, itself unsettled by civil strife. Map locates countries of that critical area of Asia. (CP Newsmap.)

Undercurrent of Hope Mixed With Doubt in Indochina

By ROY ESSOYAN

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—There is an undercurrent of hope mixed with doubt in this potentially explosive corner of the world where East and West are fighting a shooting war with increasing ferocity.

"The United States is finally living up to its responsibilities in Southeast Asia," says one veteran Asian observer.

Others are not convinced.

Some Vietnamese and Westerners doubt the United States will face a military showdown here if it might invite Communist Chinese aggression and risk general war.

Others, looking across the border at Laos, fear the United States may yet settle, at some future date, for a political compromise in Viet Nam.

THAILAND WORRIED

On the other side of Laos, Thailand is worried that U.S. pressure for formation of a neutral Laotian government may lead to Communist control. Two weeks ago Thai troops were moved up to strategic points along the long border with Laos to guard against Communist infiltration.

In South Viet Nam, the United States seems committed to defen the country against the attacks of Viet Cong guerrillas backed by Communist North Viet Nam.

The U.S. has 4,000 troops in South Viet Nam and a new command was set up recently with Gen. Paul D. Harkins as its chief. His command provides the framework for direction of U.S. combat forces if that becomes necessary.

At the moment all U.S. troops here are listed as non-combatant military technicians, instructors and support forces. Several have been killed.

As for the threat of Communist Chinese invasion, it is possible that the Communist fear a general war in Viet Nam more than the United States does. Military experts here say the Viet Cong have gone out of their way not to attack individual Americans.

POSES BIG PROBLEMS

The United States faces grave problems in Southeast Asia, a key one being the question of how to combat Communist expansion without interfering with the sovereignty and independence of an ally.

The South Vietnamese government of President Ngo Dinh Diem has made notable strides since Viet Nam was torn in two seven years ago. But it still lacks the money, training—and some say leadership — to run an economically stable government or stamp out the guerrilla opposition alone.

U.S. military and economic aid to Ngo's government now is running at more than $300,000,000 a year.

This rugged country is honeycombed with guerrillas. Officials guess the total at from 13,000 to 20,000—from or five times the number two years ago. They control the countryside through a campaign of organized subversion and terror. Government forces hold the towns and villages and venture out at their peril.

HOPES LOST IN LAOS

Neighboring Laos, through which thousands of Viet Cong infiltrate South Viet Nam, presents a problem of another sort. The U.S., its hopes for a strong anti-Communist regime in Laos dashed, has come out in support of a neutralist coalition government there, if one can be formed.

Negotiations have been going on in the capital of Vientiane this week on formation have been named premier-designate by King Savang Vathana.

Agreement has been blocked so far by the right-wing government of Prince Boun Oum and his military strongman, Gen. Phoumi Nosavan, who want their faction to fill the vital post of interior and defence in any coalition cabinet.

The United States announced Feb. 16 that, for the second time in two months, it was delaying a $3,000,000 monthly payment to the Boun Oum government in an effort to speed up formation of the coalition government.

Without the aid funds, the government is hard pressed to pay its 60,000-man army.

January funds also were held up until Boun Oum agreed to attend a Geneva conference with Souvanna Phouma and the latter's half-brother, Prince Souphanouvong, who heads the pro-Communist Pathet Lao.

French Troops Now Have Task of Enforcing Peace

Dave Oancia of the London bureau of The Canadian Press went to Algeria to report on the explosive situation there. In this story he tells of the attitude of the French Army toward the prospect of Algerian independence.

By DAVE OANCIA

ALGIERS (CP) — Tanks carrying "reluctant" French soldiers rumbling along the boulevards and tent camps of troops ringing this terror - stricken city graphically illustrate the French army's new task in Algeria.

From fighting a bitter seven-year war against Moslem independence - seeking guerrillas, the troops are to switch to enforcing the peace.

The army's main opponents will be the European settlers and the crucial question is: "Which way will the army leaders swing?

The illegal Secret Army Organization is determined to sabotage any accord President de Gaulle's government reaches with the Moslem rebel leadership.

The secret army could throw its killer commando corp of hundreds into a melee that might provoke Moslem retaliation against the Europeans.

MUST REMOVE DANGER

The task of this force of about 440,000 will be to eliminate the danger of such communal strife between Algeria's 9,000,000 Moslems and 1,000,000 Europeans.

And the loyalty of army leaders to the government is a key factor in the test of strength about to come with the imminent announcement of a cease-fire between France and the rebels.

For many of the career officers the new task comes as a bitter pill.

"Certainly they're unhappy," said one highly - placed source in Paris to this reporter when he was en route to Algiers.

"They still sympathize with the Europeans who want French rule to continue in Algeria. They will do their duty for the nation and obey its leaders. But they'll do so only with saness and reluctance."

In Algiere the "sadness and reluctance" of which he spoke turned out to be voluble grumbles.

WAIT FOR ORDERS

Hundreds of officers from the special administrative sections had their operations disbanded. They waited here for new orders.

Most had made a holy cause of helping the poor Moslems by performing tasks ranging from teaching and welfare to the quest for employment for their charges.

"They have cheated us," said one as he discussed the coming of the new order in Algeria. "We have wasted seven years"

French Army authorities have announced plans to withdraw two further divisions, about 20,000 men, from Algeria by the end of this year.

They have also said they intend to demobilize 140,000 Algerian Moslem soldiers wearing the French uniform. This would still leave 280,000 troops—more than five times greater than the size of the Moslem army estimated at about 45,000 effectives.

As a prelude to this move, the army high command has deployed more than 50,000 armed troops in and around the major cities in an attempt to prevent bloodshed when the cease - fire is announced.

PLAYS CRUCIAL PART

The forces in the showdown will be the de Gaulle regime, the Moslem rebels and the European extremists. The crucial factor will be the army.

Current indications are it will back the government. Besides which, without the flow of ammunition, food, fuel and other goods from France, they could hold out for barely two weeks.

Supplies of fuel and other basic commodities have been cut in the cities, too. And a blockade would soon starve the extremists into submission.

The extremists know this. In the immediate future they will continue to try to consolidate their support, while keeping up the campaign of terror and violence.

The army's task will be to try to prevent this from becoming an all-out Moslem - European conflict.

Afraid Moslems May Be Driven To Retaliate

European Terrorists Fire Indiscriminately

CP from AP-Reuters

ALGIERS — Security forces were strengthened around Moslem quarters of Algiers today amid growing fears that Moslems may be provoked into a death-for-death bloodbath with European extremists.

Moslems have been gunned down indiscriminately throughout this city during the current wave of terror. Twenty-two persons were killed Monday and even more were wounded.

The murders are believed to be a right-wing terrorist tactic aimed at sparking a major clash between Europeans and Moslems in an attempt to sabotage Algerian peace plans.

In Paris, official sources said today Premier Michel Debre has ordered French military commanders in Algeria to dispatch reserve forces to trouble spots in an effort to cut back the terrorist killings.

Debre was reported to have ordered commanders to deploy forces that had been held in readiness for an attemot by the Secret Army Organization to overthrow the government.

SEND IN GUARDS

Authorities sent a battalion of infantry and three squadrons of mobile guardsmen—about 1,000 men—into the heart of Algiers Monday. With guns at the ready, soldiers lined the Rue Michelet, a street of shops and cafes where Europeans strolled despite shots and speeding ambulances.

The rightist campaign appeared timed to coincide with the expected imminent announcement of a peace agreement between the government and the Moslem nationalist insurgents, who have waged war for 7½ years in the North African territory.

The announcement is expected to follow shortly after the peace agreement is formally sanctioned by the Algerian insurgent National Council (parliament), currently meeting in Tripoli, Libya.

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — The Algerian rebel parliament has accepted a peace agreement with France to end the 7½-year Algerian war, well-informed sources said today.

The sources said the National Council for Algerian Revolution, the rebel parliament, met here today to draft an announcement of its acceptance of the accord worked out by French and rebel representatives in secret negotiations in Switerland.

But the sources said the announcement would not be made public until after the Algerian leaders leave Tripoli. The French government already has approved the agreement.

ROCHER NOIR, Algeria (CP) This territory's "Black Rock" may be in for some bad days.

French authorities say this collection of modernistic buildings set incongruosly by an old fishing village will become the Washington, D.C., of the new Algerian state.

It was established as the territory's administration centre little more than a year ago in a bid to relieve France's top administrators from the pressures of the passionate crowds of Algiers.

Embittered leader of the illegal Secret Army Organization—which commands the support of most of the European population — scornfully refer to it as the fortress established by President de Gaulle to protect the "traitors who are selling out in Algeria."

PRIMARY TARGET

It likely will become one of the secret army's primary targets if a Moslem - dominated transitional executive sets up shop here to lead the land to independence.

Rocher Noir, French for black rock, is a military stronghold 35 miles east of Algiers.

Its new villas, office buildings, apartment blocks, shopping centre, hotel and school huddle behind three spaced barbed wire barriers.

Armored cars, steel - helmeted troops and scores of gendarmes are deployed around the mile - square site to protect the 1,000 - odd workers.

When the last construction jobs are finished the fortress will be entirely self - sufficient.

COMMUTE TO WORK

About 250 persons now live at Rocher Noir, Included are most of the top government officials, a number of secretaries and other public servants. The majority commute each day from Algiers.

Despite extraordinary watchfulness killer commandos wearing stolen army uniforms occasionally lay in wait near the rail line to shoot up the train.

Anyone going to the "provisional capital" must have police authorization from the Algiers headquarters.

British Cabinet Makes Decision About Rhodesia

LONDON (Reuters) — The British cabinet in a 2½ hour meeting today reached a final decision on the powder-keg question of a constitution for Northern Rhodesia, usually reliable sources said.

The decision will be communicated to Sir Roy Welensky, prime minister of the white-dominated Rhodesian federation which includes the protectorate of Northern Rhodesia.

It will be announced in the House of Commons Wednesday, the sources said.

It was widely assumed in parliamentary quarters that the constitutional proposals will allow for the possibility of a Negro majority in the Northern Rhodesian legislature.

Protracted ministerial discussion in the past over the constitution has provoked press speculation that the cabinet is divided on its views on the pact of Negro constitutional advance.

Some newspapers have predicted trouble for the British government from a right-wing section of its Conservative supporters who consider that any transfer of power to Northern Rhodesian Negro nationalists would spell the breakup of the federation.

NEHRU'S PARTY PILES UP BIG ELECTION LEAD

Krishna Menon Has Big Margin

NEW DELHI (Reuters) — Prime Minister Nehru's Congress party swept toward another five years of power today with a long lead in India's third general election.

On the national level, results gave the party 52 out of the 70 seats declared for the 494-seat Lok Sabha (lower house).

Congress candidates were also leading in many election districts, including the key one of north Bombay where Defence Minister V. K. Krishna Menon held a big 58,000 - vote margin over his chief opponent, J. B. Kripalani, who has accused Menon of being a "crypto-Communist."

On the state level, Nehru's party led with more than 1,000 seats out of the 1,500 declared for the 2,930 assembly seats at stake in 13 legislatures.

Although the Congress suffered heavy local defeats from right-wing parties and independents in several states, its ultimate victory in most of them seemed certain.

While the right-wing Swatabtra party — regarded by many Indians as a potential threat to the Congress party—made gains in three states, its national chairman, N. G. Ranga, lost his House seat to a Communist in Andhra Pradesh.

In both Andhra Pradesh and West Bengal, the Communists appeared to be holding their own despite a party split over Communist Chinese incursion on the Indian border.

Prior to the election, the Congress Party held 375 of the 494 seats in the lower house of parliament and also held control of

Canada Will Have Nuclear Weapons in Event of War

- - Diefenbaker

OTTAWA (CP)—The government may have found a tentative, if awkward, way out of the nuclear weapons impasse: A fast delivery system for nuclear warheads from the United States to Canada in event of war.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker Monday seemingly indicated such a solution for the problem when he said in the Commons that Canadian forces should have nuclear weapons in any nuclear war but that under present circumstances Canada could not accept American nuclear weapons in peacetime.

Mr. Diefenbaker said in reply to Opposition Leader Pearson that ". . . if war came, should nuclear weapons be used against us, Canadian troops participating should not be denied the right to use nuclear weapons."

Later, he said ". . . [illegible] weapons should, in the event nuclear war was launched, be placed in the possession of Canadians."

The prime minister reiterated that acquisition of nuclear weapons in peacetime would depend on "joint control" by Canada and the U.S. over such weapons stored on Canadian territory.

He said the U.S. has not accepted the Canadian meaning of "joint control" and that "so

WASHINGTON (CP)—United States military and diplomatic sources expressed disappointment today with the latest position of Prime Minister Diefenbaker on nuclear warheads.

They said that if the prime minister maintains his present stand no American warheads will be available for Canada's Bomarc missiles in time of peace.

Diefenbaker said in the House of Commons Monday that the Canadian government hopes to have nuclear weapons for Canadian troops if nuclear war breaks out.

He also said joint Canada-United States control over the warheads is essential and that as long as present U.S. law remains unchanged, "joint control is impossible."

American authorities said the Kennedy administration has no plans for asking Congress to revise the law which requires the U.S. to retain custody and control over all her nuclear warheads. The president is opposed to the spread of nuclear weapons control. A key Western proposal in the 18 - country disarmament negotiations opening at Geneva March 14 will be a ban on the spread of nuclear weapons among non - nuclear powers.

The U.S. has been urging Canada for some time to allow American warheads to be stored

Shapely Ballerinas Are Used As Human Pawns in Chess Game

MOSCOW (AP) —Shapely ballerinas served as human pawns in a giant chess game between two Soviet grand masters at the sports palace Monday night.

The match between Mikhail Botvinnik, the present world champion, and Vasily Smyslov, former world titleholder, ended in a draw—with three blondes and three brunettes left on the floor.

The unique match drew a crowd of 15,000 to Moscw's huge indoor arena, the Russian equivalent of New York's Madison Square Garden.

A big chess board was laid out on the floor usually given over to basketball, hockey and speeches by Premier Khrushchev.

Instead of cold, lifeless pieces of carved wood or ivory, trim ballet dancers were used as pawns. Half were dressed in white and half in black and all wore bright red stockings.

As Botvinnik or Smyslov made a move, a ballerina danced gracefully into position on the selected square.

The two grim-faced masters attempted to make a serious match of it but the crowd became restive and noisy. They turned it into a gala affair reminiscent of the days 400 years ago when Mogul Emperor Akbar the great used Indian dancers for chess games in the palace court yard at Fatehpur Sikri.

But where Akbar enlived his chess battles with elephant fights, Monday night's match was interspersed with jugglers, singers and jokesters.

The songsters almost broke up the show when they sang a song about government distribution of newly-built apartments.

"Kings get five-room apartments," they sang. "Knights get single rooms and pawns get nothing at all."

The crowd, many of whom doubtlessly have been hunting for apartments for years, applauded for several minutes. But the song was not repeated—and the chess match was allowed to go on to its conclusion.

Astronaut John Glenn Gets Uproarious Homecoming

WASHINGTON (AP)—It was a long, wet, happy day for John Glenn Jr. and his family Monday.

It didn't end until they were home in suburban Arlington, Va., listening to their neighbors singing For He's a Jolly Good Fellow.

But Monday's parade and celebration in Washington for astronaut Glenn, the first American to orbit the earth, may be only a taste of what is to come. On Thursday New York is to honor Glenn with a ticker-tape parade up Broadway.

For a while officials feared the rain might keep away the crowds from the parade route along Pennsylvania Ave. They could have saved themselves some worry.

About 250,000 persons by police estimates lined the avenue as the presidential limousine nosed out of the White House gate with Glenn perched high in back, grinning and waving.

From under the massed, bobbing umbrellas, the cheers came in waves.

Later, standing at the podium before a joint meeting of both houses of Congress, Glenn said humbly:

"We are just probing the surface of the greatest advancement of man's knowledge of his surroundings that have ever been made."

Legislation was introduced in the House of Representatives Monday to award the Congressional Medal of Honor — the highest decoration — to Glenn.

Police Charge Salesman With Bank Holdup

TORONTO (CP) — Charles Toliquen, a successful 35-year-old salesman was picked up in his apartment Monday and later charged with the $5,000 holdup of a suburban Toronto Bank.

Toliquen was watching television in his $170-a-month luxury apartment with his wife and two teen-aged sons when detectives with drawn revolvers raided the Thorncliffe Park Development where he has lived since October.

After five hours of questioning, the former Montreal resident was charged with robbery of the Flemington Park branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia.

Police raided the suspect's apartment after they found a blue 1961-model car similar to the one used in the holdup in a nearby garage. The car had been rented from a self-service drive agency, they said.

Stolen Quebec licence plates were later found in a subway locker.

Detectives under Insp. William Bolton recovered about $1,200 in two public lockers—one in the Thorncliffe Development where Toliquen lives—and the other at Eglington Avenue subway station.

JUDY LA MARSH ATTACKS RECORD OF GOVERNMENT

'Canada's Wasted Years' Says Lawyer

OTTAWA (CP)—Liberal Judy La Marsh, like a rookie pitcher opening the world series, lit into the government in the Commons Monday, charging that its mismanagement has cost the country $14,000,000,000 in lost production.

The 37-year-old MP for Niagara Falls was picked by Opposition Leader Pearson for the starting assignment in the session's first supply debate — a rare honor for the lady lawyer who entered Parliament in a by-election only 16 months ago.

From her third-row seat Miss La Marsh tagged the government with blame for what she called "Canada's wasted years" and then presented her party's non - confidence motion calling for policies to "ensure an adequate rate of growth in the Canadian economy."

"The lack of economic growth must be the key domestic issue of the next election," she declared in a 40-minute speech before heading off to catch a plane for the West and a series of pre-election campaign appearances.

HEES REPLIES

Her attack drew a vigorous reply from Trade Minister Hees, who reeled off statistics to document his assertion that the economy "is again moving vigorously ahead."

The record of prosperity and increasing employment, he said, "is simply killing the Liberal Opposition."

"They have been desperately hoping for increased unemployment to help them in the next election but instead . . . they are being met with increasing employment and increasing prosperity."

Mr. Hees accused the Liberals of "making all kinds of extravagant promises in an effort to regain power."

"It is vitally important that the present government should stay in control of the economy, and it is going to do that," he said.

Castro Promises Soviet Union To Claim Base

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP)—Cuban Premier Fidel Castro sent a communique to the Soviet Union promising to claim the U.S. naval station at Guantanamo Bay, Havana radio said Monday night in a broadcast monitored here.

The broadcast quoted the note as saying:

"Cuba will demand its legal right to claim the U.S. Guantanamo naval base as the only foreign military outpost in its territory and has no intention of permitting military establishments of any nation within its boundaries."

The broadcast did not elaborate.

Toronto Police Constable Charged With Pushing, Slapping Woman

TORONTO (CP)—Const. Arthur Gibbs, a veteran of more than 15 years on the police force, has been suspended and charged with beating a 29-year-old woman.

Staff Inspector Reg Wooler announced the suspension Monday following an investigation into the Sunday night incident by Robert Kerr, acting chief of police.

The woman, Phyllis Sturgeon, said a policeman ripped open her purse, pushed her, then slapped her face "with all his might," damaging her ear.

A cab driver who witnessed the accident has sworn out a statement.

Mrs. Sturgeon said she and a man had a fight Sunday night and she left the apartment. When she returned, the door was open and some of her property was missing.

She said she telephoned the man and told him she would go there by cab and pick up her belongings.

On the way, Mrs. Sturgeon said, a policeman stopped the taxi, grabbed her purse, and spilled its contents on the floor of the vehicle without saying a word.

Later, at a man's house, she said she asked the policeman to enter with her. Inside, when she picked up some of her belongings, she said, she was struck across the face.

2 Pilots Strafe Diem's Palace But He Escapes

Bombs, Rockets, Bullets Used in 50-Minute Raid

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Two South Vietnamese Air Force fighter - bombers bombed, rocketed and strafed Saigon's presidential palace today in an unsuccessful attempt to kill President Ngo Dinh Diem or members of his family who exert influence on his government.

Two hours after the attack—which left one wing of the independence palace in smoldering ruins—the 61-year-old president broadcast over Radio Saigon that "Thanks to divine protection I myself and my close collaborators were not in danger."

The two pilots also strafed the Saigon airfield and the government radio station but apparently did little damage there.

By his close collaborators Diem meant his brother, Ngo Dinh Nhu, and Nhu's wife, who acts as first lady for the bachelor president. Critics accuse all three of running the government as a family dictatorship.

MRS. NHU HURT

The Nhus lived in the wing of the palace which was bombed out, and a palace source reported that Mrs. Nhu was injured slightly on one arm. Also in the palace at the time, the source said, was another brother of Diem, Roman Catholic Archbishop Ngo Dinh Thuc, who had come to Saigon from Hue for medical treatment.

It was not known in which wing of the palace President Diem had been living.

Diem was the target of a short - lived uprising by five paratroop battalions 16 months ago, but today's air attack appeared to be an isolated assault by a few anti-Diem pilots rather than a large-scale plot against his regime.

There was no move to follow up the air attack on the ground and no reports of rebellion by government forces elsewhere in the country.

UNDER CONTROL

Diem said loyal armed forces had the situation "completely under control throughout the national territory."

A government radio newscast said one of the attacking planes—identified as AD-6 Skyraiders supplied to South Viet Nam's air force by the United States—was down near the coast and its officer pilot was captured alive. Military sources in Saigon said two LSTs of the Viet Nam Navy shot the plane down.

Civic Action Minister Ngo Trong Nieu told a press conference the attack was "an iso.

COMMISSIONER DENIES CHARGES OF HIGH RENTS

Liquor Stores in North Under Debate

TORONTO (CP) — Allan Grossman, Ontario's chief liquor commissioner, denied Monday the province is paying excessive rents for liquor stores rented from private owners in Sudbury and Capreol.

In fact, he maintained, citing the report of a trust company expert, rents paid by the government are lower than would be indicated by general market conditions.

Mr. Grossman took the floor in the legislature to reply to accusations by Elmer Sopha (L—Sudbury). At one stage in the noisy sitting he accused the Sudbury membtr of making baseless charges through "sheer petulance and vindictiveness at having lost the case for a client."

The uproarious afternoon wound up the throne speech debate, after which Liberal and New Democratic motions of non-confidence were defeated along party lines.

Start Tree-Cutting to Allow Wider Ivanhoe-Halloway Section of Madoc Highway

In preparation for next summer's proposed re-construction of another section of the Madoc-Foxboro county road, Hastings county road employees have commenced tree cutting operations to allow widening of the right-of-way between Ivanhoe and north of Halloway.

Work crews have started operations at the south end of the five mile section scheduled for reconstruction and will work north to Ivanhoe.

The road right of way is being widened to 100 feet and the extra width in several places means the destruction or moving of driveshеds, milk houses and barns. In a number of instances farmers and small holdings owners are having their front lawns reduced by one half or more.

Last year a five-mile section of the Madoc road was rebuilt, the reconstruction extending south as far as the village of Ivanhoe, while in 1963 it is hoped to complete rebuilding of the road to Foxboro.

BY-PASS PINES AREA

The section to be rebuilt this year for the most part will see the existing right-of-way retained, but the Foxboro-Halloway section will see lengthy complete new stretches of roadway.

North of Halloway, The Pines area will be by-passed to the west, while south of Halloway only short sections of the existing right of way will be used.

The south end of the new Madoc-Foxboro road will come out just west of Foxboro where it will join up with the proposed Foxboro by-pass on Highway 14.

The three phase reconstruction program on the Madoc road is being carried out under the department of highways road development scheme whereby the province pays for reconstruction costs with the county providing the necessary additional right of way.

Following regarding and paving the road reverts back to the county for maintenance.

2 Cars Wedged Between Banks On City Street

Two cars, proceeding in opposite directions, became wedged on the hill on Albion Street this morning, due to ice and snowbanks along the sides of the street.

A car driven by Mrs. Ruth Frise, of Snowdon Ave., Toronto, was proceeding up the hill and a car driven by Frank M. Barrett, 295 John Street, Belleville, was going down the hill when the two cars became sandwiched in the middle of the street.

With the assistance of the investigating officer and a few bystanders, Mrs. Frise's compact car was lifted off the ground from the front and set over away from the side of the other vehicle involved.

There was no damage to either car with the exception of a bit of paint being scrubbed off while they were being freed.

Inco Workers Vote to Select Their Union

SUDBURY (CP) — A three-day vote to settle the future bargaining agent of 15,000 nickel workers began today.

Employees of the International Nickel Company will cast ballots at 30 polling stations in the mines, smelters and refinery of the widespread Inco works.

They will decide whether to retain the strife-torn International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (Ind.) or go into Canadian Labor Congress affiliation via the United Steelworkers of America.

Balloting began this morning and ends at 2 a.m. Friday.

The ballot boxes, heavily guarded, will be taken to Toronto and not counted until after the two warring unions have stated their cases before the Ontario Labor Relations Board in mid-March.

Quebec Govt. Plans Lottery

QUEBEC (CP)—The Quebec government is preparing to establish a provincial lottery and has been negotiating with Ottawa to obtain the necessary amendments to the Criminal Code.

This was disclosed by Premier Lesage Monday when the Quebec Federation of Labor proposed in its annual brief to the government that a provincial lottery be set up to help finance social security measures.

Mr. Lesage said he wrote Justice Minister Fulton Jan. 24 "asking him to give serious and official consideration to our request."

He had first raised the question with Mr. Fulton at the November 1960 federal - provincial fiscal conference. Quebec Youth Minister Paul Gerin-Lajoie pursued it further in talks with Mr. Fulton at a subsequent federal-provincial constitutional conference and in a follow-up letter.

However, almost a year had elapsed since then and there had been no further word. Nor had Mr. Fulton replied to the Jan. 24 letter.

Lotteries are forbidden by Article 179 of the Criminal Code, which provides for a two-year prison sentence or maximum $2,000 fine.

Non-ops Ask Conciliation

MONTREAL (CP) —Canada's 110,000 non - operating railway employees have put in a formal request for a federal conciliation board to look into their contract dispute with the country's railways.

The request was made in a letter sent Monday by Frank Hall, chief negotiator for the 15 CLC-affiliated unions involved, to Labor Minister Starr in Ottawa.

Talks between the non-ops and the railways collapsed last Friday after only four meetings, with no agreement reached between the parties on any of the points in dispute.

Caroline Asks Where Is Monkey?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Astronaut John H. Glenn Jr. reported that Caroline Kennedy cut him down to size Monday by demanding to know: "Where's the monkey."

The anecdote, which brought a big laugh during his talk to Congress, began with Glenn being introduced to President Kennedy's four - year - old daughter just before taking off from West Palm Beach, Fla., for his Washington reception.

"I think Caroline really cut us down to size and put us back in our proper position," Glenn said, "when after being introduced she looked up and said:

"'Where's the monkey?'"

When the laughter in Congress subsided, Glenn added:

"All this and I didn't get a banana pellet on the whole ride."

The rest of the story came from onlookers at the Palm Beach Airport.

They said that Caroline's inquiry about Enos the chimpanzee that orbited the earth last November brought a roar of laughter from Glenn, and the reply:

"He's eating bananas."

During his two circuits of the globe, Enos was rewarded with banana - flavored pellets when he pushed the correct levers.

The 37-pound chimp was last reported in good health at Holloman, N.M., Air Force Base.

OAS Elects Phil Dodds As Director

PICTON — The 62nd annual meeting of the Ontario Agricultural Societies was held last week in Toronto, with representatives from local and district societies among the thousand persons attending.

The Association includes an A and B Fairs Association which deals especially with the 50 largest fairs in Ontario, with the other 191 fairs being classified as C or smaller fairs.

Class A and B fairs include the CNE, Ottawa, London, Lindsay, Simcoe, Peterborough, Welland, Belleville, the Lakehead, Kingston, Renfrew, Leamington, Erin, Elmira, Owen Sound, Markham, Napanee and Picton.

The election of officers for this group was held and Phil Dodds, secretary-treasurer of Prince Edward Agricultural Society was elected as one of the three directors who eventually move up to the presidency. This is considered an honor for the county society, as well as for its secretary-treasurer who is considered an "expert" in fair work and during whose term of office the county fair has progressed from Class C to Class B and now recognized as one of the best fairs in Ontario.

Mr. Dodds was unable to attend the convention and was accorded the honor in absentia.

Three Year Old Boy Suffers Serious Burns

PICTON — Three-year-old Tommy Bedford is in Kingston General Hospital suffering from severe burns about the head and body, as a result of his clothes catching fire at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herb Bedford, near the village of Demorestville. The child's hat, scarf and most of a snow suit were burned off.

The boy was playing with other children in the snow when his parents went to the home of a neighbor, William Keogh, just across the road. The boy returned to the house unnoticed and apparently got near the kitchen stove where his clothes caught fire.

As he ran from the house, he was seen by Vincent Keogh, 12, who put the flames out by rolling the boy in the snow and preventing even more serious burns. It is expected the boy will be in hospital two months. His condition is reported as favorable.

Jet Air Transport Service Looks Very Promising Says Speaker to Rotary Luncheon

Although jet air transport service is bringing airlines very close to financial suicide the future for such service is looking very promising for Trans Canada Airlines, Donald C. Willis, assistant chief navigator for that firm, told local Rotarians yesterday afternoon at their weekly dinner meeting in the Hotel Quinte.

The former Royal Air Force navigator spoke highly of the Douglas DC-8 jet airliners now in service with TCA. He traced the development of these aircraft, which went through one and a half million man-hours of flight testing and, when brought into service, doubled the speed, weight and capacity of the aircraft they replaced. "The DC-8's established the trans-Atlantic flight record of four and three-quarters hours from Montreal to Prestwick," Mr. Willis said.

The speaker noted that these aircraft are quite expensive to operate. During takeoff they consume fuel at a rate of 100 gallons per minute and 200 gallons per hour whilst cruising. The training of aircrew and the provision of facilities especially maintenance service which requires an atmosphere of almost surgical cleanliness, are also quite expensive, he advised.

The aircraft itself marks an outstanding stage of development in air travel, despite the fact that each unit depreciates almost $1,000 overnight when not in use, he said. Using these planes the TCA is now the best equipped of any time in its history and can fully expect to hold its own in airline competition, it was observed.

Looking into the future, Mr. Willis stated that supersonic flight is but eight to ten year away and that its eventuality is even now a definite technological possibility using currently available knowledge, techniques and engines.

The supersonic race is on, he advised. Tomorrow's supersonic plane will be similar in size to current aircraft but will utilize some form of fold-back wing to give it stability at both low and high speed flight. It will have to be constructed of titanium steel in order to withstand a high hull temperature whilst in flight and will consume about a quarter of a million pounds of fuel when cruising, he said.

CAN BE HANDLED

Both its speed and its operating altitude will present several problems, Mr. Willis advised. The first of these problems is the sonic boom which will be created by its high speed. This will consist of a "path of sound" which will follow along its path continuously. The second problem consists of possible harmful radiation at high altitudes. Both of these problems can probably be handled in due course, he suggested.

The speaker suggested that a crossroads had been reached for aircraft development. The one direction to be followed would be the development of the supersonic passenger aircraft with its high operating cost. The other direction would be the perfection of more conventional aircraft to provide extremely efficient and cheap air transportation to almost any community with a minimum of cost.

The problem to be considered, Mr. Willis advised, is whether people would prefer to be able to purchase a round-trip flight to Europe for about 100 dollars and have the trip take five hours each way or whether they would desire to spend at least $250 or more for a one-way 90-minute trip to the same destination.

The speaker was introduced by Rotarian Len Gilchrist.

During the course of the meeting five new members were introduced to the club. They were: Malcolm Murray, postmaster, introduced by Dr. Jack Marshall; William Holway, insurance underwriter, introduced by Perc McGuire; Dr. Harold Williamson, orthopedic surgeon, introduced by Jack McArthur; and William Meagher, men's wear merchant, and Jack Parrott, land developer, both introduced by Stan Reston.

Jim Hurst, president of the BCIVS Key Club, was the student guest of the club. Members celebrated the birthdays of Irv Dickey, Harry Davis and 'Pink' Pinkston. Club president Virgil James conducted the meeting at which 75 were present.

H.G. Patton New President Conservatives

WELLINGTON (Special) — Mr. H. G. Patton was named president of the Wellington Progressive Conservative Association at their annual meeting and election of officers held at the Wellington town hall.

Mr. Patton succeeds Walter Nind as the Association head. Other officials elected included W. Thompson as vice-president; W. Nind as secretary-terasurer and poll chairmen W. Thompson, J. Lavender and W. Way.

Speakers for the meeting were: Clarence Milligan, M.P., and Norris Whitney, M.P.P., both representing Prince Edward-Lennox.

Mr. Milligan referred to Canada's mounting butter surplus of approximately 200,000,000 pounds, intimating that something was to be done about a reduced price to the consumer with the price possibly being dropped to 55 cents per pound.

The speaker also spoke briefly on pensions and trade, as well as on agriculture and referred to possible channel dredging at the Wellington dock where he said arrangements had been made for dredging in the spring.

CHANGES IN OFFING

Mr. Whitney talked on the three per cent provincial sales tax introduced last year, noting that while the tax was a nuisance in many ways, changes were in the offing which would better suit the public. He noted that while the tax is new in Ontario, eight other provinces have a provincial sales tax, while residents of the United States have to pay both federal and provincial sales taxes.

The speaker referred to the roads construction program in the county and also of the development of the Outlet Provincial Park which he said would be one of the most beautiful in Canada when completed.

Both Mr. Milligan and Mr. Whitney spoke of women's organizations being formed under experienced leadership which would be of great interest to Progressive Conservative women.

Mr. Patton expressed the appreciation of the meeting to both speakers and said the executive felt county residents were extremely fortunate in having members with the best interests of the riding at heart.

Winter Works Program Will Run to June 1

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal government's assistance to municipal winter works will run to the end of May this year in view of recent bad weather, Labor Minister Starr announced in the Commons Monday. The federal aid program was to have ended April 30.

Under the program, the federal treasury pays half the payroll costs of street, sewer, lighting and other municipal work undertaken to create winter employment.

'Pirate' Radio Station Ready To Operate

LONDON (CP) — Radio GBOK, Britain's first commercial radio station, is waiting for a high tide to put it on the air.

The station will broadcast from an 84-year-old lightship anchored in The Thames estuary beyond the international three-mile limit where broadcasting laws are not applicable.

The "pirate" station will beam North American style programs to southern England—24 hours a day of recorded music, commercials and news every hour on the hour. GBOK stands for "Great Britain Okay."

Former Canadian broadcaster Arnold Swanson says he owns the station's air time but "it's a big fat secret" who owns the station itself.

Swanson says he has sold enough GBOK air time for 10 commercial stations and has turned away £280,000 in the last five days.

He hopes the lightship, now stranded in mud at Pitsea Wharf, Essex, will slide into the sea at the next high tide March 6.

Workers Clear Catch Basins Around City

Clearing of catch basins was the order of the day yesterday in the wake of the quarter inch of rainfall received in the district.

City public works reported little or no serious flooding, but as a precautionary measure employees were directed to clear catch basins of the heavy snow which has fallen in the past two weeks.

While there may have been no serious flooding the rain made for sloppy walking conditions while sidewalks in many areas were in an extremely slippery condition.

Big puddles were numerous and pedestrians were hard put to avoid being splashed by passing cars.

IN MEMORIAM

MCINROY — In loving memory of Uncle Charles Mcinroy who passed away January 11, 1961 and Aunt Nellie McInroy who passed away February 27, 1961.

There's a road we call remembrance
Where thoughts and wishes meet
We take that road in thought today
For the two we cannot greet
Dearer still as the years depart
Their memories live within our hearts
With tender love and deep regret
We who loved you will never forget.

—Always remembered by Nellie, George and family.

W. J. Henderson Decides to Quit Federal Field

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP)—William J. Henderson, 45, Kingston lawyer, three times elected as Liberal MP for Kingston and and once defeated, will not be a Liberal candidate for this riding in the next federal election. His decision to step out of the federal field was announced today.

He first was elected to the federal Parliament in 1949 after having unsuccessfully contested the provincial election a year earlier. He was re-elected to the Commons in 1953 and in 1957 when the Liberal government fell, but was defeated in 1958 by B. G. Allmark, Progressive Conservative.

Two Belleville Rinks Still In Running for Intell Cup

Two Belleville rinks skipped by Mrs. Greta Peverley and Mrs. Ann Acton were in the running for The Ontario Intelligencer trophy after the first day of play in the women's open spiel now being played at the Quinte Curling Club. There are 24 rinks in the spiel and come from all over the Quinte district and outside points. There were some surprises and some real comebacks during the play on Monday. Mrs. Lloyd was down 6-1 but on the seventh end she scored a big five to even the count and then came along to gain a point on the eighth for the win. Up until that time she had been outcurled.

The girls were having a tough time getting used to runs in the ice and the correct weight to correct the fault but those skips who were good ice readers had a field day. Mrs. Ida Duffield, the former Ida Follwell and resident in this city for many years, had her High Park rink from Toronto in high gear in the first game but succumbed in the second game. Mrs. Fran Miller of Kingston, winner of the trophy last year, is back with the same rink, trying to repeat her success and she is doing very well, winning her first two games. The two-game winners will meet in the afternoon draw and this will bring the competition down to the fours. This afternoon, the women will knock off from their strenuous exercise to enjoy a social hour over the teacups as the committee will highlight the spiel with an afternoon tea.

Many compliments can be heard for the work of the committee in the arrangements that have been made for the visiting curlers The food has been delicious the hospitality excellent while the curlers have been given excellent ice on which to show their prowess. The women are having "a ball" at the spiel and the fun is not over yet. The results are—

IRA Abandons Terrorist War To Unite Ireland

CP from AP-Reuters

DUBLIN—The threat of hit-and-run attacks on the Irish border apparently has been lifted with an announcement by the Irish Republican Army that it is abandoning its terrorist war to unite the island.

The IRA said in a statement last Monday night that all of its fighters, estimated at about 5,000, have been ordered to end their harrassment of the northern Ireland border and throw away their arms.

Both sides of the border welcomed the announcement. But Northern Ireland's government said it will keep its guard up.

The 1,000 - word statement, handed to newspaper offices here by strangers, said IRA members have called a halt to five years of bombing and shooting attacks because of public opposition.

MOVEMENT REMAINS

The statement added, however, that "the movement remains intact and is in a position to continue its campaign in the occupied areas (Northern Ireland) indefinitely."

The IRA blamed its lack of public support on apathy and government muzzling of the press. The minds of the general public "have been deliberately distracted from the supreme issue—the unity and freedom of Ireland," it said.

Charles Haughey, minister of justice of the Irish Republic, which advocates the peaceful reunification of Ireland, called the IRA decision good news and said the underground's terrorism "was a policy which Irish public opinion had decisively rejected."

In Northern Ireland, Minister for Home Affairs Brian Faulkner said the IRA statement "is of course welcome. The tragedy is that these misguided people who have carried on a futile campaign for five years have taken so long to realize its hopelessness."

MAINTAIN SECURITY

But he added: "Until it is seen that the campaign is in fact ended, our own people can be assured that security precautions will be maintained."

The IRA statement said that during the five-year campaign more than 600 operations were carried out. Casualties included six killed and 28 wounded, it said. Forty-three IRA men are serving jail terms in Belfast, Northern Ireland; 42 in Dublin, and three in England, it said.

The IRA was formed in 1913 as a splinter group of Irish volunteers.

The army — which never exceeded 15,000 men — was split when a provisional Irish republic government was established in 1922.

The Republican government has kept 800 police in full-time operation against the IRA. Northern Ireland maintains strong border garrisons reinforced by troops from England.

OIL PRODUCTION

Gross value of Saskatchewan crude oil production in 1961 was estimated at $110,000,000, compared with $103,600,000 in 1960.

the 13 contested state assemblies.

With the second day of returns, all indications were that the Congress Party would again maintain the over - all national and state supremacy it has commanded since India gained independence from Britain 14 years ago.

In North Bombay, the final result was not expected until Wednesday night but the 64-year-old Menon appeared virtually certain of re-election.

Nehru staked his prestige on Menon's victory but the former Indian representative at the United Nations faced the opposition of a coalition of parties backing 74-year-old Kripalani, a disciple of Gandhi.

The prime minister himself was assured of certain re-election with a 25,000 vote lead over Socialist Leader Ram Manohar Lohia, his nearest rival in the Phulpur election district.

As the results continued to pour in from the big 100,000,000-vote poll, the Congress Party held absolute majorities in five of the 13 contested state legislatures — Punjab, Madras, Assam, Kashmir and Andhra Pradesh.

Two of India's 15 states were not involved in the election at state level because of mid-term polls. They were Kerala and Orissa states.

In Kerala, the Congress Party shares power with the Praja socialists following elections which ousted the Communists in 1960, and in Orissa the Congress Party took power after elections last year.

Junior Member Of Comedy Team Dies in Nevada

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Harold (Chick) Johnson, younger member of the daffy and durable comedy team of Olsen and Johnson, died at a Las Vegas hospital Monday night of a kidney disease He was 65.

His death ended a partnership that had produced noise and laughter in about equal quantities for nearly a half century—in vaudeville, on the New York stage and in the movies

Johnson and his wife Catherine came here about three weeks ago from their ranch at Carmel, N.Y., and were living in a trailer camp near the Las Vegas Strip. Mrs. Johnson said they made the move to get away from the cold in the East.

Johnson hadn't worked with his longtime partner, John S. Olsen, in about a year. Mrs. Johnson said she believes Olsen is in Switzerland, recuperating from injuries suffered in an auto accident a year ago. Olsen is about 70.

Johnson was born in Chicago and was appearing there as a pianist in the First World War era when he met Olsen, then a student at Northwestern University.

They teamed up at a local vaudeville house just for laughs—and got plenty of them. They were an overnight success.

They were together in such stage successes as Hellzapoppin and Laughing Room Only. Later they found another vehicle for their boisterous humor — the movies.

East German Families Moved Away From Wall

BERLIN (Reuters) — The forcible evacuation of East Germans living near the West Berlin border continued today.

At dawn East German police with watch-dogs woke the inhabitants of several houses near the British sector district of Staaken and took them away in trucks.

The evacuees were barely allowed time to collect a few personal belongings, West Berlin police said. Their furniture was taken away later.

Explosion Rocks Dwelling, Family Flees From Explosion As Home Becomes Inferno

TRENTON — Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Storms and their year-and-a-half-old daughter were literally "blown" out of their beds around 5.20 a.m. today when an explosion ripped through their small brick dwelling at 187 Sidney Street in Trenton. They were forced to escape from the building, which became a blazing inferno within a matter of minutes, by a window, in their night attire. Mrs. Storms, who is expecting another baby in a few days, and her daughter were taken to a neighbor's home.

The alarm was called in to the fire department by Elwell Phinney, 1 Gould Street, across the road from the Storms home.

The house and furnishings were completely destroyed by the fire. Firemen fought for almost two hours to contain the fire to the dwelling, which is flanked by frame houses.

It is understood that the couple recently bought a new stove and refrigerator.

A close neighbor said today that the Storms' small daughter had been moved from the room where the explosion occurred last night, as her parents were painting in this area.

The house, as are most of the homes in the area, was supplied with natural gas. Today, workmen from the gas company were checking the immediate area. The blast blew the cover off a manhole on the street in front of the house. Trenton fire department officials state a leak was discovered in a joint leading off the gas main in front of the house.

An investigation into the cause of the explosion has been called for by the Ontario Fire Marshal's office in Belleville.

The extent of the loss has not ben ascertained but an unofficial estimate sets property loss at $6,000 covered by insurance.

Ronald Storms, 21, is a member of the RCAF at Trenton.

Suggests More Flags Flying And Less Talk About Them

TRENTON — I'd like to see a few more flags flying and hear a lot less talk about what kind of a flag we should have", said Ben Thompson, MP for Northumberland, speaking to members of the Trenton Rotary Club last night. He stated Canada would only become a truly great nation when Canadians developed a more positive outlook in their national thinking.

"What is a Canadian?" asked Mr. Thompson. "Are we different from other people? On the surface we appear to be very much like our American neighbors to the south. But Canada, as a nation is reserved and we are less boastful than other national groups. We are more self-critical and we have a lesser feeling of reverence for our great Canadians, than the Americans do for their great Americans".

Mr. Thompson said that to understand the Canadian attitude, one must go back through history to our early beginnings. Canada, he said, was settled by the French. Then the English took over the country, and the Mother Country of France washed her hands of the French in Canada. Consequently, the French Canadians experienced a let-down feeling. Later, the United Empire Loyalists, "let down" by their compatriots south of the border, came to Canada. Scottish settlers from the Highlands of Scotland, let down by the lack of support in their revolt against English influence came to Canada.

ARE ON DEFENSIVE

Consequently, Mr. Thompson said, Canadians of today have a background of ancestors who had been 'let down" and who were determined to defend what they had in the way of language, religion and culture.

"Americans," said the speaker, "think only as Americans. They have one flag and one national anthem. They are proud of their country and have a feeling of awe for their great leaders — living and dead."

Canada, on the other hand, said Mr. Thompson, had ten provinces which have a distinctly local flavor. The country is divided into "the west"; the maritimes; Quebec.

"We have no flag which is recognized by everyone; we have no national anthem recognized by everyone. America is a vast melting pot. Canada is comprised of various ethnic groups which have a great deal of attachment to the country from which they came."

Mr. Thompson said that we, as Canadians, should be convinced that our way of life is the right way of life and should tell the world about it.

Mr. Thompson said that every Canadian would do well to follow the precepts laid down in Rotary's "Seven Paths to Peace," and foster fellowship and promote understanding and goodwill, locally, nationally and internationally.

The speaker was introduced to the club by past president Kenneth Couch and thanked by past president Clarence Saylor.

Mr. Thompson, who is one of the youngest members of parliament, recently announced that he would end his political career at the end of this session of parliament, due to business pressure.

R. D. McDonald, Dick Whitley, Jim Page and Cliff Baker will attend the Rotary District 707 Conference in Toronto this coming weekend.

Would Licence Readers

Dr. W. G. Berry, associate secretary of the United Church board of evangelism and social service, has urged the establishment of "a wise and much-needed system of censorship."

He wants the Federal Government to appoint a board, which would include literary editors, a psychiatrist, doctor, probation officer and "an ordinary housewife or two."

This board would classify books referred to it by the Canadian Customs, libraries, schools and the general public.

It would place technical books useful in social studies, "but only of sensational value to the average reader," on a list available only to professional workers, such as sociologoists, doctors, lawyers and ministers, who could apply for a licence to read them.

It might consider placing some fiction on the restricted-by-occupation list, but Dr. Berry, in his wisdom and generosity to the rest of us poor peasants, grants that "generally speaking, the adult should be able to read almost any novel he likes."

The same privilege, though, would not be accorded to adolescents and, therefore, the board would permit publication of novels of "doubtful value," or considered likely to corrupt, only in "the original definitive edition and not as 50-cent reprints.

Kinsey's reports on sexual behavior are cited as examples of technical books, to be reserved for reading by the professional group.

In Dr. Berry's opinion, it appears, the ordinary adult has no right to be curious about the sexual behavior of other people. If he should wonder how his own impulses, and his reaction to them, compare with those of his fellow human beings, he must not get this information from a book.

The objective of this prohibition may not be entirely without merit, but it appears to have escaped Dr. Berry's attention that today's teenager, on the average, has more spare cash than today's old age pensioner. Censorship through the pocketbook leaves much to be desired.

We are pleased, though, to see that Dr. Berry suggests a psychiatrist be appointed to his proposed board of censors. He would have before him a fascinating field of research—reading the heads of the other members who were crazy enough to accept such appointments and undertake such duties.

Fun With Figures

How much of the earth could Lt.-Col. John Glenn see during his historic flight?

A circular area the diameter of which, at any time, was 2,252 miles, if the office mathematicians are correct.

The formula: The observer can see, in miles, a distance equal to the square root of one and a half times his distance in feet above the earth's surface. Example—From an elevation of six feet a man can see three miles to the horizon in any direction, providing the surface is flat, as on a lake on a calm day.

Glenn was reported to have flown at a height of 160 miles. Figure it out for yourself.

Seeing 1,126 miles in any direction, Glenn could not see the full width of the earth? No, of course not. For that matter, we are not far enough from the sun to see its full diameter. The full diameter could be seen only from infinity.

Baseball players who complain the ball is pea-sized are partly right. They never see the full diameter. What's more, the nearer the ball gets to the plate, the less of it they see. Reach way out, man!

Who says space travel has no useful purpose?

The Slow British

The British Army seems bent on making a liar out of the man who said generals are always preparing to fight the last war—not the next one.

The British Government the other day announced that it would give full air mobility to all its forces.

Getting there fustest with the mostest is an old strategy, but clinging to it is not fighting the last war, not when the army goes airborne in the British manner.

Now the Government has announced a whole collection of new arms and devices, a tank which will swim rivers, mortar-spotting radar, interference-free radios, pilot-less reconnaissance planes and an infra-red device which will enable troops to see in the dark.

All very progressive—providing there is any army after the missiles fly.

Political Wives Play Key Role in Husbands' Affairs

BY RICHARD JACKSON
(from The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA — Politics, they say, is a man's world.

Of course, the Liberals' Judy LaMarsh and the Conservatives' Jean Casselman and Margaret Aiken will tell you that certainly, a woman's place is in the House—the House of Commons, that is—and Citizenship Minister Ellen Fairclough is the living, breathing evidence that this place can even be in the innermost councils of the nation, the Federal Cabinet.

These, then, are the women you see who have carved a place for themselves in what used to be a man's world.

But what about all the women who also play an indispensable role in politics — not front and centre of the stage that is the House of Commons, but in absolutely vital supporting parts behind the scenes.

These are the political wives.

Women like Mrs. John Diefenbaker who is more important to the Prime Minister's public image and especially his campaigning than a great many of his speeches . . . women like Mrs. Mike Pearson and Mrs. Paul Martin.

For a moment, let's meet with Mrs. Martin, for as a political wife she has been longer in the business of helping her husband serve the nation than any other woman associated with today's Parliament.

FROM THE BEGINNING

Paul Martin has been in the Commons since 1935, and Nell Martin has been an active working member of this remarkable team from the day of their marriage in '36.

Together they are unique.

There are perhaps two other couples, the Earl Rowes and the Bob McGregors, who have been around Parliament Hill longer, but neither Mrs. Rowe nor Mrs. McGregor played quite the key role in her husband's affairs that Nell Martin has.

And now with Parliament headed for the hustings, what will life be like for this veteran wife of six Federal elections?

The big problem, she has told the girls of the newspapers' social-and-women's pages, is to get the housework done.

Into odd spare moments stolen from the time her husband requests she devote to campaigning, she crams the chores of the home.

"Let's take that picture with me beside my washing machine," she once told a news cameraman, "for that's where I feel more at home when I'm not out, sitting beside Paul on some campaign platform."

Married to a politician for 26 years, she still can't get entirely used to the stress and strain of political speeches.

"I churn inside every time Paul makes a speech, although when I'm with him on the platform, I'm under instructions to try to look calm and serene. You think that's easy?"

• • •

KEEP IT SIMPLE

One of the more important assignments — both in the sense of the part it plays and the influence it exerts, as well as in the sheer volume of work involved — for the political wife is entertaining.

Nell Martin, wisely, has tried always to keep it simple.

"We like to spread sheets on the floor in Paul's den for a buffet of wieners, sauerkraut, macaroni and beer — and everybody loves it."

It was a good go — warm, hospitable, informal and more important, from the standpoint of the political wife, not difficult to pull off successfully — and it worked just as well in the days when Paul Martin was Federal Health Minister and entertaining on a larger scale, as it does now.

The hard-working political wife, advises Nell Martin, should take a day off a week.

"I take Tuesday, starting with breakfast in bed and then a relaxing day of catching up on phone calls, letters, reading and just plain letting down for a few precious moments."

What's good about being a political wife?

"You get to meet lots of interesting people all the time."

And what's not so good?

"You get little family life. Your husband's busy or away three-quarters of the time. So you learn to spend a lot of time alone . . . you remember that this is your husband's way of life and the period of loneliness quickly passes . . . and you get caught up finally with the excitement of it, sharing the feeling with him that you have perhaps the most important job in the country in helping, even in a small way, of shaping its future course."

Garden Lots Scarce Now

Montreal Gazette

Things are always changing, and of course they have to change. But there will be a feeling of nostalgia in the hearts of quite a number of Montrealers at the announcement that the Community Garden League of Greater Montreal is to end its activities.

The Garden League flourished in particular, during the war years, when many a Montrealer had his plot and raised his vegetables. Vacant pieces of land in and near Montreal were put to use. And there a new satisfaction was found by many a city dweller in the experience of turning the soil, and seeing things grow that his hands had planted and his care had nurtured.

On summer's evenings, especially where large areas of open land had been put to use, it was a pleasant sight to see scores of people at work as the sun set. Friendships were formed in those years, and life took on new interests.

Now it is all over. The growth of the city has laid claim to these pieces of land where the amateur gardeners used to work. Some displaced gardeners found new locations. Now even the new locations are now gone. So it's "hang up the shovel and the hoe" for many of them. But these gardening memories will remain well-rooted and green.

New Zealand's experiments in aerial top dressing for hill country farms should alert the Nova Scotia Department of Agriculture, make farm leaders in Cape Breton Island and everywhere in the province sit up and take notice.

The experiments have been pronounced successful by New Zealand's chief soil conservation official, D. A. Campbell. The results speak eloquently for themselves in rising farm production.

In the last dozen years, the agricultural aviation industry in New Zealand has spread more than 3,500,000 tons of phosphates over the earth, thereby transforming millions of acres of deteriorated hill lands into new, green, clover rich pastures.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

INVISIBLE LIVING

What odd people we encounter in the world sometimes. I am not speaking now of the social misfit but of that person who appears to have had experiences fantastically different from anything we ever experienced or ever heard of other people experiencing.

There are some people, for instance, who are confident that they have lived before. I know a woman of great education and charming, normal personality who makes claims about experiences under conditions other than those through which we pass in this present world. And all who hear her wonder how such things can be. Is there an order of life invisible to us but as real as our own order going on round about us every minute? Are those who have gone before us looking upon us with understanding eyes? Are those who are to be born a decade or a century from now being prepared for entry into terrestrial life? We know so little about ultimate reality that we can be said to know practically nothing at all.

The Bible gives us all the knowledge we need in order to live upright and happy lives. But there is reality which is described in no book. There are undoubtedly experiences going on ni this vast universe about which we know nothing, and perhaps may never know anything.

Live in a sense of expectancy. Keep your mind open as well as your ears and eyes. Be assured that there are truths and realities about which the wisest of our forebearers and contemporaries know nothing.

Yesterday the Belleville Kiwanis Club was formally presented with the building previously occupied by the Linn Bakery Company by Lt. - Col. P. H. Wills of this city. Located at the corner of William and Dundas Streets, the building will be utilized as a blood donor clinic in the immediate future. It will also be used by the Belleville Branch of the Red Cross Society as its headquarters; by the V.O.N., which has been sponsored by the Kiwanis Club since its inception; and also for the furtherance of boys' and girls' work, a social service activity of the Club.

In a recent survey of the Tuberculin Test program conducted at the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School under the direction of Dr. G. G. Brearley, of the Ontario Department of Health, a marked decrease in positive cases was noted within the school since the program was introduced in 1936 when all subsequent years only new pupils were examined. Results show the advantage of regular health service. The report of each student's X-ray was sent to his own physician. Several students showing slight X-ray changes but no actual disease were kept under observation and were X-rayed at regular intervals. Each and every case of active tuberculosis disease found was discovered in the early stages before they were dangerous to the other students.

Some Officials Tend To Be Too Persuasive

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

A few weeks ago, on that splendid television program, "At Random," I listened to a man who seemed to be more or less a spokesman for one of the new African Governments.

He was most plausible—quick ready with facts, eloquent, smoothly reasonable and unfailingly courteous. Yet I was suspicious of him the moment he opened his mouth, and the more he talked, the more I distrusted what he said.

Curiously enough, in the delicate art of persuasion, there is such a thing as being too persuasive. And this is precisely where "official spokesmen" usually fail — they have what Mother used to call "a plaster for every sore."

An honest person, with a mind that is not entirely closed, will never seem so fully rounded in defence of his position. There are gaps in his thought; there art facts he does not have available; there are flaws that he is willing to admit; there are points he will permit the other side to score.

But the propagandist is smooth as a pebble, without a crack in his armor — and this, which seems to be his strength, is really his weakness.

We are not, ultimately, perto have all the right on his side. We know that life is not that simple, that justice does not reside exclusively on one side of a fence, that no group (like no individual) is merely an innocent bystander in conflict and dissension.

Some months before, I heard another official spokesman, this time for the United Arab Republic. It is my own view that both the Arabs and Israelis have made some serious mistakes and have committed offences against basic morality. But the more plausible he defended his own position, the more I swung over to the other side. Nobody, I thought, could be that right.

We instinctively recognize fairness and the groping for painful honesty on the part of a speaker. We are much more likely to believe a man who stumbles a little; who is at times frankly embarrassed by any inconsistency in his reasoning; who is unafraid to display the chinks in his argument; and who freely lets the cool air of differences ventilate his mind.

Rabid partisans, of course, cannot do this; the communists have all the answers taped, immovably and eternally; so have their opposite numbers, the John Birchers and company. And neither of these extremists can ever win an argument (or a country) on reason or logic; the communists win on hunger, and the fascists win on fear and frustration.

It is when the propagandist seems most plausible and most unassailable in his facts and inferences that we know we are not listening to a Man but to a Line — and a Line is always a Lie.

What Is an Enlarged Heart And Can One Live With It?

Dear Dr. Molner: What is an enlarged heart? Can one live with it? — B.X.

I can't give you a general answer, but your doctor can, after examining you.

If the heart is put under some unusual and continued strain, it tends to get larger.

Sometimes the strain is relatively temporary — that is, in time it is corrected in one way or another. In such cases, the enlargement may gradually be reduced. Or the enlargement may remain, but it not longer is anything to worry about.

There is some variation in the size of hearts anyway, so in some instances it is difficult to say whether a heart is slightly enlarged or whether it is quite normal, just larger than average. After all, we don't all have feet or hands or shoulders the same size.

Thus there are over-sized hearts which aren't cause for concern.

On the other hand, if the strain that has caused the heart to enlarge is still present, then the case deserves careful study, to see whether treatment of any kind is necessary as for high blood pressure or whether, perhaps, the person is overweight and can reduce the strain by losing weight.

Still another possibility is that there may be no particular treatment that will be of value, but the patient should simply know that his heart has been damaged and should be careful not to over-exert himself.

Too much puffing and shortness of breath may in a good many such cases be a natural, built-in warning to the patient that he is straining harder than his heart allows, and he must rest or at least take things easier until his breath comes normally again.

There are thousands upon thousands of enlarged hearts, but their owners go along nicely for years by taking care of themselves.

I don't, of course, mean that you should ignore it if you find you have an enlarged heart. It means that either there is or there has been some excessive strain.

You should find out just how much damage there has been, and whether improvement can be made, which many times is the case, and how careful you need to be to relieve the heart of any future strain. Get the facts and act accordingly.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

WHAT PEOPLE WANT

In the first place people do not always want what you think they want. There are wants and wants. And you can't set up a rule of wants applying to Sam Smith and expect that Bill Brown's wants will dove-tail with his.

People like to get things that they don't expect. They like surprises. They like the out-of-the-way.

Warmed over meals are all right if you have had a taste of the original.

People want to be amused more than they want to be instructed. They like to instruct themselves. An inferior mind can give great amusement to the superior mind. But when the superior mind tries this trick on his less fortunate brothers, they fall asleep or walk out on him. Which probably explains why the college professor laughs at the clown.

None of us really knows exactly what we want.

We set a goal or see a picture in our mind that we desire made real, but when the picture is finished, it has little resemblance to the one painted in the mind.

No big person wants flattery, but both big and small people crave appreciation. That is the universal want.

Many people want companionship but noe necessarily a great deal of talk. It is an art to be companionable and at the same time know just when to say something and when to remain silent. Silence is so masterful at times.

People want happiness. And the only possible way to get happiness, it seems, is to give it. his is the sure method whereby you get it.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The farmhouses and barns, as seen from a train window, have a particular nostalgic charm at this season of the year. No grainfields of varied color distract the view. The farmhouses are not hidden by the trees that often surround them, but are ornamented by the design of the bared branches. The wide white countryside accentuates the separateness, the apartness of the farm homes.

"As a city man born and bred," said my neighbor in the chair car who had been gazing attentively out the window for an hour," I get a very strange homesick feeling when I see all these farms, hundreds of them all different and all individual. I guess this is the way men lived for most of the past, not herded like bats or birds in the caves of cities. And maybe something deep in me wishes I could share in the privacy, the pleasant seclusion that strikes you as the first characteristic of farmhouses seen in a winter landscape."

I confessed to the same nostalgia.

"Funny," he reflected. "I never get this feeling while driving in my car in the country. Only from train windows!"

Head of Many Companies, Brilliant Lawyer, Scholar Makes Horse Raging Entry

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

HEADS MINING COMPLEX

Edward Robert Erskine Carter, a native of Saint John, N.B., is president of Patino of Canada Limited and as such heads half a dozen Canadian mining companies in which international Patino interests have invested. A former Rhodes scholar and lawyer, Mr. Carter also heads the Patino company in the United States which bought Bowie race track in Maryland in January. (CP Photo).

Edward Robert Erskine Carter is a former Rhodes scholar and a lawyer who somewhat unexpectedly finds himself head of a Canadian mining complex and an American race track.

His entry into mining in late 1957 drew only minor public attention but his entry into racing in January of this year brought a flood of questions.

"How," it was asked, 'does a man of 38 come to head so many companies in such varied fields?"

The answer lies largely in his brilliant scholastic record and his reputation as a lawyer.

His legal work brought him to the attention of the international Patino interests, one-time kingpins in Bolivian tin mining and they asked him to head their Canadian holdings. He accepted and this made him managing director, and now president, as well, of Patino of Canada Ltd, and president of five other Canadian mining enterprises.

BOUGHT BOWIE TRACK

It also made him president of Patino Mines and Enterprises Consolidated Inc., an American company 46 per cent owned by Patino of Canada.

When this American company, through a subsidiary, bought Bowie race track in Maryland, Mr. Carter was in horse racing.

The Bowie purchase is explained in Patino circles as an "investment." They regard the track, for which they paid $5,000,000, as strategically situated to draw a large public and, with increasing leisure and incomes, they think its future is assured.

Mr. Carter himself is not likely to be seen very much about the Bowie paddock—he has too many other things to attend to in his Toronto head office.

He was born in Saint John, N.B., Feb. 20, 1923, the son of Arthur Norwood Carter, a lawyer still practising there, and Edith Isobel (Ireland) Carter.

His father, his brother Norwood and he all became Rhodes scholars under the awards set up in 1902 by Cecil Rhodes, South African mining magnate.

PRISONER OF WAR

The triple win set a family record for the scholarships since equalled by a South African family. His mother's brother, Erskine Ireland, was also a Rhodes winner.

Mr. Carter studied at the University of New Brunswick 1940-1942 and then joined the Royal Canadian Artillery. He was one of a group of 650 Canadian junior officers sent on loan to British units; in Mr. Carter's case the 7th King's Own Scottish Borderers, 1st British Airborne Division.

Of this group, 90 per cent became casualties, including 132 killed. Mr. Carter himself was dropped into Holland in the unsuccessful Arnhem airborne action of 1944 and was later taken prisoner while trying to escape across the Rhine.

He graduated in law at the University of New Brunswick in 1947, was appointed a Rhodes scholar and took a law degree at Oxford in 1949. He practised with his father in Saint John 1949-1953; was legal officer with Abitibi Power and Paper Co. Ltd., Toronto, 1953-1954; and was a partner in the law firm of Fennell, McLean, Seed and Carter 1955-1958.

PLAYED TENNIS

A six - footer weighing 170 pounds, he lists his hobbies as tennis and golf but gets little time these days for anything more than morning setting - up exercises. In school and college days he played tennis, hockey and rugger and was No. 1 ranking junior tennis player in the Atlantic provinces.

As head of Patino of Canada Mr. Carter is also president and director of the following Candian mining companies

Officers Only Doing Duty Says Counsel

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—Joseph Lament, 39, of Windsor, who is suing three St. Catharines police officers for unstated damages for injuries suffered during his arrest for impaired driving, was described Monday as a "time bomb" set to go off any time he became excited.

Roderick Barr, counsel for the three policemen, Const. James Kirkpatrick, Const. Douglas Fraser and Sgt. Victor Dawson, told the six-man jury in his summation at the Ontario Supreme Court hearing that Lament was under a "medical sentence of death."

Mr. Barr said Const. Kirkpatrick's action in applying a headlock to prevent Lament from escaping and to take him into the police station had not caused the injury which has left Lament partially aparalyzed and mentally retarded. He said the constable was only doing his duty in restraining him and had not used excessive force.

He said the other two officers did not lay a hand on Lament except to check his pulse and put his legs back in the police car.

Medical experts had testified that the cerebral artery in Lament's head had been getting progressively weaker during the two years prior to his arrest in July 1960 and could have burst any time he got excited, Mr. Barr claimed.

Lament's counsel, Arthur Maloney, in his summation, said it was unfortunate he could not bring his client into court since Lament is partly paralyzed, unable to speak, is severely mentally retarded and will be for the rest of his life.

HAD RIGHT

He said Lament had every right to protest his arrest since he was doing nothing wrong. There was no evidence of drinking except that his sister said he had taken half a glass of beer early in the evening prior to his arrest, which might have left a slight smell of alcohol, he said.

Mr. Maloney asked for sufficient damages to take into account Lament's loss of income and the medical care he had received and would need in the future, and exemplary damages because of the nature of the arrest. He said all three officers should be held responsible as all had contenanced the assault which caused the injury.

Mr. Justice Neil Fraser will charge the jury today. The trial now is in its third week.

JUDY LA MARSH

—a kind of planning, he said, that the Liberals wouldn't produce.

He spelled out his party's stand in a non-confidence motion tacked onto the Liberal motion.

The Liberal and CCF - NDP motions of non-confidence come to a vote tonight at the close of the two-day supply debate—one of six such formal debates in the session.

Monday's supply debate bristled with statistics on the Canadian economy's health, past and present.

Miss La Marsh based her multi-billion-dollar estimate of lost production on a comparison of growth under Liberal and Progressive Conservative governments.

She said that between 1950 and 1956, the average annual increase in gross national production was six per cent—in constant dollars, discounting price increases. From 1957 to 1961, the increase had averaged 1½ per cent a year.

"The cost to Canadians of the slowdown in our economic pace is $14,000,000,000.

It had also meant the loss of 300,000 new jobs which didn't materialize.

"These then are the costs of Canada's wasted years, the years of Tory talk instead of action, of mismanagement instead of purposeful growth."

Economists were forecasting the start of another recession at the end of this year or the start of 1963. Yet unemployment now was 8.5 per cent of the labor force at the peak of the business cycle.

GIVES STATISTICS

Mr. Hees replied with another set of statistics.

Between 1956 and 1961, he said, gross national production had risen 22 per cent. Employment had risen eight per cent, exports 19 per cest and personal and labor income 30 per cent.

The trade minister said the former Liberal government's tight money policy had slowed down the economy in 1957, and the Liberals could be counted on to do it again if they regained office.

Miss La Marsh said the Liberal program outlines policies for new growth. These included the establishment of an agency for the "rehabilitation of problem areas." The agency would award capital grants to provinces and municipalities for development projects and assist new or expanding industries.

The Liberals also would set up a municipal loan fund, an economic advisory council and a reformed development bank. Federal aid for slum clearance and urban renewal would be increased.

SECOND MOTION

The traditional want-of-confidence motions were seconded by W. H. McMillan (L—Welland) and Harold Winch (CCF—Vancouver East).

Miss La Marsh said a "stagnant economy" was "inexcusable" for a country with such a wealth of natural resources and such an industrious population.

"We are saying the economy has not grown as it should have — this is not glooming and dooming."

She referred to the plight of 500,000 unemployed workers, mounting dairy product surpluses and a "tragic decline" in set farm income.

"This time, the government will be judged on its record, not on its vision."

After years of "Tory talk and no action" the government showed no signs of preparing to fight the coming downturn.

"I am truly shocked to see the self - satisfaction of the government over unemployment," Miss La Marsh said.

Mr. McMillan said a $1,200,000,000 increase in money supply in the last year, or any one of a half - dozen other government actions, is enough to "scare investment away from our country."

Mr. McMillan critizied a $1,200,000,000 increase in the money supply in the last year asd quoted from an old speech by Finance Minister Fleming about the perils of inflation.

"Where's the inflation?" asked a Conservative member.

"Would you not think that between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000 a day in new money is not inflation?" Mr McMillan asked.

Three Guilty Of Entering

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) Two Hamilton youths and a young Toronto mother pleaded guilty Monday to breaking and entering and theft and were remanded in custody two weeks for sentence.

George Midgley Naylor, 18, and Herbert Donald Young, 20, both of Hamilton, and Mrs. Anna Doreen Hoye, 19, of Toronto, mother of a 10-month-old son, were charged after Swalm's TV and Hi-Fi store here was broken into and four portable television sets and a tape recorder were stolen.

The merchandise was valued at $3,600.

COMMISSIONER

Development Minister Macaulay presents a report on the economic condition of the province. Premier Robarts described it as "a prelude to the budget" which is to be brought down Thursday by Provincial Treasurer Allan.

Another of the final throne speech debaters Monday took up the liquor question. Maurice Belanger (L — Windsor-Sandwich) accused the government of trying to "hoodwink" the public in dropping the $1 liquor permit at the end of March. The permits brought in a revenue of $1,300,000 annually.

At the same time, however, liquor prices will go up slightly to eliminate the odd cents caused by the retail sales tax and Mr. Belanger complained:

"Do they (the government) believe the public doesn't see what they have in mind? They know perfectly well that the extra few cents on each bottle will bring in more money than the permits."

REPLIES TO SPEECH

Mr. Grossman replied to a speech by Mr. Sopha Dec. 14 in which he declared political patronage and high rents were involved in leasing of stores to the Liquor Control Board at Sudbury and Capreol.

Mr. Grossman said he had arranged for Garth S. Webb of the Toronto office of the Montreal Trust Company to examine the properties, leasing agreements and comparable properties.

In all cases, he said, reading from Mr. Webb's report, "the LCB pays less rental than would be indicated by the general market conditions."

SAYS LESS LIBERAL

As to the charges of patronage, one of the lessors was Dr. Michael V. J. Keenan of Sudbury who Mr. Grossman identified as president of the Sudbury and District Liberal Association.

Speaker William Murdoch had to stand repeatedly and hammer his gavel to hush the shouts from Liberal and government members. At one point he threatened to stand on his feet indefinitely to restore order.

Mr. Sopha had said that the people who had been given the right to rent liquor stores to the government would, on the strength of rent being paid by the liquor board, be "in clover" after about 10 years and would have their property paid for.

Mr. Grossman said Mr. Sopha had been "playing with" the figures, omitting to mention such expenses as maintenance, depreciation, insurance and taxes.

At the Capreol store, the board was paying some $1,250 less a year than would be a fair rental, Mr. Grossman said. The Sudbury store mentioned by Mr. Sopha was also being obtained at a reasonable rental figure.

"These facts speak for themselves," Mr. Grossman added. "The Liquor Control Board of Ontario has in every particular been meticulously careful in its dealings with these lessors."

QUOTES STATEMENT

Mr. Grossman quoted from Hansard Mr. Sopha's statement last December that he had been approached by a group of constituenets seeking to rent the liquor board a store at a proposed Sudbury shopping centre. Mr. Sopha had said he merely arranged for them to meet the late William Collings, then chief liquor commissioner.

Mr. Grossman tabled six letters from Mr. Sopha's legal firm — two signed by Mr. Sopha and four by his partner, E. J. Conroy — to Mr. Collings concerning the proposed liquor store. Four of the letters referred to the group as "clients."

To repeated shouts from the Liberals and repeated warnings from Speaker Murdoch, Mr. Grossman accused the Liberal member of attempting to mislead the legislature.

Mr. Sopha stood on a point of order and shouted his denial that the group were clients. In the House and in a later statement to the press, he contended he had "never received a red cent" from the group and knew only one of its members.

When Arthur Reaume (L—essex North) kept shouting, Mr. Grossman retorted "Ah, shut up."

The minister said he was being charitable in thinking that Mr. Sopha "was motivated by his anger at not being able to get the store leased for his client."

Noting that Mr. Sopha had made other charges at the time against John Fullerton (PC—Algoma - Manitoulin), Mr. Grossman said:

"If there is anything I despise, it is smug self - righteousness. . . . I think the honorable member for Sudbury should look into his own mirror to find out if he really wears a halo. Perhaps he may decide he is not in a position to pass judgment on his peers."

GRIMSBY, England (CP)—British trawler operators blame Russian fishing fleets for the poor fishing in November. One skipper, Bernard Wharam, said: "On my last trip to the White Sea (arctic gulf) there were 200 Russian trawlers sweeping up and down until there were no fish left. We call them vacuum cleaners."

lated action" staged by "two rebel officers" stationed at the big military airfield at Bien Hoa, 20 miles northeast of Saigon.

He said the captured pilot was Lieut. Pham Phu Quoc and the other plane was piloted by Sub-Lt. Nguyen Van Cu, but that as yet nothing was known about the pair or their motives.

Another South Vietnamese plane, believed to be the second aircraft which made the attack, was reported to have crash-landed at the airport in Phnom Penh, capital of neighboring Cambodia. Informed sources in Phnom Penh said the plane was riddled with shots and its landing gear was damaged but the pilot was not hurt. Cambodian authorities arrested him but it was not known whether he would be turned over to the Vietnamese government.

PRESIDENT MOVES

Diem left the palace for a scheduled field trip outside the city 45 minutes after the attack. He returned later in the day and moved from his damaged palace to nearby Gia Long Palace, used normally as a government guest house. Military and police guards cordoned off the new presidential headquarters.

The planes circled low over Saigon, then made bombing runs on the palace at treetop level and scored direct hits with napalm fire bombs.

First reports said about four bombs were dropped, then the planes switched to rockets and machine-gun fire. Eyewitnesses said each plane made about a dozen passes through the 50-minute action.

As the first bombs dropped, machine-guns opened fire on the planes. Light anti - aircraft guns joined in later.

Diem has been widely criticized for failing to carry out democratic reforms but in recent months his U.S. - backed fight against the estimated 20,000 insurgents who have infiltrated from the Communist north was described as making progress.

Income Tax Explained

Written and designed for the taxpaper who is not in a position to employ the services of a professional accountant or visit an Income Tax Office.

By C. A. Miller — Former Supervising Assessor Income Tax Department.

A large number of Canadian Taxpayers have entered into contracts with investment societies, mutuals and syndicates, whereby they paid in a certain sum each year, which is returned to them with the accumulated earnings on the investment at the expiration of the contract.

When the taxpayer receives this lump sum, he is sometimes at a loss to know how this will affect his income tax in the year it is received. This type of income received is known as a blended payment, because it is made up of the return of his invested capital plus the earned interest. It is only the earned interest that is taxable because when he was paying into it each year before maturity, he could not deduct from his income the amount he was paying in.

If he was was taxed at the prevailing income tax rates on this interest received, it would considerably reduce his earnings on his investment. To give the taxpayer some measure of relief, a special section of the Income Tax Act has been enacted for this purpose. The taxpayer will not show this interest in his income at all but compute a special tax and add this tax on, on the line indicated as "Tax Adjustments". To arrive at the special tax payable, his return for the current year should be completed up to the point of the gross tax. To his "Net Income" for the current year, he will add the Net Incomes of the two immediately preceeding years.

He will total the gross tax in the same manner, then multiply the total of 3 years gross tax by the amount of interest received and divide the result by the total of the 3 years net income. This will give the Special Tax Payable. Add this to the other tax as a tax adjustment. If the taxpayer has no other tax payable, this method would probably not be to his advantage.

Question? A number of us invested a certain sum each year in an investment pool for 10 years. Each year we reinvested the earnings on the capital. After 15 years, we liquidated the assests and divided the proceeds. Is any of this taxable?

Answer: Yes. From these proceeds you will deduct the capital you put in each year. The balance is taxable. The special rate (tax) on this may be to your advantage.

M. J. Coldwell Gives Talk On Democracy in Asia, Africa

"Education, with a raising of the standard of living lays the foundation of democracy," stated Mr. M. J. Coldwell, one of Canada's ablest parliamentarians and distinguished elder statesman, as he addressed the Women's Canadian Club at their regular meeting held in Queen Alexandra School, last evening.

There was a reasonably good attendance despite somewhat hazardous walking and driving conditions.

Mr. Coldwell, who was introduced by the club president, Mrs. R. D. Arnott, became parliamentary leader and national president of the C.C.F. party in 1942 and has been a delegate to the United Nations a number of times. In 1958-59 he made an extended visit to India on behalf of the UN and at the request of the Indian government to study and evaluate a program of community development. With this wealth of knowledge he was well prepared to speak on the chosen topic "The Future of Democracy in Asia and Africa."

MUCH PATIENCE NEEDED

In dealing with the governing problems of the new emerging countries in Africa and Asia the speaker stressed that a great deal of patience is required and continued by explaining the democratic system which has a long evolution of approximately 2000 years behind it and that parliamentary institution which is used in Canada and Great Britain is the best means of self government that man has yet devised.

In the newer countries, particularly India, there are new forms which are hoped to be democratic. Today there is a revolt against colonialism and these new countries are struggling for larger measurements of self government.

Mr. Coldwell went on to say that the British are highly regarded and respected in India, more so than any other nation, owing to having left gracefully. They left behind the beginning of parliamentary institutions and also a trained corps of administrators for which the people of India are most grateful.

UNDERDEVELOPMENT, DISEASE

The speaker explained that most of the new countries are alike in one respect, with their people underprivileged and illiterate, with underdevelopment, poverty and disease. It is believed with a democratic system these people may gain self respect and self government. The past system has been to force, rather than to persuade. There is far more power by showing an example (the democratic way) than by forcing the issue.

INDIA KEY NOTE

The Western countries have this responsibility in the point of view of modern democracy by helping to raise their standards of living from which arises the desire for education and industrialization India is the key or testing of these newer methods. The newly emerged countries in Africa will also benefit from this system even though they are not prepared as yet to look after themselves.

Mr. Coldwell defended Mr. Nehru's policy of using force in the invasion of Goa, stating that Portugal had been approached for seven years without results and that "Time may justify this force." He also dealt briefly with the political situation in Yugoslavia, saying that there is a different system now emerging. All this without the parliamentary system but the democratic ideas are coming back in an entirely different form of self-government. This country is being closely studied by the new emerging countries and these countries in turn will evolve their own institutions as no people will stay forever under a dictatorship and that these ties are loosening.

UPHOLD INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

Mr. Coldwell concluded his address by stressing the need for people to stand behind the international organizations, particularly the United Nations, which has done such a wonderful job.

A most interesting question and answer period followed the address, after which Mrs. Ben Burley, on behalf of those present, expressed appreciative thanks for a most outstanding and informative talk.

All of the gowns were similarly fashioned with scoop necklines and three-quarter-length sleeves, the full skirts had a flat front panel and released box pleats shaped the bell of the skirt. All wore headdresses and shoes to match and each carried bouquets of white 'mums and lace.

Little three-year-old Catherine Knight, cousin of the bride, as flower girl, was sweet in her white nylon frock with nylon bows on a white net apron. She wore a matching headdress and carried nosegay of red roses, surrounded by white 'mums and lace.

Mr. Donald Steele, of Peterborough attended his brother as best man, and Mr. Elton Cunningham, of Hermon, and Mr. Leonard Goodkey of Bancroft were ushers.

The reception, following the ceremony, was held in the lower auditorium of the church where the bride's mother assisted by the bridegroom's mother received the guests. The former wore a gown of beige tone with brown accessories, and a corsage of yellow carnations, while the latter was in blue with pink-toned accessories, and a corsage of pink carnations.

The bride's table was appointed with white linen damask centered by an all white three-tiered wedding cake topped with lily-of-the-valley and two doves. The base was encircled with misted tulle and flanked by tall white candles. The bridal bouquets added a lovely nuptial touch.

For travelling to the United States, the bride chose a pale blue three-piece suit with white accessories and a corsage of white and blue carnations.

Guests were present from Hermon, Maynooth, Boulter, Bancroft, Peterborough, Toronto, Picton, Wellington, Hillier, Mountain View, Foxboro and Belleville.

The bride, previous to her marriage, was honored at three miscellaneous showers: one at Bird's Creek, Ontario, at the home of Mrs. L. Hartwick, at the home of Mrs. K. Shannik of Donald Street, Belleville, with Miss Kayla Shannik as hostess, and also at Bethel Chapel, where friends gathered to honor the bride and bridegroom.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Steele are residing at 248 Coleman Street, Belleville.

Indian and Metis Recipe Booklet Now Available

WINNIPEG (CP) — Gourmets who search the world for exotic dishes need travel no farther than Manitoba, an Indian and Metis recipe booklet indicates.

Examples of the native cuisine include such delicacies as boiled moose nose, moss berry relish, rose hip jam, pickled beaver tail and a white pastry whose main ingredient is bear fat. And don't overlook baked skunk, also regarded highly as a cure for whooping cough.

The recipe booklet, a collection of old-time, even legendary, dishes, was put on sale here in connection with the eighth annual Indian-Metis conference sponsored by the Welfare Council of Greater Winnipeg. The Metis are the French-speaking descendants of the 19th - century free fur traders who roamed the West before the immigration boom.

SOUR DOUGH BREAD

The booklet also tells how to prepare pemmican — quail roasted with the feathers on and wrapped in damp clay—and sour dough bread. Following is a detailed recipe for the latter:

"To make starter: Soak yeast in ½ cup warm water. Make batter of 4 cups flour, ½ cup sugar and warm water. Add soaked yeast. Let this 'work' for 2 to 3 days. Carry in a covered lard pail.

"On making camp, remove 2 cups starter and set aside for future. To the rest, add 4 cups flour, 1 or 2 teaspoons baking powder and water to make a dough. Let this rise in a dishpan near stove or campfire. Work down and divide into portions in lard pails. Let rise double. Put lid on tight and bury in campfire coals to bake (or in oven)."

The moss berry relish, described as "excellent with hot or cold meat," is relatively simple. Just pick five pounds of the berries which are found growing on moss deposits on rocks, add 3½ cups brown sugar, two cups of vinegar and two tablespoons of cloves, cinnamon and allspice. Boil together for two hours.

New Fashions Indicate More Feminine Feeling, Body-Conscious Look

By PEGGY MASSIN

PARIS (Reuters) — New silhouettes in Paris this spring indicate a more feminine feeling and body-conscious look but the trends receive as many individual treatments as there are fashion houses.

The spirit is adaptation rather than revolution. Fashions combine the best of past modes with manners which are purely contemporary. They generally develop only the successfully proven themes.

Paris in the 1960s refuses to be bound to one all-inclusive silhouette.

Every designer views women on his own terms, ranging from boyishly simple street suits to vaporous late-day dresses alive with flounces and furbelows. Even hemlines are the negation of conformity, varying from Dior's knee-cap lengths to the ladylike lengthening endorsed by Chanel

Skirts are cut as full as a ballerina's tutu at Ricci and Heim, or appear deceptively slender with panels and inverted pleats at Dior and other houses.

These swinging or semi-wide skirts are the one common denomination which links three completely different silhouettes

LONG TORSO LOOK

The first theme, ironically endorsed by rival designers Marc Bohan of Dior and Yves St. Laurent, has a long torso look with easy, bloused top. Bohan's version has the lowest waistline. Supple leather belts circle the hipline over boxy skirts marked with ribbed seams or deep-set pleats. St. Laurent has many tunic treatments in split-level skirts.

The second silhouette is in diametric opposition and is an up-to-date version of the late Christian Dior's original New Look, launched in 1947. It has the same hour-glass effect, with wasp waistline. It necessitates wearing the same little waist-cinching corset called a "guepiere."

Nina Ricci, Jacques Heim and Bob Bugnaud have all revived that look, with full swirling skirts cut in gores or sunburst pleats springing from the natural, tightly - belted waistline.

The most dramatic New Look model in the Ricci collection is a dress made entirely of mink. The pelts are worked horizontally throughout the huge circular skirt and snug bodice, divided by a stiff wide leather belt.

LESS EXTREME

Midway between these two extremes stands the third theme—the princess silhouette and its derivatives.

The Roman designer, Roberto Capucci, conquered Paris with his beautifully - cut princess dresses and coats in gay, heart-warming colors.

At Capucci, the majority of waistlines have a little rise. Other models, with a "stand-off" fit, feature indented or concave midriffs.

Gres, past-mistress of bias cutting, favors a lifted waistline at the back by means of bias-cut panels. Cardin and Laroche shape the midriff with rows of vertical tucks or deep V-shaped yokes, while Pierre Balmain adds a narrow fabric belt and a conical skirt.

Suits with short jackets and flared skirts are the youngest and most becoming in years Some jackets rest lightly on the hipbones. Others are cut off around the midriff like boleros. All retain the narrow shoulder line with slim, inset sleeves.

Suits are shown with chiffon or floral printed silk blouses, tucked neatly into the skirts at Balmain and Cardin, and worn as loose overblouses at Dior, St. Laurent and Laroche.

Patou features jackets with deep scooped necklines at the back, filled in with cowls or bows attached to the blouse.

Cardin's jackets are cut like bedjackets, without buttons or other fastenings, and edged all around with a ruched flounce. Bohan of Dior makes many of his collar-less street suits more feminine by the addition of a chiffon blouse trimmed with many layers of ruffled collars.

TWO COAT LINES

Spring coats have two basic fashion ingredients: Fit and flare. The head of the family is the redingote. Loving relatives are the chesterfield with subtle shaping; the ulster with back belted martingale; and Lavin's Edwardian "frock coats" with cutaway front and swallow tails. Yves St. Laurent draws his inspiration from the nautical pea jacket with double breasted buttons, tabbed sleeves, and shoulder epaulettes.

Evening dresses seem more like fragile nightgowns. Flowing draperies, angel-wing scarves and high-waisted empire silhouettes using numberless yards of chiffon lend the dreamlike quality of a wisp of smoke.

Other versions of the "boudoir look" are the demure lingerie dresses made of flounced tiers of white eyelet-embroidered organdy. Laroche shows guipure lace models with semi-bleached embroidery motifs and matching capeline garden party hats. Dior's baby bodice dresses are entirely contrived of narrow lace ruffles.

The prettiest new effects in embroidery are achieved with ostrich feathers. Individual plumes flutter like hairs all over evening gowns or sweeping stoles. Catillo of Lanvin uses white feathers on white chiffon dresses with an effect as light as falling show.

Readers' Bonus Column

by Mary Moore

QUESTION:

I've enjoyed your column for years — in fact turn to you first before the news. It's more pleasant that way! Have you a recipe for Dauphine Potatoes? I've eaten them in many restaurants but have never found them in a cookbook — Mrs. Yvonne F.

ANSWER.

Thank you mam.

DAUPHINE POTATOES:

As Escoffier describes them: "Finely slice 2 lbs. Dutch potatoes. Put in basin and add salt, pepper and nutmeg. To 1 beaten egg add 4 oz. grated fresh Gruyere cheese and then stir in 1½ pints (3¾ cups) boiled milk. Thoroughly mix. Add potatoes and pour all into buttered and garlic-brushed earthenware baking dish. Copiously sprinkle with grated Gruyere. Dot with butter and bake 40 to 45 minutes in moderate oven".

Emem's suggestions: I am delighted to be reminded of Dauphine Potatoes but think the time of baking that Escoffier suggests is too short. I would try 350 deg. Fahr. for 1¼ to 1½ hours in a dish deep enough to allow potatoes to bubble without boiling over. Escoffier's "copiously sprinkle with Gruyere cheese" I would interpret as ½ to 2-3 cup as the final topping.

QUESTION:

. . . Have you ever come across a layer cake butter-cake recipe, using about ½ cup molasses in it and iced with seven-minute frosting. My mother made this frequently when I was a child and we were very fond of it but my product does not have good texture and I would be pleased to find out how I could improve on it — N. D.

ANSWER:

MOLASSES LAYER CAKE:

¼ cup butter, ½ cup sugar, 2 eggs, 1¾ cups sifted flour, 1 tablespoon baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, 1½ teaspoons ginger (optional), ½ cup light molasses, 2-3 cup milk or thin cream.

Cream together butter and sugar until light, then add eggs and beat until very light. Sift together dry ingredients and add alternately with molasses and milk or cream. Pour into greased and floured layer cake pans and bake at 375 deg. Fahr. about 25 to 30 minutes.

REQUEST:

Would you have a recipe for a cake made with graham cracker crumbs, eggs, dates ground up and necessary liquid but no flour? I have one recipe that calls for ¼ cup of flour but that is not the one I want — Mrs. M. B. P.

ANSWER:

No — mine calls for ¼ cup flour too. S.O.S. Readers! Please send me the recipe Mrs. M. B. P. wants if you have it.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Mr. R.A. — If she returns home, my new wife will leave.

Claire A. — I love my father and have a right to live at home.

• • •

Mr. R.A. — I'm in such a tight spot, I don't know what to do. If I move one way, I'll hurt my daughter. If I move another way, my wife will walk out.

I was a widower with two married sons and one unmarried daughter, Claire, 22 years old. Claire had been keeping house for me, and wasn't wild about the idea of me getting married again. When she actually met Rae she threatened to leave home if I got married. I tried to reason with her, to show her we would all live happily together, but it was no use. After my remarriage, Claire moved out.

After six months' absence, however, she wants to return Knowing Claire's hostile feelings toward her, my wife says if Claire moves in, she'll move out. How can I settle this?

• • •

Claire A. — I realize I was impetuous and impulsive, turning my back on my father and Rae without even giving the new arrangement a try. As Dad explained months ago, the apartment is large and there's room for the three of us. I'd like my old room back. I've been staying with one of my brothers, out in the suburbs, and I'd rather live closer to my job like before.

I love my father and I know he'd like me around. I'll apologize to Rae and try to make her understand that my attitude wasn't personal. I was merely shocked that Dad hadn't waited even a year after my mother's death, to spring his plans on me. Everything moved too fast. There was no time for Rae and me to get used to each other. I felt shoved out. Now Rae and I can learn to be friends.

• • •

The Council: Faulty timing is at the bottom of this imbroglio, and Mr. A. was the timekeeper at fault. Steps taken at the right time, the psychological moment, lead on "to fortune," as Shakespeare said, adding that those attempted at the wrong time wind up "in shallows and in miseries." So, with the assurance that there is no real, insurmountable reason why Rae and Claire can't stay under the same roof, let's recap to see what went wrong six months ago and what can now be done to calm the turbulent household.

Mr. A. would have been wiser to wait a little longer before "springing," to use Claire's term, a stranger on her. This stranger, Rae, was to be a replacement not only for her recently deceased mother, but also for herself, as homemaker and housekeeper and companion for Dad. Such a discombobulation for Claire certainly deserved more gradual, more patient preparation by Mr. A.

A few preliminary encounters between the two women, some getting-to-know-you dates might have softened them up toward accepting and adjusting to the inevitable. Each would have realized how important the other was in Mr. A.'s life.

Now that Claire has seen the light, Mr. A. must "explain" her to his new wife. Right or wrong, she felt threatened, scared and resentful. Charge it to the above-mentioned precipitance of her father, to her youth and to her surge of loyalty to her mother. No matter now. Rae must, if she has any feeling for her husband, stay at his side while all three work out this new design.

And Claire, if she really loves her father, will do what she can to cement his marriage, to strengthen the bonds which tie him to a new life's companion. What if Claire should marry? Where would she put her father in case her husband didn't want him around? Mr. A.'s marriage is a break, not a calamity, for her. Neither woman should be so cruel as to ask Mr. A., despite his bungling, to choose between them.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

Question: I'd like to know how invitations to my forthcoming marriage should be worded. My mother is divorced and has remarried. My father is not coming to the wedding and my stepfather will give me away. He married my mother when I was ten and we are very close. My paternal grandmother thinks the invitation should come from my mother alone, but I would like to have it issued from my stepfather, as well. Would this be correct? If so, how should the invitation be worded? — M.E.H., Washington, D.C.

Answer: It would be quite correct for your wedding invitation to be issued both by your mother and stepfather especially since he is taking such an active part in the proceedings. The invitation should read: Mr. and Mrs. John Joseph Jones request the honor of your presence at the marriage of her daughter Mary Margaret Brown, etc.

Question I go to a small beauty shop in my neighborhood. The owner does my hair. Should I tip? I've noticed that some of the other customers do. — A.M., Chicago, Ill.

Answer: The customers may have been giving him tips to relay to the manicurist or hairdresser who served them, but were busy in another part of the shop when they were ready to leave. The owner usually is not tipped, even if he actually does a styling or set.

Question: When leaving a party, is it necessary to say good-night to all the other guests? A friend says I'm rude to "duck out" without at least calling good-night generally, even if I don't go around shaking hands with everyone. Is she right about this? — Mrs. J.J.S., Philadelphia, Pa.

Question: When an unescorted woman guest left our home after a party last week, my husband put her into a cab and she went home alone. A few of our other guests had cars, and I'm sure someone could have given her a lift. Would it be inconsiderate to ask a guest to do a favor of this sort, providing, of course, it did not inconvenience him in any way? — Mrs. H.H.G., Trenton, N.J.

Answer: If a guest can drop off an unescorted woman without driving far out of his way, then it would be proper to ask him to do so. If it couldn't be done conveniently, then a considerate host wouldn't put him on the spot by suggesting it. The only alternative is to put the woman into a cab, as your husband did, or to drive her home, himself, after all the guests had left.

Caches of Empty Cigarette Packages Are All Useless, Symbol of Futile Hoax

By BRUCE LEVETT

TORONTO (CP)—In a farm basement north of Toronto there are thousands of empty cigarette packages.

They are all of one brand and all neatly bundled into packages of 100.

The cache is only one of many throughout the country, representing nearly every brand of cigarette manufactured.

They are all useless — the symbol of one of the most futile, yet most recurring hoaxes in the country.

The packages were collected for two main reasons—to win a seeing - eye dog for a blind girl or as premiums on a wheelchair for a crippled person.

Service clubs across the country have been hoaxed into collecting them as have police departments, air force stations, corner groceries, hospitals, foundries, unions and private citizens.

TRAIL PETERS OUT

Peter Gorman, president of the National Association of Tobacco and Confectionery Distributors, says investigators check into each report but after a short trail each peters out.

Sometimes the misguided collectors have been saving foil, sometimes it's the colored tear-strips from the packages. Mostly it's the packages themselves.

The latest case, which led to the barn north of Toronto, began with a woman's letter to a tobacco firm:

"I am employed by a well-known company as an accountant and was recently approached by a person, popular for his good works, to save empty packages. The reason being that when a quantity of approximately 200,000 were saved the makers would buy a seeing eye dog for a blind girl and send her away to be trained with the dog. . . .

"I had everyone saving them—the employees, salesmen, the local lunch delivery who have a fleet of trucks on the road. Our driver had the other drivers collecting. . .

"The response has been tremendous to put it mildly and I have been taking shopping bags full to my home each evening."

VICIOUS HOAX

The trail led back from the woman through eight other parties before coming to a dead end, Mr. Gorman said.

The woman said she had been told by a man in the personnel department of another manufacturing concern. He had been told by his wife.

The wife had been told by another housewife, who got it from a relative in a radio station.

He got the information from a co - worker, who had been told by a service station operator in Buttonville, Ont. The service station operator had been told by a farmer in the Gormley area, who got it from a woman working for a Toronto transport company.

The transport company woman, but she had left years before and the trail was cold.

"Each person along the line had told others," Mr Gorman said. "It's a vicious hoax, but we can't ever trace it back to where it started."

RCAF TAKEN IN

Despite circulars from the Better Business Bureau, stories in the newspapers and repeated investigations by the tobacco firms, the report that empty cigarette packages are worth collecting keeps springing up.

An RCAF publication in the Maritimes ran a story:

". . . Remember, every 10,000 empty packages not only means a wheelchair for a crippled child, but also the happiness that goes with it."

One man in Sarnia, Ont., collected 15,000 before inquiring where to send them.

A woman in a Niagara Falls, Ont., service club was hard to convince. "I've seen the chair," she said.

"The chair turned out to be the caretaker's family property," Mr. Gorman says.

A service club in Nova Scotia printed in its bulletin:

". . . How long before we can send for our wheelchair?"

They were collecting for 10,000 empty packages.

APPLIED FOR JOB

In April, 1960, most of the town of Maccan, N.S., was smoking one brand and saving the packages. The collection was traced to a man in Amherst, N.S., and the trail died there.

Even the RCMP in Amherst was saving them. A veteran there applied for the job of official collector for Pictou County.

"Hardly a town or city in Canada hasn't had somebody collecting empty packages at one time or another," Mr. Gorman said. "The practice is stamped out for a while, but it starts up again."

Paul O'Neill is the man at the Canadian National Institute for the Blind who deals with the calls which come in almost every day.

"Nobody ever asks us first," he says. "They wait until they've got masses of the stuff, then phone."

One church group even had the Boy Scouts and choir boys going through the pool rooms picking up empty packages that were being saved for them.

"You can imagine what they said when we told the church people there was no market for them," Mr. Gorman said.

Must Learn More About Moon's Surface

MOSCOW (AP)—A Soviet scientist said today additional facts must be learned about the moon's surface before a manned space craft can be landed there successfully.

V. Dyomin wrote in the Echomicheskaya Gazeta (Economic Gazette) that Soviet astronomers have established via radio telescopes that a slag-like porous mass makes up the outer crush and that radio waves prove there is ice on the moon.

But the exact texture of the surface and whether the ice can be converted into drinking water remains to be determined, he said.

Dyomin suggested the lunar sea beds would be the best place for a space craft landing. But he cited one disadvantage: They are far from such interesting posts as the mountains of the moon.

The Soviet Union still holds first place in cosmonautics and engineering, he wrote, but the orbital flight of American John H. Glenn Jr. represented "one more step in exploring the cosmos"

Dyomin said Soviet scientists are making a detailed study of the moon's crust to try to find the best method of affecting a soft landing.

On the Eve of Grand New Cycle

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—I was told that I am on the eve of one of the best nine-year cycles of my entire life:

"When the New Year bells ring out as 1962 is dawning, you will then start on your grand, new cycle. There will be many drastic changes in your life."

Could you tell me what this means? —GOLDIE-SASK.

DEAR GOLDIE:—To me it means the world is up to its old tricks; making drastic changes in people's lives.

A lot can happen in nine years.

Make the most of them!

• • •

DEAR DORIS:—I am a mother 34 years old and take care of ten children, this being a second marriage for my husband and me. My husband had five children and I had four when we married five years ago. We have one little boy four years old by this second marriage.

The children are all good and are like average children. Nine go to school on the bus leaving at 8 a.m., returning at 5 p.m. Then there's supper and homework, which leaves them very little time to help in any way. What should I expect of them?

My two stepdaughters, ages 13 and 14, are my main concern. They seem to be sad and longing for love and I would like so much for them to be happy, that I never reprimand them. My own daughter, whom I scold when needed, resents that, thus causing a conflict.

I asked my husband to talk to them several times when they did not do what was asked, but he did not move or stop reading, so I did not ask him again. He does not help me in any way to bring them up. (Otherwise he is perfect).—WORRIED STEPMOTHER.

DEAR WORRIED:—Start taking charge.

It's part of love, an important part, to reprimand children when they need it.

In my book your husband is far from perfect. He must be made to see that he is a father, as well as a husband. He must act like one. Together you should call a conference. Tell the children they are getting a chance to learn cooking and housekeeping, and give them some choice of tasks. When they do well, reward them with affection and praise.

When they slacken, reprimand equally. Don't think they don't see that you chasten the one you love!

DEAR DORIS:—Our daughter is going steady with a boy whose mother is a cousin to my husband.

If it came to marriage, would it be wrong? I am worried that there might be retardation when she had a family. We try to discourage her from going with this boy. But she likes him a lot.

She went to our family doctor and told him. He said that there is no fear and that such things are common now-a-days. But when I went to a different doctor, he said they were related and should not marry.—MOTHER OF ONE.

DEAR MOTHER OF ONE:—Stop worrying and give them your blessing.

It is only where there is a weakness which might be inherited (tendency to tuberculosis, heart disease, etc.), that doctors have a little concern about close relations marrying. In such a case the strain could be double the threat because it might come down through both descendants from the same grandmother, for instance. (This information is from Canadian experts in genetics.)

Similarly, a superior intelligence on the part of Great-Granny might give you a genius for a grandchild! But your two are only distantly related, anyway.

• • •

DEAR DORIS:—I was married very young and have two daughters. My husband and I could not get along so we got a divorce.

Four years ago I met my present husband. I get along very well with all my in-laws, and they seem to like my daughters very much, except my husband's brother's wife. She is very unsociable towards my daughters and I. She will not even speak to us when we speak to her. It makes our husbands feel very bad. (They are all Catholics.)

I invited her and her husband to my place. He accepted, but she refused. Is there any other way I can get her to like us?—UNSOCIABLE.

DEAR UNSOCIABLE—In the eyes of your husband's sister-in-law, you are living in sin. Canadian law recognizes divorce, but Catholic church law doesn't. Still, it is not up to her to censure you.

Most people of whatever religion have more human sympathy than to carry their prejudice past the bounds of Christian friendliness. She is the loser.

I wouldn't waste any more dinner invitations on her. She may come around herself.

• • •

DEAR DORIS:—My mother 66 years of age is a sugar diabetic patient, requiring a daily insulin injection, which was given by my father who died a few months ago. Since then she is living alone on a wrong diet and substituting pills for insulin.

Me being the only daughter, I asked her to come and live with us, so that I could take care of her, but she refuses. Gangrene has already set in her foot and she will not go to a medical doctor for treatment.

Please advise soon what I should do about it as her foot is in bad shape.—HELPLESS.

DEAR HELPLESS—It's time for action with a capital A. Your mother is sick and no longer has the right to decide her own fate.

Call for the doctor and take him to your mother. Tell her she is now a patient and cannot prescribe for herself. If he urges it, you must then insist on moving her in with you.

And to stiffen your spine, remember that you are the one who will be blamed if anything goes seriously wrong with her where she is.

• • •

DEAR DORIS:—My boy friend refuses to take me to his home. I have asked him several times and all he says is, its just an old house, and I told him if he expected me to live in it, that I had a right to see it. And he asked me if that was important. What do you think?—MISS MARY.

DEAR MISS MARY:—If you mean he is asking you to move into an old house and live with him (and his parents?) without even taking a look at the whole situation, the answer is "no"!

Former Mines Minister Heads Social Credit

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Philip Kelly, at one time minister of mines in the Progressive Conservative government of Leslie Frost, Saturday was elected provincial leader of the Social Credit League.

Mr. Kelly joined the Social Credit party in 1961. He was later nominated to contest the federal riding of Toronto-Broadview, now held by Trade Minister Hees.

He resigned from his provincial government portfolio July 17, 1957, and his seat for Cochrane North the following January. Later, he was the central figure in a legislature storm over stock sales in Northern Ontario Natural Gas Company.

Mr. Kelly said at that time he had resigned when the federal and Ontario governments decided to help finance pipeline construction in Northern Ontario.

Mel Rowat of Elmvale was elected deputy leader at the end of the two - day convention; George S. Mallory of Cayuga was elected president.

National Leader R. N. Thompson told the convention that the defection of Hazen Argue to the Liberals has helped the Social Credit party. He said the move indicates that "the element of free enterprise is all but gone from the Liberal party."

Nightclub on Montreal's Seedy Main Has Got Patrons All Worked up Over Twist

By GERRY McNEIL

MONTREAL (CP) — The Grand Nationale, a nightclub on Montreal's seedy Main, has pulled a neat switch.

Instead of paying dancing girls to titillate the customers, it has got its patrons to assume the role.

Cashing in on the twist, the Grand Nationale has hired a high - decibel Negro band to blast out the beat - dancing customers.

Non - dancing customers sit at tables near the floor — the less self - conscious stand—and stare hard. Few floor shows can match the twist in sex and comedy.

Some twisters look is if they're rowing a boat about to go over Niagara Falls. Others seem to be sawing wood.

It's hard work but everybody seems to like it.

CLEAN FUN

Club owner Solly Silver sees it all as good, clean, money-making fun.

"It reduces their waistlines and helps get rid of the blubber. It makes athletes of the young and old and, besides it helps cure social ills."

The Main, which one judge calls a jungle, is a strip of St. Lawrence Boulevard in east-central Montreal where social ills have reached epidemic proportions. Effective treatment is currently being administered by a task force of police.

Solly claims some credit for the street's recent serenity.

"The twist is helping clean up The Main. We're bringing a new element in here."

NEW YORK IDEA

Solly opened the Grand Nationale last summer, aiming at a lowly clientele and hiring run-of - the - Main waiters able to handle themselves.

Policy changed radically after he visited New York's Peppermint Lounge last fall and discovered the twist. He closed the Grand Nationale for two weeks, renovated it, fired the hard-rock waiters and placed a big Peppermint Lounge sign over the door.

Since it reopened, his club has been the busiest of the nine on The Main.

And while the money comes in, Solly has another reason for satisfaction. He contends he's helping promote physical fitness.

"President Kennedy said the answer to getting more men of military age in shape is such physically demanding and enjoyable athletics. The twist fits that perfectly."

Help, Money Offers Flood Young Mother

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP)—"It's overwhelming," a young mother says of the offers of help and money that have flooded in since the public learned of her 23-mile hike to a hospital to see her baby.

Mrs. Mae Sharon Hayes, 20, didn't have enough money for bus fare to Los Angeles Thursday, so she walked. Newspapers printed the story.

She and her sailor husband, Roland, brought Marguerite Mary, 11 months, home Saturday from White Memorial Hospital where she had been treated for two weeks for an intestinal ailment.

That night an elderly man came to Mrs. Hayes' apartment door, said, "here is a dollar for every mile you walked" and handed her a $20 bill. A group called Helpers Anonymous telegraphed a $100 cheque from Kansas City, Mo.

Bad luck and financial setbacks put the family in debt. Mrs. Hayes had only 40 cents in her pocket when she went to see her baby last week.

Which Party Will Receive Labor Vote?

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—Which party will get the labor vote in the next general election?

The New Democratic Party is confident of marshalling the labor vote on the basis of its constitution which has brought union locals into direct affiliation and financial support of the socialist group.

The Liberals claim they are the traditional friends of labor, in view of their sponsorship of the present federal labor code and much of the original social security legislation on Canada's statute books.

The Conservatives also make the claim they are the traditional friends of labor, dating back to the earliest days of political party divisions in Canada. They contend their electoral sweep in 1958 was based on a large measure of labor support, and that they will be able to retain it.

DOUBT MASS VOTE

Most politicians doubt, however, that there is such a thing as a mass labor vote. One of the features of the coming election will be whether or not the NDP can draw out a solidified labor vote or whether it will continue to be spread among all parties on the basis of the individual inclination of each voter.

A testing time is expected to come in two weeks when labor groups present their annual briefs to the cabinet.

The briefs usually have special emphasis on labor legislation and economic matters of particular concern to the trade unions.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker and his colleagues received their first formal briefs from labor organizations in October, 1957, four months after taking office.

Action has been taken in one form or another since then on all of the major recommendations except one, that there should be a general overhaul of the labor code and a royal commission investigation of methods of settling labor disputes.

Military Aspect of Space Race Worries Soviet Union

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The Soviet Union showed at the United Nations Monday it considers the military aspect important, if not all-important, in its space race with the United States.

The romance of space travel—and the admiration for men who venture into the unknown—has tended so far to obscure the frightening military implications of futuristic projects.

Russia has proceeded with vigor to capitalize on public adulation of its first two space men, Gagarin and Titov, who have undertaken extensive tours. Now that the U.S. has a full-fledged space man, it is doing the same thing.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Valerian Zorin's unusual action in calling a press conference at UN headquarters in New York Monday apparently was designed to link space negotiations to disarmament talks that are scheduled to begin in Geneva in mid-March.

LOGIC SEEN

It seems logical that after the hoopla and wonder of the early space efforts, the long - range ambitions of the great powers will become more apparent.

The London Sunday Telegraph spoke in this vein in this comment:

"Unless the Americans and the Russians can agree not to launch armed satellites, or to attempt the destruction of each other's orbiting spies, military rivalry in space is as certain as anything can be.

"Most promising, at the moment, is the report that the Americans and Russians are thinking of sharing communication satellites to relay pictures of the Tokyo Olympic Games to their television systems."

MENTIONS BOSS

Zorin stressed the importance of the recent cable from Premier Khrushchev to President Kennedy as evidence that the Soviet Union is ready to seek a joint program of exploring space for peaceful purposes and he cited forthcoming talks in a 28-nation UN outer space committee, of which Canada is a member.

External Affairs Minister Green, in addressing the UN General Assembly last October, asked for priority for specific studies to determine, for example, the rules prohibiting military uses and the appropriation of space bodies.

Senator Alfred J. Brooks, vice-chairman of the Canadian delegation, later emphasized the worries of smaller countries when he declared:

"None of our countries can rest easy while nagging concern remains that the earthly rivalry of these two powers, and perhaps of other states, may yet be carried into the infinite reaches of the universe."

It seems clear the feats of Russian and American space men will be a prime topic in the thinking at the disarmament negotiations in Geneva as well as the space talks in New York.

on Canadian soil, particularly for use in the Bomarc missiles and by fighter and interceptor squadrons. But Canadian authorities have remained cool to American overtures, informants said.

"As far as we can make out," one diplomatic source said, "the Canadian government is simply opposed to the placing in Canada of American warheads under present circumstances."

American military sources said it would be possible to ship warheads into Canada when a nuclear war breaks out, but they questioned whether these warheads would be of any use then.

The time to prepare is when there is no war in sight, one authority said. Preparations made after a nuclear war breaks out may be too late.

NDP Executive Wants Election In Assiniboia

REGINA (CP) — The Assiniboia federal New Democratic Party constituency association Monday asked Prime Minister Diefenbaker to call a byelection in that Saskatchewan constituency, now represented by Hazen Argue. The request was made following a meeting of the Assiniboia NDP executive.

Bruce Wilson of Lang, association president, said a telegram also was sent to Mr. Argue, former CCF - NDP parliamentary leader, asking his immediate resignation as MP for Assiniboia.

A nominating convention will be held at Assniboia March 14 to name an NDP candidate to contest the hoped-for byelection. However, if Mr. Argue does not resign, the candidate will contest the seat in the coming federal election.

The telegram to Mr. Argue, who joined the Liberal party Friday reminded him of his agreement with the position taken by the CCF when Ross Thatcher crossed the floor of Parliament that he should resign his seat.

"You strongly condemned Mr. Thatcher for his betrayal of the party which elected him and his failure to face the electors," the telegram said. "Therefore, the executive call on you to resign now."

The telegram challenged him to "face the people of Assiniboia constituency (who) have a right to be represented in the House of Commons by a member who represents the views of the majority of the people. In our view you have no alternative but to follow the democratic procedure of submitting your resignation."

long as the law of the U.S. is as it is at present, joint control is impossible."

"We have stated that until the U.S. makes joint control available we do not intend to go further than we have unless war breaks out at which time we hope to have available to Canadians the necessary nuclear weapons."

Mr. Pearson asked: "How, then, is the prime minister going to ensure that nuclear weapons are in the hands of Canadian forces if war breaks out?"

RULES OUT ANSWER

Speaker Roland Michener at this point ruled out any continuation of the exchange.

Earlier, Mr. Diefenbaker had said "the nuclear family should not be increased so long as there is any possibility of disarmament among the nations of the world."

He added that the matter of "joint control" is hypothetical "and will continue to be so long as disarmament is to the fore."

Responsible authorities interpreted the prime minister's statements to mean:

1. The Bomarc anti - aircraft missiles and jet interceptors in Canada won't be fitted with nuclear warheads in peacetime.

2. Some kind of rapid delivery system has been or will be established to transfer nuclear warheads from the U.S. to the Bomarc bases at North Bay, Ont., and La Macaza, Que., in event of attack on North America. The interceptors could pick up the warheads at American bases.

WOULD BE SLOW

Officials said such a delivery system would be slow if not impractical, mainly because it takes some time to "marry" a Bomarc and a nuclear warhead.

However, it has always been considered likely that Russia could not mount a sudden, surprise attack on North America without Western intelligence sources being able to supply advance warning.

Such strategic warning—as opposed to tactical warning which would be supplied by radar—presumably would provide sufficient time for delivery of nuclear warheads to Canadian bases.

Nuclear storage dumps are located near the bases of the Canadian Infantry Brigade and RCAF Air Division in Europe and competent sources said last week that in event of nuclear war NATO could supply these bases with nuclear warheads in little more than an hour.

After 16 Yrs. of Middle Road Govt. Italy Moving to Left

By FRANK BRUTTO

ROME (AP) — It is called "apertura a sinistra," and it means an opening to the left.

Italy is stepping through that opening, after 16 years of middle road government, in a new collaboration between the ruling Christian Democrat party and the weaker Socialist party.

The Roman Caholic Church, Italy's state religion, shows signs of concern. Italy's Western allies are watching, though they have been assured of continued loyalty to NATO.

For the Christian Democrats and Premier Amintore Fanfani, it is a calculated risk.

SOCIALIST VICTORY

For Pietro Nenni, the grizzled Socialist leader, it is a victory. His political career has involved him in the rise and fall of fascism, Spain's civil war and Italian communism's bid for power. Now he and his Socialist party will have the strongest position they ever held in Italy.

The new government will depend upon Socialist votes for leverage to put across a broad program of social and economic reform. The Socialists have 88 seats in the Chamber of Deputies, where the Christian Democrats' 271 seats are 27 short of a majority.

Fanfani, who has long sought the turn to the left, speaks of a five-year program that includes nationalization of nuclear and electric power.

The Fanfani platform also provides for expansion and improvement of the school system and for tightening up the tax structure.

BEHIND IN REFORMS

Social reforms in some ways have not kept pace with the post-war boom that has given Italy the highest standard of living in its history. The boom has emphasized the spread between the prosperous and the poor.

Nothing has shown this more dramatically than an internal migration—to the north from the improverished south.

Hundreds of thousands of little farm owners and farmhands have deserted their parched acres in Calabria, Apulia, Abruzzi, Campania and Sicily, bundled up their families and gone to Genoa, Milan and Turin.

Fanfani's program aims at meeting the challenge of an age in which a 10-acre farm cannot provide the desired standard of living.

Nenni has pledged his support.

Some are asking "What's in it for Nenni?"

A great deal. He and his party will be able to claim credit in such a program. That will almost certainly be reflected in next year's general elections.

Pope John has pleaded for social reforms and a more even distribution of wealth. It is no secret that the church would prefer to see this accomplished without socialist co-operation but Vatican sources say the church has adopted a wait-and-see attitude.

EVEN WHEN IT HURTS

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a speech broadcast around the world, President Kennedy said Monday the United States wants its affairs presented fully, even when it hurts. The nation is not afraid to reveal itself, its blemishes as well as its good features, Kennedy told 400 officials and employees at a ceremony commemorating the 20th anniversary of the first Voice of American broadcast.

Medical-Care Plan Is Top Debate Theme

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The fact the Saskatchewan government won't commit itself on the launching date of its controversial medical - care plan hasn't kept the plan from becoming top theme of the throne speech debate in the Regina legislature.

Health Minister W. G. Davies, replying Monday to a question from Liberal Leader Ross Thatcher, said only that he expects "before long" to make an announcement of the date.

But Bill Berezowsky (CCF—Cumberland) launched the throne speech debate for the government by calling on the province's doctors to "shed their psychoses" and co - operate with the health insurance plan.

He said the government-operated scheme, opposed by the Saskatchewan College of Physicians and Surgeons, only extends a free cancer - care program begun 18 years ago in the province to "all diseases and ailments which affect our people."

AWAIT INCEPTION

Cliff Thurston (CCF — Lumsden), in seconding the motion in reply to the throne speech, said the majority of Saskatchewan residents are anxiously awaiting the plan's inception.

At Victoria, Attorney - General Robert Bonner told the British Columbia legislature no low - priced stock options were given anyone in financing a firm that build a crude - oil pipeline linking Vancouver with the Peace River oilfields. Opposition members have claimed the firm's principals made huge stock profits from the company.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

You do not have to be a doctor of philosophy to be a successful big league pitcher. All you need is a couple of good pitches and control, stubbornness, confidence, boldness, and a lot of luck.

That is Whitey Ford, ace southpaw of the Yankees, speaking in a piece in the current Satevepost. He says a pitcher needs to help himself—to practice fielding, master bunting, learn sliding and take sensible care of himself. Being with a winning club also helps.

What Ford does not say is that to be a topflight big-time flinger you also need an ace firemen like, say, one Luis Orroyo waiting back there in the bullpen to quell a foeman blaze and add not a few on the winning side of the ledger.

Essentially, Ford says, pitching is this simple. You try to put the ball where you want it—and where—you hope—the batter does not want it. You throw the curve inside, the fast ball outside. You then bring the fast ball inside, send the curve outside. You change speeds. You try not to throw your strikes over the middle of the plate.

Ford says there is a pretence built around pitching. Much is made over the difference between "throwers" and "pitchers." The "throwers" are the dull imaginative type who merely go out there and throw the ball. The "pitchers" are supposed to be those who manage to survive because they can pitch with their heads.

"This is a silly distinction," says Whitey. "The only difference between pitchers and throwers is control. Brains won't necessarily hurt a pitcher but they won't automatically help him either. All winning pitchers are not smart; all losers are not dumb."

"If a pitcher comes up to the majors with a good fast ball, good control and a good curve he has the ideal combination. He doesn't need brains. He has his catcher to tell him what to throw and where to throw it. After giving the pitcher the sign, the catcher will use his mitt as a target—high or low, inside or outside."

Ford says he doesn't believe in the "beanball" or the "spitball." He claims there is a difference between a beanball and a "brushback." The beanball is used to scare batters, the brushback to get them out.

The beanball, intended to make hitters timid, ofttimes makes them better batters. For instance, says Whitey, a pitcher is crazy to knock down Vic Powers. He is far more dangerous when he gets up. The same is true with Maris, Mantle, Brooks Robinson, Sievers. Nellie Fox will spit tobacco juice at a pitcher; that's how frightened he gets.

Ford says he's glad the majors voted against the use of the spitter. "I don't want it in baseball. I've worked hard during my sixteen years on the mound to develop my pitches. Good pitches are not easy to come by or to keep. A kid coming out of high school with a good fast ball and fair control could develop a spitter in a matter of days and become a winning pitcher without ever learning anything else.

The Yankee hurler says he's working to develop a screwball against the day when his fast one slows up and his curve loses part of its break. "I refuse to throw any pitch in a game until I have confidence I can control it."

"I'm known as a pitcher who doesn't finish his games," Whitey says. "Out of thirty-nine starts last season, I completed eleven. Well, I don't believe in pacing myself the way many pitchers do. To me the goal is winning, not finishing. I pitch as hard as I can as long as I can. I work with whatever I have is available. When I feel tired, and the manager has someone else ready, I want to get out of there and have him bring in the fresh man."

"As long as I am on the mound I am the boss," says Ford. "The pitcher, after all, does have the edge on the batter. Only I know what I am throwing, and where I am throwing it. Even when the batter guesses right, he still has to hit the ball. And although he will still get his cheap hits and his good hits, over the long run I figure I will be able to stop him three times out of four."

Mr. Maris Goes To Bat For $72,000

Yanks Payroll $800,000

By JOE REICHLER

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The skyrocketing New York Yankee payroll, highest in the major leagues, reaching unprecedented heights Monday following the signing of Roger Maris to a $72,000 contract for 1962.

With four players earning $50,000 or better and 10 others receiving $20,000 or more, the Yankee payroll is a record $800,000. That represents a $100,000 increase over last year's overall total, give or take a few thousand.

The mighty Maris, who hit 61 home runs in 1961 for a one-season major league high, received a 96-per-cent increase.

LED IN RBIs

He was paid $37,500 last year, when he led the American League with 142 runs batted in and was voted the most valuable player for the second straight time.

The 28-year-old left-handed slugger becomes the fourth-highest salaried player in Yankee history.

Joe DiMaggio drew $100,000 a season in 1950 and 1951, Babe Ruth was paid $80,000 a year in 1930 and 1931, and Mickey Mantle reportedly is getting $82,000 this season.

"This easily is the largest payroll in the history of the Yankee organization, or that of any other organization for that matter," said Roy Hamey, Yankees' general manager.

Talking to reporters after he signed, Maris wouldn't predict how many home runs he will collect this season.

"I'll take them as they come," he said. "I don't believe in counting my chickens before they are hatched. I'll keep swinging the same way, hoping I won't bite at as many bad pitches as I did last year."

HAD LOW AVERAGE

Maris batted only .269 last year, which prompted some to scoff at his long-ball accomplishments.

"They called me the lousiest hitter ever to win the home run title," he said.

"Well, I don't mind being the lousiest hitter in baseball if I can hit 61 home runs again. As long as I'm good in all the other departments, I'll sacrifice my batting average."

Hamey said Maris received "an exceptional raise," only partially because he broke the home run record.

"Maris had an outstanding season in more ways than in just hitting home runs," Hamey said.

"He won games for us not only with his bat but with his fielding, his excelint throwing arm and his good speed. He's what I call a complete ballplayer He can do everything and do it well."

PEIRSALL SIGNS

Other signings Monday included fiery Jim Piersall, for a reported $45,000 with Washington Senators, first baseman Joe Adcock and right-hand pitcher Bob Buhl with Milwaukee Braves, infielder Billy Goodman with Chicago White Sox and outfielder Whitey Herzog with Baltimore Orioles.

Piersall's contract represents about a $10,000 increase over the salary he drew last season with Cleveland Indians, when he hit .322.

The $45,000 is a record for the Senators.

Player Control Needed

Time For Minor Shake-Up!

By GARRY ALEXANDER
(Staff Writer)

It's about time for a house cleaning in the Belleville Minor Hockey Association.

If capable, responsible men cannot be found to handle midget and juvenile age hockey players, these upper classes of the BMHA should be discontinued.

I don't know how many parents of the players concerned were in attendance at Memorial Arena Saturday last when the Belleville-Kingston midget game ended in a fight and the juvenile game that followed was just one long brawl from start to finish.

If a boy of mine had been involved in the juvenile game, I would have taken him out of the arena after the first five minutes of play and he would never again have put on a pair of skates for BMHA play.

I am not placing all the blame on the coaches, conveners and managers. A boy who has reached juvenile age should have better sense than to deliberately go out to try and maim an opposing player and to shove referees around while cursing them and calling them dirty names.

However, it's still the men in charge who are responsible for these boys. The coaches are the ones who have taught them to "win at any cost".

It was an official of the BMHA who leaned over this reporter's shoulder mid-way through the juvenile game Saturday and said, "I would like to suggest that the referees have let this game get out of hand".

Naturally, it could not be "our boys" who were in the wrong, but rather the referees. In this case the referees were Gord Gregory of Belleville and Gord Lowe, a police officer from Kingston.

In our opinion, the only mistake these two gentlemen made was not to halt the game after the first five minutes of play and to report both clubs to the OMHA. Kingston players were far from guiltless but it was still the Belleville team that drew 83 minutes in penalties, including a match penalty, two game misconducts and several misconducts, not to mention majors and minors.

Both the midget and juvenile teams from this centre were down a number of goals (8-1 in midget and 6-1 in juvenile) before the games started Saturday.

Yet, in the juvenile game at least, the local kids could not have cared less about trying to overcome the deficit. They were more concerned with "showing those Kingston guys" how tough they were, since they felt that they could not win the game anyway.

Do any of their superiors ever mention a thing called "sportsmanship" to these players?

Saturday's bantam game was a pleasure to watch. Although Kingston had a much better club, the teams concentrated on hockey with passing and shooting their main concerns, rather than slashing, fighting and swearing.

Apparently the younger players, most at least, still get a bigger kick out of putting a puck in the net than they do out of putting an opponent in the hospital.

But of course, that will likely change when the kids advance a group or two and some coach tells them how important it is to win if they want to play on his club.

Minor hockey has done a lot for Belleville children.

It's a shame that when they get past the bantam age, all the good work accomplished earlier goes down the drain.

Clean Fast Game

Peewees Tie Kingston, Lose Round,

Belleville Peewee All-Stars battled back from a 3-0 first period deficit in Kingston last night to earn a 5-5 tie with the Kingston club in OMHA playdowns.

Despite the gallant bid for victory, the Belleville squad was eliminated on round by a 10-8 score, having lost the first game 5-3 here last week.

The game was fast and cleanly played with Belleville picking up four minor penalties and Kingston three.

After dropping behind 3-0 in the first period, Belleville scored the only two goals in the middle heat to make it 3-2, L. Moore and D. Loder firing the markers.

Holgate's goal tied it early in the third but Kingston came back with two goals in a row, by Gove at 2.16 and by Douglas at 4.03, to pull in front again 5-3.

Belleville fought back gamely, with goals by Goodfellow and Moore, to tie the game but were unable to overcome the first-game deficit.

Larry Moore scored two Belleville goals and helped on another to spearhead the attack. Paul Goodfellow, John Holgate and Dave Loder each had one goal and one assist, while Tom Boulter had two assists and Pete Bishop one.

Howe Drops To Third

Bathgate Retains Six-Point Lead

MONTREAL (CP) — Andy Bathgate of New York Rangers holds a six-point lead atop the National Hockey League individual scoring race as he did a week ago. But there is a new figure in the runner-up position.

It is Bobby Hull, the golden jet of Chicago Black Hawks, collecting points at an impressive rate since mid-January.

Official league statistics released today show Hull raised his points total to 70 with four goals and three assists last week, ousting Gordie Howe of Detroit Red Wings from second spot.

Bathgate got one goal and three assists and now has 76 points.

New York right winger leads in assists with 52 while Hull has the most goals, 39.

Both Rangers and Hawks have 10 more games to play before the regular 70-game schedule ends March 25.

Howe had a bad week, getting only one assist, and slipped into a tie for third place with Stan Mikita of the Black Hawks. Each has 67 points.

HAD BEST WEEK

Mikita topped all point-getters last week, scoring two goals and drawing assists on six others. He has a 22-45 slate while Howe's total includes 28 goals.

Frank Mahovlich of Toronto Maple Leafs scored his 30th goal and collected two assists to retain fifth spot with 60 points.

Jacques Plante of Montreal still holds a commanding lead in the race for the Vezina Trophy—awarded to the goalie who plays the most games for the team that allows the fewest goals.

After 58 games, Plante's goals-against average is 2.29. Glenn Hall of Chicago has the second best mark, 2.55 in 60 starts.

Hall leads in shutouts with eight.

Chicago continues as the most penalized club with 711 minutes while defenceman Lou Fontinato of Canadiens, inactive last week because of a groin injury, still is the most penalized player with 161 minutes.

Petes Shade Macs 7-5

By GARRY ALEXANDER

PETERBOROUGH — After blowing the lead four times in regulation play, the Peterborough Monsens scored twice in overtime here last night to defeat the Belleville McFarlands 7-5 in OHA Eastern Junior "B" round-robin playoffs.

The Macs still lead the home-and-home round robin series with two wins and one loss. They finish up their part of the series aganist the Kingston Frontenacs here Friday night at nine o'clock.

Peterborough just kept plugging away against the Macs last night and took advantage of glaring mistakes in front of the locals' net to score at least three of their goals. It was Peterborough's first win over the Macs in eight games this year.

The Monsens twice led in the first period but it ended tied 2-2. After Peterborough went ahead again 3-2 midway through the second, the Macs came back to lead 4-3 at the end of the period. The Monsens tied it and went ahead again 5-4 in the third before Larry Mavety scored with little over a minute left to play to send it into overtime tied 5-5.

At 5.03 of the ten-minute overtime period, two Monsens broke in on one Belleville defenceman. The Mac player tried to clear the puck with his skates but failed and Paul LeBarr took Pete Morris' pass to flick home the winning marker. Two minutes later Larry Thompson rapped Hill's rebound into the net to wrap up the victory.

Paul LeBarr and Pete Morris each scored twice for the winners and also had an assist apiece. Gary Dalliday had one goal and 3 assists and Larry Hill a goal and two helpers. Thompson's goal and assists by Jeff Nichols and Brian Taylor completed their scoring.

Dave Smith scored Belleville's first two goals, banging in Hunter's passout on the first and deflecting in Reid's blueline shot on the second. Bobby Boyle, Pug Kellar and Larry Mavety also scored with Gary Reid and Moe Hunter drawing two assists, Pete Weston, Smith, Boyle and Gary Duvall one apiece.

Belleville drew eight minor penalties as well as a misconduct and a game misconduct to Gary Hull for arguing too long over a minor sentence. The winers had just four minors. Each club scored twice with a man advantage.

Goalies Jim Horton and Gord Parker both came up with a number of fine stops despite the 12 goals that were scored. Action was fast throughout with both teams playing the puck, rather than the man, most of the time.

The Monsens and Frontenacs meet each other in Kingston Wednesday night and back in Peterborough next Monday, but the Macs must win Friday night's game here to be positive of a berth in the group finals.

World Tournament Main Bout!

Bob LeBel Versus 'Bunny' Ahearne!

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor

Whether or not Russia and the other Iron Curtain countries make the world amateur hockey championships next month, things won't be dull when the tournament gets off the ground. The boys in the back room are getting frayed tempers.

Two of them have been snarling at each other for months and now another—Jack Roxburgh, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association—has joined in.

No one is neutral.

The main-eventers are John Francis (Bunny) Ahearne, Dublin-born travel agent who, as European representative of the CAHA, has been bamboozling Canadian officials for years, and Bob LeBel of Chambly, Que., fiery French-Canadian who doesn't hesitate to speak his mind.

Ahearne has been exchanging insults and, at one time, fists with hockey people for years. He's European president of the International Ice Hockey Federation and people often have wondered who is running the outfit, Ahearne or International president LeBel.

An educated guess would be Ahearne.

He has been tied with the IIHF for years and knows all the angles. He has called meetings in Europe in the last few months and LeBel has read about them in the newspapers. He came to North America to transact IIHF business and, he claims, he sold the television rights in North America for the tournament.

This sort of stuff doesn't sit well with LeBel, who certainly will clash head-on with Bunny at Colorado Springs.

And Roxburgh. He rapped LeBel for the statement he made the other day saying the IIHF "always has room for repentant people" — meaning, of course, the Russians, Czechs, Yugoslavs and Romanians who withdrew from the tournament when the West Berlin travel bureau refused to issue permits to the East German team.

"That was an uncalled-for statement, and I have a right to say it because I'm a director of the IIHF," Roxburgh said. "I don't know who is repentant, and myself and the CAHA are upset about that remark."

LeBel didn't waste any time in reply.

I think I have just as much right as Mr. Roxburgh to express an opinion on the situation," he said. "If he doesn't like what I have to say, it's too bad . . ."

Ahearne certainly is hockey's bad boy.

Since the pre-Second World War years he has arranged Canadian hockey tours of Europe. As a travel agent, he naturally arranges transportation and gets a commission. His sister at one time owned a ramshackle hotel in London and the Canadians stayed there.

He has put the heat on European hockey federations to arrange exhibition games with Canadian teams and today Bunny is fairly well off.

But he lost one fight. That was in the lobby of an Oslo hotel in 1952 when he traded punches with the late Doug Grimston of New Westminster, B.C. Grimston belted him pretty good and vowed he would have Ahearne bounced as European representative of the CAHA

Bunny travelled to Canada the next spring for the CAHA annual meeting and somehow or other swung delegates to his side. The full story probably never will be told, but Ahearne must have done some high-pressure talking.

Now, the stage is set for another go at Colorado Springs.

The hockey probably will be as interesting as an afternoon tea party without the Russians and Czechs. Maybe they should forget the hockey and hold the IIHF meetings at centre ice.

That would be quite an attraction.

Japanese Puckists Win 8-4

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. Japan's National hockey team opened its North American tour on a winning note Monday night by defeating New Westminster junior Royals 8-4 before 2,200 fans.

The Japanese team is en route to the world championships, which open in Colorado Springs, Col., March 7.

The visitors showed a better knowledge of the fundamentals of the game than in their last visit here in 1960 as they outskated the junior club from the opening whistle.

Forward Shinichi Homna paced the Japanese team with three goals. Koji Iwamota and M[illegible]hiro Sato each scored twice. Ikio Ito added a single.

Norm Conally, Don McCall, Bob McKean and John Poweska scored for New Westminster.

The Royals held the visitors to a 2-2 tie in the first period, but Iwamoto and Homna scored goals a minute apart early in the second to put the Japanese ahead to stay. The Japanese held a 6-3 lead after the second period and outscored New Westminster 2-1 in the final.

The Japanese play in Chilliwack, B.C., tonight then travel to Nanaimo, B.C., Victoria and wind up the tour in Portland, Ore., before heading for Colorado Springs.

Grid Loops Continue 'Jaw Game'

BALTIMORE (AP)—A play-by-play account of the formation of the American Football League was to continue in United States district court today as the AFL's $10,000,000 anti-trust suit against the National Football League resumed.

Lamar Hunt, founder of the AFL, and owner of the league's Dallas Texans, testified more than four hours on the first day of the trial Monday. He gave a detailed account of the steps he took to organize the league after failing to obtain an NFL franchise.

The AFL was formally organized Aug. 22, 1959, Hunt said, a week before George Halas of the NFL's expansion committee said the NFL would move into the Texas cities of Dallas and Houston in 1961.

Houston never joined the NFL but Dallas Cowboys were added in 1960, the same year the AFL came into being. Both Dallas teams have operated at a deficit during the two years they have been in existence.

The anti-trust suit accuses the NFL of monopolizing professional football and contends the move to Dallas was made to help undermine the AFL.

Gerhard A. Gesell, counsel for the NFL, said the NFL expansion was not sudden. He said action toward possible expansion into Dallas, Houston and Minneapolis was taken "before the American Football League was even a dream."

Gesell said there was no concerted effort to injure the AFL. "They did it to themselves by running into established plans.

Five-Way Battle for AHL Lead

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Sweeney and Brian Kilrea of Springfield, Buffalo's Barry and Brian Cullen and Willie Marshall of Hershey are in a five-way battle for the scoring championship of the American Hockey League as the regular season heads into its final month.

Sweeney held the lead through games of last Saturday with 83 points on 29 goals and 54 assists. Kilrea is second. He added eight points last week and trails Sweeney by four. Kilrea displaced Barry Cullen, third with 78 points. Marshall, with 73, and Brian Cullen, with 72, are also in the fight.

Barry Cullen leads in goals scored with 37 and Kilrea's 60 assists are tops in that department. Springfield's Marcel Pa[illegible] has the lowest goaltending average, 2.67 in 36 games.

RACES CANCELLED

LINCOLN, R.I. (AP)—A frozen track Monday cancelled all racing at Lincoln Downs until Wednesday. One horse in a morning workout slipped, broke a leg and had to be destroyed. After a six-day delay the track opened for the season last Saturday, despite snow, sleet and rain.

Indian Peewees in Top Game

QUEBEC (CP)—A clash today between Quebec Indians and a Donnacona, Que., team promises to be the game of the week in the Quebec international peewee hockey tournament.

The Indians, made up of youths from various northeastern Quebec reservations, trounced St.-Georges-de-Beauce 11-0 Monday and Donnacona scored a 10-0 victory over Lac Megantic, Que.

Thirty-eight of the 54 teams registered in the tournament are still in the running, with squads from Alberta, the United States and Ontario yet to play. The tournament ends Saturday.

An Indian team from the Six-Nations reserve at Brantford, Ont., will play today. A team from Rockland, Ont., is also slated to take the ice.

Women's Curling Championships

Four Rinks Are Unbeaten

By SCOTT SCHILL

REGINA (CP)—A rink from the town of Mount Royal, Que., faced stiff competition today to retain its unbeaten status in the Canadian women's curling championships.

The rink, skipped by Anne Philips, dropped Prince Edward Island 10-4 in the opening round Monday, then squeezed past Ontario's Fern Irwin 8-7 in an extra end in the second draw.

In the three rounds today, however, the Philips rink was to meet Alberta, Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

Manitoba's Kathleen Hebert and Saskatchewan's Joyce McKee, both rated top contenders, have 2-0 records. Vera Reed of Calgary was almost knocked out of serious contention for the title, losing 10-9 to British Columbia in the first round and bowing to Saskatchewan in the second round 11-2.

Ina Hansen of Kimberley, B.C., also remained undefeated in first-day play, beating New Brunswick 10-7 in the second round.

SHOWS POWER

Manitoba showed its power, dropping Newfoundland 12-5 in the first round and running up a 15-4 score over Nova Scotia in the second.

Saskatchewan, despite having two three-enders scored against it, beat Ontario 12-8 in the first round.

Newfoundland scored its first win in the second round by defeating Prince Edward Island Island 10-5. New Brunswick won its first start 9-7 over Nova Scotia with an extra end.

Ontario nearly won its game against Quebec in the 10th end. With last rock and facing her own shot rock and Mrs. Philips' second shot, both open, Mrs. Irwin missed a takeout by more than a foot. She counted one to tie it, but missed the win.

In the extra end. Mrs. Philips was forced to take out the shot Ontario rock and stay in the four-foot ring. She made the shot perfectly.

The undefeated rinks were certain to thin today. On the morning draw B.C. met Manitoba. On the afternoon draw Quebec was to meet Saskatchewan.

Concentration Pays

Kenora Rink in Finals

By KEN CLARK

KENORA, Ont. (CP)—A no-nonsense rink which frowns on conversation or compliments during a game carries Northern Ontario hopes into the Canadian curling championships at Kitchener March 5.

Members of the veteran Kenora Rink, skipped by Ron (Doc) Redding, a 28-year-old pipefitter's helper, have found that concentration pays off in victories.

During a game they scarcely talk to each other and hardly ever to the opposition. If one of them smiles, it's a rarity.

"All we think about is the game," lanky third Jack Kostick, 29, said in an interview. "If you start thinking about anything else you don't win many."

WON'T APPLAUD

An exceptional shot by one man doesn't even draw an appreciative grunt from the others.

More likely in this event is a terse comment from the rink's dour, 31-year-old second, Alan (Punch) Hansen, warning the man who made the shot to "get cut in."

This is the team's vernacular for "don't get a swellid head, just settle down and make the next one."

"You don't get any compliments on this rink," said Kostick, a six-foot, six-inch paper mill order clerk.

Lead Gordon (Pete) Peterson, 41, the oldest man on the rink, occasionally says a few words to the opposition. "The rest of us don't say anything to them," Kostick said.

Redding as skip calls the shots with an icy calm developed through 14 years of competition.

Kostick, who has curled with Redding for nearly a decade, said the partly-bald skip has "never shown any sign that the pressure was getting him."

Led by Redding, the rink won 20 and lost one in playoffs leading to the Northern Ontario title.

Lead Series 2-1

Maroons Blast Rockets

STRATHROY, Ont. (CP)—George Aitken and Bob Pole both scored four goals Monday night as Chatham Maroons trounced Strathroy Rockets 13-2 in the third game of a Ontario Hockey Association Senior quarter-final playoff here.

Maroons now lead the best-of-seven series 2-1.

The Rockets put on a brief show of resistance in the first period. After trailing 3-0 on two goals by Aitken and one by Earl Towers, Strathroy fired in two quick ones. Bob Geddes scored and 53 seconds later Art Sullivan got another.

Maroons, however, soon put out Rockets' fire. By the end of the first period, Tom Clark made it 4-2. Chatham scored three more in the second period and six more in the third.

Clark and Towers each scored two. Dave Luciak had a single.

European Champ May Meet Ingy

LONDON (AP)—The manager of European heavyweight boxing champion Dick Richardson said Monday it is "almost certain" his fighter will defend his title against former world heavyweight champion Ingemar Johansson of Sweden in Goteborg, Sweden, in May.

Richardson retained his European crown with a first-round knockout of German challenger Karl Mildenberger in Dortmund Saturday.

"I am meeting Eddie Ahlquist, Johansson's adviser, to talk over the question of terms and date for a Johansson-Richardson fight," manager Wally Lesley said. "I see no serious obstacles to the match."

Johnsson, now rated the sixth challenger for Floyd Patterson's world title, scored a seventh-round technical knockout over Jamaican Joe Bygraves in Goteborg Feb. 9.

That fight was Johansson's first excursion in the ring since losing to Patterson in their world title bout last March.

Pro Career Lasted 14 Seconds

NEW YORK (AP) — Joseph (Ace) Falu was a professional boxer only 14 seconds.

His pro career started and ended in St. Nicholas Arena Monday night when he was knocked out by Norman Cassaberry of Brooklyn N.Y., in 14 seconds of the first round of a scheduled four-round preliminary.

Not since St. Nick's opened its doors in 1902 has a fighter gone down faster than that.

As the bell rang, Falu, 22, a Puerto Rican middleweight, walked to the middle of the ring and put his glove out to shake Cassaberry's hand.

Wham.

Cassaberry fired a left-right combination to Ace's chin and down he went. Referee George Coyle tolled up to seven and Ace staggered to his feet. Coyle took one look at him and pronounced Cassaberry the winner.

"All I wanted to do was shake hands with the other guy," Falu said. "I held my gloves out and that's the last I remember."

"You don't shake hands in the pros at the start," said his handler, Jimmy Glenn.

Falu said he had hoped to have "maybe 15 or 20 fights then buy a grocery store."

"I didn't want to be a champion. I'm a businessman."

RECALL EDWARDS

PORTLAND (AP) — Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League recalled goalie Roy Edwards from Portland Buckaroos Monday. Edwards left to join Sault Ste. Marie Thunderbirds of the Eastern Professional League. Edwards filled in on the Western Hockey League club several games for regular goalie Don Head, who is recovering from an injury.

Tessier Ups Lead In EPL

OTTAWA (CP)—Orval Tessier of Kingston Frontenacs increased his Eastern Professional Hockey League scoring leadership to seven points over teammate Tom McCarthy last week.

League statistics released today show Tessier with 89 points on 42 goals and 47 assists. His showing in three games was one goal and three assists.

McCarthy assisted on one goal to raise his total to 82 on 47 goals and 35 assists.

Milan Marcetta of Sault Ste. Thunderbirds had a big week with five goals and one assist. He is third in the standings with 30 goals and 36 assists.

Fred Hilts of Hull-Ottawa Canadiens is fourth with 63, followed by Bob Attersley of Kingston with 62 and Len Ronson of Kitchener-Waterloo Beavers with 60.

Others in the top 10 are Bill Carter of Canadiens with 58, Merv, Kuryluck of Thunderbirds and Mel Pearson of Beavers with 54 each, and Harry Sinden of Kingston with 53.

In his three games, Hull goaltender Cesare Maniago allowed five goals and scored his second shutout of the season to remain the league's top netminder with an average of 2.54 markers a game. Jack McCartan of Kitchener-Waterloo is second with 3.03.

Reno Bobazza of Thunderbirds continues to be the league's badman with 171 minutes in the penalty box while Sudbury Wolves are the most penalized club with 876 minutes.

Hotspurs Whip Czechs By 4-2 Total

LONDON (Reuters) — Tottenham Hotspur, English League champions and cup holders, outclasses Dukla of Prague 4-1 Monday night on a snowclad field to reach the semi-finals of the European Soccer Cup.

Tottenham reached the semi-finals on a 4-2 total-goals score for the two game series. Dukla won the first game 1-0 in Prague 10 days ago.

In Monday night's game Dukla was unable to adapt to the difficult conditions and was frequently defending desperately against Tottenham's inspired play.

On the coldest and snowiest February day in London for six years, a capacity crowd of more than 60,000 jammed White Hart Lane Stadium to see the contest.

After nine minutes, Bobby Smith, former England centre-forward, hooked in a free kick from his captain, Irish international Danny Blanchflower, to even the aggregate score. Five minutes later Scottish wing-half Dave Mackay scored to give Spurs the over-all lead.

Before Dukla had time to recover, Mackay was through again, scoring from close in to make it 4-1.

Trenton RCAF Flyers climbed into a tie with Crawford Metals for second place in the Bay of Quinte Basketball league last night by defeating the Belleville Lightfoots 63-51.

The Flyers, commanding the rebounds at both ends of the court, took a 30-19 lead at half time and were never headed thereafter. Lightfoots had held a slim lead in the opening minutes of the game.

"Doc" Gazo sparked the RCAF scorers with a 25-point performance while Mahoruc was the only other winner to hit double figures, getting ten points. McNichol hooped nine.

Pepsi's Whip Kingston

KINGSTON — The Belleville Pepsi's rolled to their second straight playoffs victory here last night defeating the Kingston Automats 8-2 in a closer game than the score indicates.

The game was the second of the OHA intermediate "A" round-robin playdowns between the Pepsi's, Kingston and Lindsay.

A four-goal splurge in the third period after Kingston had cut the Belleville margin to 4-2 wrapped up the win for the Pepsi's.

They grabbed a 3-1 first period lead and in a close-checking second period, scored the only goal of the frame with the Kingston defence doing an outstanding job.

Davy Jones marked his return from the "flu" with a hat-trick effort, adding an assist to the three markers. Eddie Marineau had himself a good night scoring twice and getting as many helpers.

"Wiener" Brown was back in action adding four points to his total with a goal and three assists. "Shaker" Baker had a goal and two helpers with Ron Hull also scoring. Botly, Goyer and Crawford had assists.

Veteran Clint Tinkess scored two of the Kingston goals with Vallier collecting two assists and Ford one.

The game was featured by a half-dozen breakaways by the winners, Jones scoring on two occasions and Brown once.

The Pepsi's fired home unanswered goals, two of them by Jones and Marineau before Tinkess broke the scoring ice for the homesters in the opening period. Hull got the only marker of the second frame.

Tinkess scored again after 1.07 of the third period but Jones got that back six minutes later. Baker scored at 8.30 and Jones third goal at 14.35 put the victory in the bag.

The game was cleanly played with Kingston drawing six of the eight minors handed out by the referee.

Kingston provide the opposition here tomorrow night when they meet the Pepsi's in the second of the home-and-home round robin series.

"Don't let last night's score fool you" Pepsi coach Jean Paul Lamirande said after the game. "This Kingston club is tough and they will give the Lindsay team a hard battle."

Canada Concurred In Puck Ban

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian government concurred in the decision which has prevented East German athletes from travelling to international sports affairs outside the Iron Curtain, Prime Minister Diefenbaker informed the Commons Monday.

The decision by Allied control authorities was the result of the building of the Communist wall in Berlin which ended freedom of traffic, he said in reply to a question by Harold Winch (CCF—Vancouver East).

Travel permits for East Germans were restricted to certain categories, mostly on compassionate grounds.

The question and answer did not refer directly to the dispute over the denial of travel permits to the East German hockey team to participate in next month's world hockey tournament in the United States.

Mr. Diefenbaker said he hopes an announcement will be made soon about Canada's bid for the 1968 winter Olympics. He hoped there would be progress in the next six years to eliminate the travel difficulties.

PRESTON CLOSE VICTOR

MANCHESTER (Reuters) — After five hours of sternly-contested play, Preston North End beat Liverpool 1-0 here Monday night in their fifth-round second replay in the English Football Association Cup. The teams played scoreless ties in their first two games and the only goal in their clashes, which included 30 minutes overtime in the second match, came Monday night in the 266th minute. Preston winger Peter Thompson got it. Preston now has a home game with Manchester United in the sixth round March 10.

TRAIL, B.C. (CP)—The exhausted Galt Terriers arrived in Trail Smoke Eaters' territory early Monday, gabbed a few hours sleep and took to the ice for an hour's workout in preparation for their meet with the 1961 world champions tonight.

The Terriers, Canadian hockey representatives to the world tournament in Colorado Springs this year, expect their toughest competition and will be going all-out to win.

Coach Bobby Kromm of the Smokies, who plays in the Western International League, said: "We realize this is a must game and the whole club will be going for a full 60 minutes."

PREMIER, ACTRESS CHAT — Premier Stanfield of Nova Scotia discusses careers with Halifax actress Valerie Colgan, home after three years of study at London's Academy of Music and Dramatic Art and a stint on the stage. The 25-year-old actress was described as the outstanding Canadian in the London school. (CP Photo).

Actress Offers Some Advice To Young People Seeking A Career in the Theatre

By FRANK SULLIVAN

HALIFAX (CP)—A 25-year-old Halifax actress who earned a reputation in London as a power on and off the stage has some advice for other young people seeking a career in the theatre.

"They should not be afraid; they will find some place in the theatre somewhere," says Valerie Colgan, who has returned after three years' study at the London Academy of Music and Dramatic Art and a stint on the professional stage.

"If you love theatre you love doing anything that can be of use to it, even when it means not acting. Theatre is more than acting. It's a way of life that has to be learned."

Miss Colgan says competition is "ferocious," especially in England where more than half the 10,000 actors are out of work at any given time. But the reward is a "deeper understanding of the human heart and mind which is your art."

SEEKS PERFECTION

The sensitive, brown - eyed actress is a perfectionist who feels she will never quite be satisfied.

Following studies at the academy she played in a 30-week run of Minos Volanarkis's production of Orestia of Aeschylus, a Greek tetralogy performed at the Oxford Theatre and London's Old Vic.

Her last job in London was as stage manager for Nicki Stuart Gray's The Marvellous Story of Puss - in - Boots, produced at the Theatre Workshop in Stratford East.

Michael MacOwan, principal of the academy, has said:

"Miss Colgan is one of the most interesting actresses we have had here since I became principal five years ago and certainly the most outstanding Canadian actress we have had in the school."

He says she possesses talent, enthusiasm, tremendous capacity to learn and looks. "I think she is at the stage now where Dame Sybil Thorndike must have been at her age."

Valerie began acting at 10 Roles in children's productions were followed by parts in high school and college plays.

NEEDN'T BE PRETTY

She feels London is the "mecca of acting" but admits it is difficult to start there. For an interested person the first step might be to consult the drama adviser of the nearest education department branch. He could arrange introductions to amateur drama groups and workshops where one could gain basic theatrical knowledge.

Drama school was the next stop. "A drama school teaches you how to take direction and how to go on learning the rest of your life."

She doesn't think it's essential to be physically attractive. "It doesn't matter if you're pretty because if you act somebody that is beautiful you begin to look beautiful. Everyone has a beauty in her soul and it comes through."

Although students may have to live within limited means at drama school, it's only a taste of what's to come. There will be long periods of looking for work and many disappointments "but I don't think a person could make a happy life for himself in theatre if he went into it for any other reason than that he couldn't possibly do anything else."

Home now because of family illness, Valerie isn't sure she'll return to London. She would like eventually to find a place in Canadian theatre.

5 Canadians On Yankee World Team

NEW YORK (CP)—Five Canadians will be in the lineup when the United States national hockey team takes the ice in next month's world hockey championships at Colorado Springs, Colo.

Four of them are top players in the amateur Eastern Hockey League. The fifth, 31-year-old Ken Johannson of Edmonton, has played with Rochester, Minn., Vikings of the U.S. Hockey League for the last five seasons and has regularly been at or near the top of the league in scoring.

Another veteran of the game who will be wearing U.S. colors is Don Hall, also 31 and a native of Toronto. He has been with Johnstown (Pa.) Jets of the EHL for the last eight years and has scored the highest number of points in league history.

The other Canadians are forwards Roger Roberge from Rosthern, Sask., Reg Meserve of New Liskeard, Ont., and defenceman Brian (Butch) MacKay from Montreal.

Roberge, 26, also has been a high scorer with Johnstown. He amassed 117 points in the 159-60 season and 100 last year.

Meserve, 27, joined Philadelphia Ramblers last season and scored 62 points. MacKay, 29, played with Troy, N.Y., and Cincinnati of the International Hockey League before moving to the Greensboro, N.C., Generals three seasons ago.

Rheinhardt Film

"Town Without Pity," now showing at the Park Theatre, starring Kirk Douglas, was produced and directed by Gottfriend Reinhardt, distinguished international film-maker and son of the late Max Reinhardt. United Artists is releasing this stark drama of what four men did to a girl and what the town did to all of them!

At one time assistant to the great Ernst Lubitsch, Reinhardt was a writer (story for "The Great Waltz") and then producer of many fine Hollywood films including "Comrade X", "Rage in Heaven," "Command Decision" and "The Red Badge of Courage."

Reinhardt filmed "Town Without Pity" entirely on location in France, Germany and Austria, featuring German star Christine Kaufmann as the teenage girl who is assaulted. Other European actors were also employed by Mr. Reinhardt.

On the same program a murder mystery "When The Clock Strikes" stars James Brown and Merry Anders.

Sports Snapshots

By BOB TRIMBEE

EDMONTON (CP) — On the field Canadian football has reached big league status, but the men who operate the nine clubs had better follow suit or suffer the consequences, says Ken Montgomery.

Montgomery, president of Edmonton Eskimos of the Western Football Conference from 1952 to 1954 and a long - time executive of the old Western Interprovincial Football Union, said in an interview:

"The executives have got to begin working together for the salvation of the game. Clubs must put aside selfish interests and concede a little here and there for the betterment of the league as a whole.

"It's obvious when I read the financial statements published by many teams that they are gradually going broke and using up reserves.

"If one or two teams fold the game will deteriorate to a level far below what we had 10 years ago."

URGES SALARY LIMIT

Montgomery, general manager of a finance company in Edmonton, listed seven points to improve the financial structure of clubs:

1. A players' salary limit.
2. Pooling of all radio and television revenues.
3. A players' pension scheme.
4. Unlimited imports.
5. Radio and television blackouts.
6. Fewer paid executive personnel.
7. A 60-40 gate split with more games played during the week.

Montgomery, president of the Canadian Rugby Union in 1955 and of the WIFU in 1957, retired from the Eskimos' directorate two seasons ago.

He said a team limit for players' salaries would not stop a club from signing big - name imports.

"Rather it would cut out the ridiculous amounts paid to players, many of them Canadians and Canadian - Americans, who get much more than they are worth simply because of current import rules.

"Together with an unlimited import rule it would throw all jobs on a club to wide - open competition. No one would sit on the bench unless he earned the spot.

"I don't think we'd ever have to worry about Canadian players because the good ones, the ones that help a team, can stand up to the challenge of the imports. In fact, I believe it would lift the calibre of Canadian players."

Establishment of a pension plan will give "our game more security from tht players' security from the players'

"Americans might not demand such high salaries. Today it's a case of make hay while the sun shines, but the pension plan would cut this attitude."

RADIO BLACKOUT

Television and radio rights should be handled under a system similar to that used by the National Football League of the U.S., with all Canadian teams sharing in the pool equally. The interlocking schedule had made the Canadian Football League virtually a single league, so all teams should benefit from its value.

"And how can football executives justify blacking out television coverage of home games and not radio coverage? Broadcasters do an excellent job today; sometimes they make the game sound better than it is."

Montgomery said football has lost its social appeal and few fans will give up late-summer or autumn trips to the beach and country to stay home for a weekend football game.

"For this reason more games should be played during the week."

Peter Hayes Thinks Viewing Diets Would Be Good Thing

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Peter Lind Hayes, a comedian by occupation and a philosopher by choice, believes audiences would enjoy television more if they went on viewing diets.

"I remember one period during the Second World War when I was overseas for eight months and never saw a radio and never heard any music," he said. "One day a captain let me borrow a radio set—and you'd never believe the joy and wonder in me when I heard music —music!—coming out of that box."

"A little hunger is a wonderful thing."

Hayes and his wife-and-partner, Mary Healy, have emerged slightly scarred from an ill-fated comedy series last season called Peter Loves Mary.

"As it turned out," said Peter mournfully, "it was a complete waste of time. The pressures of getting out a show a week were too much — no time to fix up scripts, edit lines to make them sharper. It was too mechanical. Out of 32 shows we did, I would only want to look at six again."

Peter has gone back to nightclubs and the theatre. He'll be bouncing back on to the home screens next Sunday in an NBC "musical documentary" (Hayes' phrase) called Regards to George M. Cohan.

Recommended tonight: The World of Sophia Loren, NBC, 7:30-8:30 EST—biographical special filmed abroad;

Martha Raye Gets Married In First Movie in 15 Years

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The scene looked natural: Martha Raye was getting married.

But there was a difference. She was marrying Jimmy Durante, and it was a scene in Jumbo, her first movie in 15 years.

"I never married in most of my other pictures," she reflected. "But I made up for that on the outside."

Martha's husbands have numbered six: Make - up artist Buddy Westmore, conductor Dave Rose, businessman Neal Lang, dancer Nick Condos (still her manager), dancer Edward Begley, ex - policeman Bob O'Shea. She reported her current status as separated from O'Shea, who is in the service.

"I don't know what is going to happen," she admitted. "Marry again? I can't predict. I've never tried to plan or foresee the future."

She was rather a subdued Martha Raye when I saw her on her movie wedding day. She philosophized that her long career had managed to survive without any planning and she'll continue along the same line.

"I've always gone from one medium to another," she said. "I started out in the circus, when my folks had an acrobatic act. Then we went into vaudeville. When family acts were no longer popular, I did a single, starting when I was 16."

Martha moved from vaudeville to Broadway to night clubs, later landing in films. She scored in her first movie, Rhythm on the Range, with Bing Crosby and Bob Burns in 1936.

Her last picture was Monsieur Verdoux with Charlie Chaplin.

"Then they dropped my option in films," said Martha. "They didn't want me any more."

TOMORROW AT THE BELLE — It's fun all the way for Tuesday Weld, Richard Beymer, Celeste Holm and Terry-Thomas, in the romantic comedy, "Bachelor Flat" Color and by De Luxe and Ci Scope, opening Wednesday at the Belle Theatre.

As before, she adapted. She went east, played Broadway, radio, summer stock, night clubs, then scored her biggest triumphs as star of television.

Jumbo puts her back where she started: In the circus. She plays Lulu, the girl who will do anything. As performers leave the sinking circus (circa 1910) she assumes such duties as:

Fortune - teller, snake-charmer, fat lady, Statue of Liberty poser, dancer, strong woman, trapeze artist, unicyclist, bearded lady, clown, iron jaw girl (hanging by her teeth).

"I also get shot out of a cannon and dance with a bear," she reported. "I've met the bear already, and he wasn't very friendly. We're getting a new bear—with shorter claws."

(ADVT.)

½ AWAKE Nights
½ ASLEEP Days..

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They toss and turn in bed, then are dull and listless during the day. When kidneys slow down wastes and excess acids stay in the system. Disturbed rest, tired feeling and backache often follow. If you don't rest well at night—if you feel dull in the daytime—use Dodd's Kidney Pills. Then you feel better—rest better—work better. You can depend on Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Argument Turns Into Shooting Spree, 4 Dead

WOODSFIELD, Ohio (AP)—A family argument turned into a shooting spree Monday leaving four persons dead in the nearby village of Marr, the county sheriff reported.

Sheriff F. L. Sulsberger said an argument incurred when Richard Leisure, 40, went to the home of his wife's parents, Mr and Mrs. Frank Osborn, for a reconciliation with his wife June, 32.

Mrs. Leisure had been staying with her parents for two weeks pending divorce action.

Sulsberger gave this account:

Following a heated discussion, Leisure pulled a .38-calibre revolver, fatally shooting his father-in-law, Frank Osborn, 63. A visiting neighbor, Mrs. Madison Gardner, 32, was shot through the head by Leisure as she ran from the house for help.

Leisure than dragged his wife to the front porch where he shot her once. She staggered toward the road where she was felled by a second shot.

Leisure then turned the gun on himself.

The Leisures leave five children ranging in age from seven to 15. Mrs. Gardner was the mother of four.

Mrs. Osborn, 52, was also in the home. She told deputies Leisure fired one shot at her as she ran upstairs as the argument became violent.

Policy Holders Being Defrauded Says Official

TORONTO (CP)—J. H. Irving, president of the Ontario Good Roads Association, said today the average motorist pays 20 cents in accident costs for every gallon of gas he buys.

Mr. Irving was addressing the association's annual convention at the Royal York Hotel. Delegates have come from all over the province to the three-day meeting which opened Monday.

He said these accidents payments in Ontario annually exceed $240,000,000 and could be reduced by observance of common rules of safe driving and elimination of fraudulent accident claims.

Accident insurance policy holders are the ones who are defrauded on such claims, he said, since insurance companies simply increase their rates to cover their costs.

Mr. Irving said accidents have been reduced 50 per cent with construction of four-lane divided highways of limited access.

Dr. E. G. Pleva, professor of geography at the University of Western Ontario, told delegates highway planning programs must try to bring a "functinnal balance" to the country's living space and steer population growth along desirable lines.

Texts of their speeches were released to the press in advance of delivery.

FINDS GOODWILL

BOSTON (AP) — Edward M. Kennedy, the president's youngest brother, returned Monday night from an extensive European trip and said he was "overwhelmed" by the goodwill there toward the United States.

MARMORA

Campbellford Wins Over Marmora 10-5

MARMORA (Special) — Campbellford built a 4-0 lead in the first period and went on to defeat Marmora-Havelock 10-5 here last night in the second game of their OHA Intermediate "C" Hastings-Northumberland playoff series.

The best-of-seven semi-final series is now deadlocked at one game apiece and the next game will be played in Campbellford Wednesday night.

The visitors commanded play in a rough first period to take their 4-0 lead. The teams evenly divided six goals in the middle heat to make it 7-3 before Campbellford held a 3-2 edge in the third.

Seymour and McMillan starred on the Campbellford attacking force each scoring three goals. Lebrash potted two goals with Herrington and Fry adding singletons.

Watson and Jones were best for Marmora-Havelock with two goals each. McArthur fired the odd one.

Marmora - Havelock drew seven penalties and Campbellford six.

Some Students Will Have to Pay to Write

TORONTO (CP) — Grade 13 students who wish to write final examinations despite the fact they have not been given a teachers' recommendation mark will have to pay $5 a paper.

Dr. C. A. Brown, registrar of the Ontario department of education, announced this and other fees Monday.

He said that last year about 10,000 papers were written which had no hope of passing and that these papers delayed the marking of other papers and the publication of results.

If a student who has not been assigned a teacher's recommendation mark of at least 35 per cent pays his $5 and passes the exam, the money will be refunded.

Students this year will also have to pay a $5 late-entry fee if they apply after April 15 to write examinations. The fee last year was $2.

The department this year will provide Grade 13 examinations in Russian authors and Russian composition.

INDUSTRIALIST DIES

TOKYO (AP)—Yoshito Yoshida, 65, president of the giant Mitsubishi Heavy Industries Reorganized Limited, died Monday of a heart attack. Yoshida was a director of the Federation of Economic Organizations — Japan's national association of manufacturers—and of the Japan Association of Shipbuilders.

Ontario Cattle Hit by Disease New in Canada

GUELPH (CP)—Officials at the Ontario Veterinary College here say the province is experiencing the most serious cattle disease in the last 10 years.

They said Monday that Ontario cattle are being hit by a disease relatively new in Canada called leptospirosis. It causes abortions in cows.

A college spokesman said Southern Ontario farmers have lost 609 unborn calves in the last seven months because of the infection. The disease also affects deer but no estimate of damage to herds in the province has been made.

Officials of the college Monday recommended deer herds in Wentworth and Wellington counties be thinned out to prevent spread of the disease.

There is no open season for deer - hunting in Southern Ontario.

Experimental vaccinations are being carried out at OVC to immunize cattle and infected animals have been successfully treated with anti - biotics, the spokesman said.

Norway Refuses To Forego Nuclear Arms

OSLO (Reuters)—Norway will reject an invitation from Sweden to join a non-nuclear club, Foreign Minister Halvard Lange indicated today.

Lange told the Storting (Parliament) that under the existing conditions the government could not support arrangements which might weaken the western world's political and security position.

Norway has no plans to permit nuclear weapons on her territory at present but could not undertake to bind itself for the future, he said.

Documentary on Canada And Second World War Now Completed by Film Board

By ALAN DUCKETT

MONTREAL (CP)—An emotion packed documentary film on Canada and the Second World War has been completed by the National Film Board.

The 6½ - hour film will be shown on French and English television networks of the CBC starting early in April.

The documentary is the result of three years of effort by an NFB crew digging through missions of feet of Canadian, British, American and captured enemy film.

The series of 13 half - hour films will be shown on the English network Tuesday nights at 10 p.m. from April 3 to June 26 and on the French network each Sunday at 5:30 p.m. from April 1 to June 24.

The film story of the 10-year period from 1936 to 1946 covers the rise of Nazi Germany, fascist Italy and Imperial Japan, the six years of the war and the early post - war years when the United Nations was formed.

CANADIAN HIGHLIGHTS

Presented are film clips portraying the change of Canada from an agricultural to an industrial economy, the spectacular rise in the role of women in industry and the armed forces, the internment of Communist leader Tim Buck and Montreal Mayor Camillien Houde, and wartime politics.

Shown are Canadian servicemen's sallies into humor, the Dieppe raid, the muddy footslogging Italian campaign, convoy duty and anti - submarine warfare in the North Atlantic, and bomber attacks and fighter battles in Europe.

Interspersed with these are scenes of the jittering madness that caught the public fancy and flashbacks of radio shows of the era, including the Happy Gang and Mart Kenney and his Western Gentlemen.

The NFB crew has reproductd with film clips such events as the conscription crisis in the federal cabinet in 1944.

SPLIT CANADA

The commentary and editing give the viewer a sense almost of being present at cabinet meetings. There is Mackenzie King, fumbling with a handkerchief before news cameras, a stern Defence Minister J. L. Ralston; the implacable C. D. Howe, then munitions and supply minister; an expressionless Finance Minister J. L. Ilsley; Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, retired from 1st Canadian Army command and trying to recruit volunteer reinforcements, and Quebecers Louis St. Laurent, then justice minister, and Air Minister C. G. (Chubby) Power in opposite camps — Power with the anti -conscription forces and St. Laurent supporting the government.

There is no essential difference between English- and French-language versions.

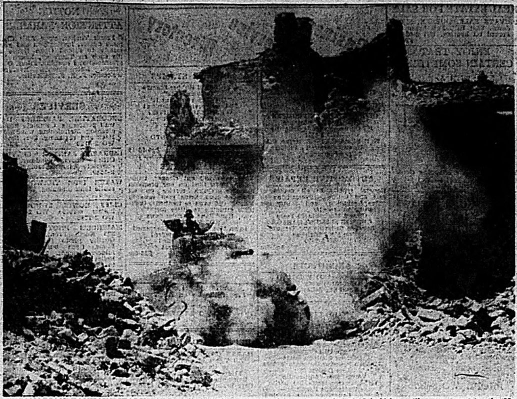
Ninety minutes of theme and mood music were created for the series and the tempo is in keeping with the tension and emotion of those years.

PLAN FOR 1967

The Canada at War series will be made available to educational organizations and clubs across Canada. It is part of an NFB plan to have complete film coverage by 1967 — the centenary of Confederation—of the history of Canada from the time of responsible government in the middle 1800s. This involves re - creating earlier history.

The years of the Second World War, however, are completely documented, since the navy, army and air force had full - time film crews with all major formations.

With the series, Canada becomes the first country to produce a documentary covering its complete war history. Documentaries have been produced in the United States and Britain on individual armed forces but none has taken in complete historical coverage as has been done by the NFB.



CANADIAN TANK IN ITALY—A Canadian tank moves through the Italian village of San Pancrazio in pursuit of retreating enemy forces. This campaign and others are covered in a new series of 13-half-hour films produced by the National Film Board. The series starts on CBC English and French television networks in early April. (CP Photo from NFB.)

BIG THREE AT QUEBEC — Meetings of top Allied leaders were held periodically during the Second World War to map political and military action. Shown at the 1943 Quebec City conference are Mackenzie King and Winston Churchill (standing), and President Roosevelt and Governor General Athlone. —(CP Photo from NFB.)

Ho Chi Minh Once Fought With U.S. Aid

By JOHN RODERICK

TOKYO (AP)—The news from South Viet Nam must bring a wintry smile to the leathery face of Ho Chi Minh, the cloak-and-dagger revolutionary who presides in Communist North Viet Nam.

The United States has sent about 4,000 soldiers, helicopters, specialists in anti-guerrilla warfare and many other forms of aid and is helping South Viet Nam build an army up to 200,000 men to fight the estimated 20,000 guerrillas directed by Ho.

Eighteen years ago Ho was on the other side. As an Indochinese nationalist — his communism carefully disguised—Ho led his partisans in warfare against the Japanese from hideouts in northern Indochina and accepted aid from the United States.

WORKS WITH U.S.

Before leading his partisans into Indochina with American approval, he worked as a translator in the U.S. Office of War Information at Chungking, the Chinese wartime capital.

Ho—his name means "The Enlightened"—has spent much of his lifetime dealing with Americans, the French and other Western statesmen — and often fooling them.

In 1919 he made his entry into world politics, urging the Versailles conference that wrote the First World War peace treaty to give Indochina freedom from France. Soon after that he joined the Communist party.

Today he is one of the world's senior citizens of communism he is believed to be at least 70 years old and may be 72—and has set his bright old eyes with fresh enthusiasm on his 43-year goal, the unification of Viet Nam, and probably Laos and Cambodia too, under Communist rule. These three countries made up the French-ruled area long known as Indochina.

Though he no longer fights beside his guerrillas, Ho directs the battle for South Viet Nam through a younger man, Gen. Vo Nguyen Giap, commander-in-chief, defence minister and victor at Dien Bien Phu, the battle which broke the French in the Indochina war in 1954.

As Ho did in the seven-year struggle against the French, Giap has borrowed heavily from China's Mao Tse-tung in directing the tactics of the Viet Cong guerrillas who murder, pillace, and terrorize South Viet Nam's peasants. His campaign calls for three stages of disintegration: Guerrilla warfare, organized but mobile fighting, then a general offensive with trained troops.

Giap's campaign appears to be the second stage. It could, if a crisis arose such as the entry of U.S. troops into active combat, move into the all-out phase.

Ninety Pounds Of Pure Heroin Confiscated

NEW YORK (AP) — Police and federal agents arrested a longshoreman with almost 90 pounds of pure heroin valued at about $20,000,000 Saturday night. Officers described it as the largest single narcotics seizure ever made by municipal police in the United States.

The longshoreman, Anthony Fuca, 31, had been under surveillance since his release in $22,250 bail on a previous narcotics charge.

His brother, the brother's wife and his father are still in jail on charges from the Jan. 18 raids in which officers found about 24 pounds of heroin in a Brooklyn apartment.

Deputy Chief Inspector Edward F. Carey of the city police narcotics squad said the heroin came into the U.S. in concealed compartments of a French-made auto shipped on a French vessel.

STUCK TO LAW

BELGRADE (AP) — Stefan Crnogorac, 70 - year - old shepherd, is seeking compensation from Yugoslavia's government for injuries inflicted by a bear. In hospital for three months, he said that but for the law protecting bears he would have killed it and avoided injury.

Icebreakers in St. Lawrence Not Used to Keep Navigation Open But to Prevent Floods

By JACQUES TREPANIER

MONTREAL (CP)—It's been a long time since flood waters lapped the sidewalks of Montreal and overran the rich farmland of the lower St. Lawrence river valley.

Few Montrealers now remember the spring flood of 1928 or the fact that floods, and not winter navigation, first prompted the federal department of transport to slice a channel in the ice-bound St. Lawrence River from Montreal to the Atlantic Ocean

Guy Choquet, a 20-year veteran department of transport engineer, remembers the early days well.

Icebreakers, he recalls, first made their appearance on the St. Lawrence in 1908 In those days, the tiny Lady Grey and Montcalm worked downstream from Quebec City, keeping ice floes moving toward the Atlantic.

In 1923 the Mikula, a more powerful vessel bought from Russia after the First World War, was added to the fleet.

Still, no attempt was made to attack the 170 frozen miles of river between Quebec City and Montreal, and flood waters continued to ravage the lowlands of the St. Lawrence valley each spring.

Mr. Choquet recalled in an interview that the first step in the campaign against floods was the opening of a channel from Quebec City upstream to Trois-Rivieres, halfway to Montreal.

This the little vessels were able to do, but spring floods continued unabated at Montreal and the department was forced to add to its fleet and press on upstream.

The Saurel, an icebreaker of 2,000 tons propelled by 3,000-horsepower engines, was launched first and soon was followed by the N. B. McLean, a 5,000-ton ship of 6,500 horsepower.

Their first breakthrough came in 1930.

Battling through Lake St. Peter, a shallow, 22-mile-long lake formed by a widening of the St. Lawrence, the ships reached Pointe - aux - Trembles, the eastern tip of Montreal Island.

The icebreakers widened their channel to 550 feet, then attacked the thicker ice of Montreal's eight - mile - long harbor.

Here, ice often piled to 15 above water level and 'breakers frequently were unable to ram their way through before the critical spring thaw.

When they failed, the Montreal docks disappeared under enormous ice floes and residents of the low-lying south shore were driven from their homes by the advancing flood waters.

Then the flagship of the icebreaker fleet, the massive d'Iberville, was launched and the floods ceased.

The d'Iberville, packing 10,000 tons and driven by 10,800 HP, was set to clearing mountainous ice-jams from the river channel while her smaller sister ships battered their way upstream.

"The icebreaker operations are costly, but they are necessary to prevent disast floods," Mr. Choquet said.

"The icebreakers can't keep the channel between Trois-Rivieres and Montreal open all winter, but they always reach the port of Montreal before the spring thaw.

"There are no more floods, and that's the goal we've been aiming at all these years."

Future Flights May Not Be So Successful

Glenn Cautions House 'There Will Be Times'

WASHINGTON (AP)—For the third day in a row, astronaut John H. Glenn Jr. goes to Capitol Hill today to tell about his triple orbit of the earth.

He and two of his fellow astronauts, Alan B. Shepard Jr. and Virgil I. Grissom, have a date this time with the Senate space committee. They testified Tuesday before the corresponding House of Representatives committee and a House appropriations unit.

Glenn cautioned the House committee members that the United States should realize that all future space flights may not be so successful as the first three.

"We are riding a crest of enthusiasm and happiness at this moment," he said. "There will be times when we are not on such a big crest."

Glenn and his family were guests at a Pentagon dinner given by Secretary of the Navy Fred Korth, civilian chief of the marine corps as well as the navy.

GETS PAY

Korth also presented the astronaut with his flight pay—$245—for the space trip. He handed over a regular Marine Corps flight pay certification crediting him with putting in the four hours of required flight time in February. The only difference in the form was that it carried an engraved picture of a space capsule.

Showing poise and ease, Glenn described for the committee members one of the bad moments of his flight—when there were indications that the capsule had lost its vital heat shield.

A radio signal to ground control at Cape Canaveral had indicated the shield had come unlatched. Shepard, who was a member of the control team, said 90 per cent of those on the ground thought the signal was a false one but "we reached the decision that we could not afford to take a chance." Glenn was ordered not to jettison his braking rockets to help hold the shield on.

Glenn told how flaming bits of wreckage streaked past his window during re-entry into the atmosphere. Had they been part of the heat shield instead of the rocket package, he said, "it could have been a bad day at black rock."

Without the shield, scientists agree that he would have been literally burned up.

Glenn gave a cautious answer when asked whether along on future flights.

Because of the possibility of emergencies, he said, "at least for the immediate future we can better use pilots than scientists," although it was hoped that some day the spacecraft would be large enough to take along specialists too.

Congress Party Sure of Another Term in India

NEW DELHI (Reuters)—Prime Minister Nehru's ruling Congress Party, already sure of another term in office, added to its lead today in latest returns from country-wide polling.

The 10-day staggered voting, which ended Sunday, was to decide 494 lower house seats and 2,930 state assembly seats.

With 171 lower house seats decided, the Congress Party had clinched 123 and had won control of seven of the 13 states in which at least 75 per cent of the results were known.

Before the elections, Congress controlled 375 lower house seats.

One of the most bitter fights on the national scene has been for lower house member from North Bombay where Nehru's right-hand man, Defence Minister V. K. Krishna Menon, was opposed by 74-year-old Acharya Kripalani, a disciple of Mahatma Gandhi.

BUILDS UP LEAD

Menon built up a substantial lead in early counting and by Tuesday night when more than half the votes were tallied was leading by 70,000.

However, another Nehru minister, B. V. Keskar, who is in charge of information and broadcasting, was defeated by 29,000 votes by an independent candidate in the state of Uttar Pradesh.

The country's third national election also has seen the Congress Party, which has ruled India since it became independent in 1947, lose ground in Punjab and Madras to parties seeking separate language groupings.

MRS. FAIRCLOUGH STANDS FIRM ON ACT REVISION

Minister Huffed Over Liberal Claims

OTTAWA (CP) — A bristling Immigration Minister Fairclough said Tuesday night she will not be "stampeded" into a revision of the Immigration Act "regardless of the howls from the opposition benches."

Rising in the Commons to answer a Liberal attack, the Hamilton housewife - turned - politician defended her department's action in revising the immigration regulations last month without a revamping of the act itself.

Leon Crestohl (L — Montreal Cartier) said laws as controversial and important as the immigration laws should be changed only with Parliament's approval — not by the cabinet alone.

Mrs. Fairclough, visibly annoyed, said she intends to bring in amendments to the Immigration Act later but she would not be stampeded into a "half-baked measure."

'WHEN I'M READY'

"They can shout their heads off from now till doomsday; I'll bring in my legislation when I am ready to bring it in," she declared amid loud desk-thumping applause from the government benches.

The debate flared up suddenly in a period reserved for routine members' grievances.

Mr. Crestohl charged that the Conservatives were guilty of "government by regulation" in revising the immigration regulations.

"That is the way dictators do it," he said.

Since 1957, the Conservatives had promised on nine occasions that they would revise the Immigration Act. Instead, the cabinet had passed a new set of regulations without consulting Parliament.

It was "a completely raw measure—a raw deal to the country."

CRITICIZES LIBERALS

Mrs. Fairclough retorted that the former Liberal government had "crammed through the House" in the dying days of a 1952 session an amendment to the Immigration Act.

The Liberals had used the amendment to pass regulations prohibiting or limiting immigration on grounds of color, ethnic origin, nationality, peculiar customs and modes of life, she said.

These discriminatory regulations were thrown out by the present cabinet and replaced by new ones stressing skills and financial means, she added.

The new regulations, which took effect Feb. 1, were announced in the House Jan. 19.

CCF CHARGES

Harold Winch (CCF — Vancouver East) charged that the immigration act allows the government to do almost anything it wants by order-in-council.

Mrs. Fairclough said the Liberals evidently do not like the new regulations.

"It was apparently all right for the former government to make regulations under this act, but it's all wrong for the present government. Since when did a Liberal government submit regulations under any law to Parliament for debate?"

Khrushchev, East German Leader Talk Secretly on Berlin, Germany

MOSCOW (Reuters)—Premier Khrushchev has conferred here secretly on Berlin and Germany with East German Communist leader Walter Ulbricht, the official Soviet news agency Tass reported today.

First news of the meeting came from East German sources here who said that the East German leader had left for home following the talks.

Tass said the two leaders met in Moscow Monday and Tuesday and reached complete agreement in an exchange of views "on the conclusion of a German peace treaty and on the normalization of the situation in West Berlin."

They also discussed "questions of co-operation" between the Soviet Union and East Germany.

The agency said that Russia would grant East Germany "a supplementary commodity credit."

They were also reported to have discussed general relations between Russia and East Germany and scientific and cultural exchanges.

The meeting between the two leaders comes at a time when talks on Berlin between the United States Ambassador Llewellyn Thompson and the Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko are evidently deadlocked.

Khrushchev has put off signing a peace treaty with East Germany, originally scheduled for the end of 1961. But Soviet commentators have been insisting lately that the issue cannot be shelved indefinitely.

Webster's New Dictionary Stirring Up Storm of Words

NEW YORK (AP) — A big, remodelled word book, Webster's Third New International Dictionary of the English Language, is stirring up a storm of words across the United States.

"A scandal," say some critics. "Debased verbal currency."

"Accurate," say the book's editors. "The language that is used."

Ever since the new, 2,662-page dictionary came out last fall, it has provided a steady tumult of reaction, pro and con.

The main charge is that the dictionary doesn't classify as slang or colloquial usage many terms that formerly were put in that category.

For instance: On the lam, stickup, con, softsoap and corny all were down - graded in the old dictionary, but are not in the new.

Many terms not included at all in the old dictionary — such as hotrod, goon, pricewise, jalopy, yeah, gobbledygook, hipster — are elected to fully respectable English in the new. So is the beat set's disparaging term, "square," which is defined as:

"A person who is an outsider or adversary because of the conventionality, conservatism or respectability of his taste, behavior of way of life: One who is not in the know: Unsophisticated."

And this characterization just about sums up the publisher's view of the critics. Gordon J. Gallan, president of G. and C. Merriam Company, which has put out Webster's dictionaries for more than a century, says of the complaints:

"Superficial comments of a few journalists who are reluctant to admit that our language has changed rapidly in the last few decades."

The objections have come—heatedly — from a variety of sources.

"Webster III has thrust upon us a dismaying assortment of the questionable, the perverse, the unworthy and the downright outrageous," says author Wilson Follett, writing in last month's Atlantic Monthly.

Among other things, he protests the dictionary's approval of the usage of various words in ways widely considered improper before — such as using "like" for "as if" and "due to" for "because of".

The dictionary, the first completely revised, unabridged Webster's in a quarter-century, includes 450,000 entries. Among them, the editors say, are 100,000 new words or new meanings.

The New York Times, in an indignant bit of editorial irony, offered this comment:

"A passel of double - domes at the G. and C. Merriam Company joint in Springfield, Mass., have been confabbing and yakking for 27 years . . . and have now finalized . . . a new edition of that swell and esteemed book."

All these words were listed in the new dictionary without being classified as slang and with no suggestion that they were anything but standard, The Times noted.

It said that Webster's for generations had been a "peerless authority" on sound usage, but that the new edition was "bound to cause dismay" to teachers, editors and others interested in good taste in English.

Dr. Philip B. Gove, editor-in-chief of the new dictionary, says the dictionary's aim is to "report the language" as it is, not to prescribe what belongs in it.

In the preface to the new edition he writes:

"Accuracy in addition to requiring freedom from error and conformity to trust requires a dictionary to state meanings in which words are in fact used; not to give editorial opinion on what their meanings should be."

It is just this policy that has aroused many of the objections.

U.S. Picks 50 Emergency Landing Strips in Arctic

OTTAWA (CP) — The United States Air Force has picked out some 50 emergency landing strips in the Canadian Arctic islands for military and civilian planes which might run into trouble in that region.

Government officials say the strips were first selected from a study of Canadian aerial photographs. The selection has been confirmed by flights over the emergency landing fields and it is understood the U.S. Air Force has asked permission to make some actual landings.

One or two strips on northern Ellesmere Island, Canada's most northern territory, were chosen for the U.S. Air Force by Defence Research Board expeditions to that area in the last few years. They were selected by ground and not aerial survey.

One official said the RCAF had not concerned itself with pinpointing emergency strips because it seldom flew over the Arctic archipelago. Nearly all RCAF flights over the Arctic islands are by transport planes carrying para drop supplies to weather stations or by Second World War Lancaster bombers which make periodic reconnaissance flights over the region to keep an eye out for any possible Russian activity.

U.S. GIVES INFORMATION

The information put together by the U.S. Air Force, however, has been made available to the Canadian defence and northern affairs departments.

U.S. bombers on airborne alert make more flights over the Arctic islands than Canadian planes, authorities said. The U.S. Air Force wanted to know where these bombers, if in trouble, might lead with some degree of safety.

Some civilian airlines, notably Scandinavian, fly the Polar route between Europe and Asia. The only regular air base in the Canadian Arctic islands is at Resolute on Cornwallis Island.

Officials here said it is unlikely that the strips in Canada will aid a great deal in oil and mineral development. Construction of a runway would follow the other way round.

MILITARY EXPERT DIES

NEW YORK (AP)—Dr. Herbert Torinski, 59, consultant to armed forces and private groups on military affairs and international politics, died Tuesday. Born and educated in Germany, Rosinski went to the United States in 1940. Among the military groups he served as a consultant were the U.S. National War college and the RCAF.

ONE CONCILIATOR MAY HANDLE RAIL DISPUTE

Non-ops Want Three-Man Board

OTTAWA (CP) — A lone conciliator — probably a Canadian of high public stature — may be handed the tricky task of trying to solve Canada's biggest labor dispute.

This course of action is reported under study as the government prepares to move formally into the 1962 contract scrap between the big railways and their 110,000 non - operating workers.

So far no decision has been made on how the government will respond to separate requests for conciliation services from the railways and the "non-op" unions.

The railways have asked for a single conciliation officer, apparently in the hope of further bargaining, while the unions have requested a formal three-man conciliation board.

If Labor Minister Starr decides to break away from the tradition of a formal board, he would likely go outside the federal conciliation service for a mediator of high calibre, someone known to the public, acceptable to the parties and knowledgeable on railway-union affairs.

MUST CONSULT UNIONS

Since the unions are seeking a three - man board made up of a chairman, a union nominee and a company nominee, he would also have to get their acceptance for a single conciliator.

Playing a lone hand free of the conflicting pressures of union and company nominees and outside the courtroom atmosphere of a board hearing, a lone conciliator might be able to guide the disputants to a compromise agreement.

The unions are demanding a two - year contract providing wage increases of about 22 cents an hour, plus a new job security provision that would guarantee the jobs of workers with more than five years service while providing severance pay

NAMING JUDGE POLITICAL PAYOFF CLAIM LIBERALS

Attorney-General Denies Charge

TORONTO (CP) — The Conservative government was accused Tuesday of using a family court judgeship as a "political payoff," at a time when trained judges are more than ever needed to deal with family and juvenile problems.

The charges were shouted across the legislature by James Trotter (L — Toronto Parkdale) in a session largely devoted to a comprehensive review of Ontario's economic situation and prospects.

Mr. Trotter said the "real reason" for the appointment of George R. Sweeney as judge of the family court in suburban Richmond Hill was that he had served in Conservative party posts in the area and helped in party campaigns.

He said Mr. Sweeney "may be excellent at selling soap, but this isn't helping to solve juvenile and family court problems."

Attorney - General Roberts, who was steering a bill on family courts through the legislature, replied that Mr. Sweeney has a large family and a record of air force service during the Second World War.

"I have no apologies to make for that appointment," the attorney-general said.

SEES EXPANSION

Earlier, Economics and Development Minister Macaulay predicted a six-per-cent increase in 1962 for Ontario's gross provincial product, with the lead being taken by some areas of construction, mining, government, trade and services.

In a two - hour speech described as a prelude to Thursday's presentation of the provincial budget by Provincial Treasurer Allan, Mr. Macaulay said the six-per-cent increase in the provincial product would follow an estimated rise of 3½ per cent in 1961.

He repeatedly stressed the part played by exports and foreign markets in Ontario's economy, the anticipated impact of new trading blocs in the world, and the need for action by both private industry and government to meet increased competition.

The legislature will not sit today as the members concentrate on committee meetings.

COMMITTEE MEETS

The standing committee on privileges and elections is to meet. High on the agenda is the case of John A. Fullerton (PC—Algoma-Manitoulin), accused by Elmer Sopha (L—Sudbury) last December of improperly receiving payments from the government for timber salvage some 10 years ago. Mr. Fullerton has already denied wrongdoing.

Some of the members are expected to travel to Guelph to visit the Ontario Agricultural and Veterinary Colleges and discuss several bills dealing with agriculture.

SPENDING IS UP

LONDON (Reuters) — Treasury Chief Selwyn Lloyd faced criticism from his own Conservatives as well as Opposition Labor MPs Tuesday as he disclosed he had failed to keep British government spending down, as promised. The estimates for 1962-63 total £5,611,000,000, exceeding his target by £111,000,000 and showing an increase of £384,000,000 over 1961-62.

Seeking Solace From Loneliness N.Y. Widow Fleeced of $118,273

NEW YORK (CP) — Mrs. Frances Friedman, 54, a widow, testified in United States general sessions court Tuesday that she was fleeced of $118,273 by a gypsy woman five years ago when she sought solace for her loneliness.

Mrs. Friedman said Mrs. Volga Adams, 42, the gypsy, allegedly took her money in what has been described by police as the biggest larceny ever perpetrated by means of the gypsy "handkerchief switch."

Mrs. Adams went on trial after fending off extradition from Alabama and other states for several years. She faces four counts of grand larceny.

In September, 1956, Mrs. Friedman testified, she was lonely after the death of her husband.

She said she visited Mrs. Adams and was told "there is evil in you and the evil is all in your money." She said Mrs. Adams volunteered to help rid her of the "evil."

The widow testified Mrs. Adams tore a $1 bill in half and wrapped it in a handkerchief, telling her to wear it "next to your bosom."

"Return in a couple of days and if the $1 bill becomes whole it will mean a miracle has been performed."

Mrs. Friedman said she did so and when she returned several days later Mrs. Adams unfolded the handkerchief and produced a whole bill.

Impressed by this she later turned over all her money to Mrs. Adams, she testified.

Earlier, the court was told how Mrs. Adams allegedly staged a fake burning of the money to convince Mrs. Friedman that the money and the evil connected with it were destroyed.

Franco-Algerian Peace Agreement Said Approved

Estimate Cease-Fire Within Two Weeks

TUNIS, Tunisia (Reuters) — The Algerian insurgent Parliament today was reported to have approved a secret Franco-rebel peace deal and to have given the rebel regime authority to sign a cease-fire agreement after it negotiated some "secondary" points with the French next week.

This picture emerged from a communique issued here by the Tunis-based insurgent "Algerian provisional government" and in statements to reporters by provisional government sources.

If all went well, it was estimated, the cease-fire agreement ending the seven-year Algerian war should be proclaimed within two weeks.

The insurgent communique said only that the rebel movement's Parliament meeting in Tripoli, Libya had discussed the negotiations with the French and "gave a mandate to the provisional government of the Algerian republic to continue the current negotiations."

WILL END WAR

A source close to the rebel government explained that the word "mandate" meant the regime was given authority to proclaim a cease-fire in due course without again consulting its Parliament.

Provisional government sources added that the six-day Tripoli meeting wound up early this morning after the insurgent Parliament approved the Franco-rebel draft agreements, reached 10 days ago in secret negotiations on the Franco-Swiss frontier. The agreements are to provide for Algeria's future independence.

It was understood that the agreements left some secondary points unsettled and that these would have to be dealt with before a cease-fire could be signed.

Contacts were reported under way today between the French and the Algerian leaders to fix the time and place of the hoped-for "final" negotiating session. The forecast here was that it would be held early next week somewhere in France.

WELCOMED IN PARIS

In Paris, the insurgent parliament's "mandate" decision was welcomed in French government circles as virtually ensuring a cease-fire soon.

Paris comment took the line that it always had been agreed between the negotiators on both sides that a certain number of secondary points would be left over for settlement at a final peace conference.

It was felt in Paris that the "final" peace conference would be able to occur somewhere near the French capital during the next week.

There was no immediate word either in Tunis or Paris on the nature of the "secondary" points still hanging fire.

The bitter seven-year war in Algeria began Nov. 1, 1954, when Moslems staged between 60 and 70 attacks throughout the country.

Since then the death toll has mounted steadily. Latest unofficial French estimates put it at between 200,000 and 250,000.

VIOLENCE RENEWED

Meanwhile, Moslem and European violence flared anew in Algeria amid what appeared to

Stock Exchange Head Resigns After Indictment

NEW YORK (AP) — J. Truman Bidwell resigned the powerful post of chairman of the board of governors of the New York Stock Exchange Tuesday following a federal grand jury indictment charging him with evading $55,908 in income taxes.

He claimed persecution from "high places in Washington," and said "neither the investing public nor the stock exchange is involved."

The government, too, took pains to emphasize that the indictment dealt with Bidwell's personal taxes and had nothing to do with his activities at the exchange.

But the indictment added fire to persistent rumors of a widespread tax investigation in the securities field.

The Internal Revenue Service began its tax investigation of Bidwell more than three years ago. Last year, the Securities and Exchange Commission turned an investigative eye on Wall Street that resulted in a shakeup at the American Stock Exchange.

The SEC investigation was based on charges of abuse of trading rules and tight domination of the American Exchange. It resulted last month in the resignations of President Edward T. McCormick and board chairman Joseph Reilly.

CLAIMS FAKING

The two - count indictment against Bidwell accused him of concealing capital gains, and faking expenses for travel, charitable contributions and entertainment.

The grand jury charged Bidwell, 58, with listing joint income with his wife for 1956 and 1957 as $124,404, when the actual income totalled $208,202. It said Bidwell listed taxes for the two years as $55,035, when the figure should have been $110,943.

Conviction could put him in prison for a maximum of five years, and also carries the possibility of a fine up to $10,000.

Bidwell, who will plead to the indictment on Monday before Federal Judge John M. Cashin, issued a statement in which he declared "I have fully paid all my taxes."

Henry M. Watts Jr., 57, vice-chairman of the exchange board, automatically succeeded Bidwell.

Appointment of a full-time therapist is announced by the Quinte Branch of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society.

Mrs. T. P. Thornton, a graduate of McGill in occupational and physio-therapy, is expected to assume her duties about the middle of March. Miss Betty Draycott of Kingston has been attending to the duties temporarily and reported a case load of thrity-five as of December 31 in the city and district.

A letter was read from Mr. Gilbride, the retiring chairman of the Provincial Board, thanking the members of the local board, the auxiliary and other helpers for the work done during the year in the interests of arthritic patients.

It was recommended that a roster of speakers composed of an interested doctor and local available therapists address suitable grades in the secondary schools in the city and surrounding communities with a view to acquainting students with the possibilities of a career in therapy. This profession is undersupplied and with the expanding field for this service, it was felt that not enough of the general public know of its possibilities.

'Fenian Raids' Will Be Topic At Meeting

"The Fenians and the Belleville Area" will be the topic at the March meeting of the Hastings County Historical Society. The meeting will be held Tuesday evening, March 6, at 8 p.m. in the Corby Library Auditorium, Belleville.

The Fenians were Irish-Americans who invaded Canada between the years 1866 and 1871 in an attempt to wrest it from British control. By attacking British rule in Canada, they hoped to force Britain to grant complete independence to Ireland.

The nature of the Fenian plans and how these Irish patriots affected the Belleville area will be revealed by Miss Beryl Campbell, M.A., head of the history department at Quinte Secondary School, Belleville. Miss Campbell has made an intensive study of the topic based on many sources including newly discovered documents made available by Mr. J. Linton of Belleville.

Business at the meeting will include the presentation of the 1962 budget for the society and the county museum.

An added feature will be the sale of special souvenirs commemorating the Fenian Raids.

The public is cordially invited to attend.

Jaw Bones Used to Secure Age of Deer Taken in Hunt

Local Kiwanians were given an insight of the methods used by the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests to keep track of game population by William Biddle, wildlife management officer for the Tweed district.

The speaker described the methods used to determine the age and sex of deer and game birds. Examination of jaw bones is the method commonly used to determine the age of deer taken in a year's harvest.

Through the information obtained in this fashion the department is able to determine the population trend of deer herds in the district and can thus make whatever adjustments are necessary to the length of the hunting season or the kill allowed each hunter in order to ensure that the deer herds will survive and multiply for future years, he advised. The same theory and practice applies to other game as well.

Mr. Biddle stated that if a season's deer harvest features about 30 per cent fawns the population is considered to be fairly stable.

The various species of game birds were also discussed and Mr. Biddle, through the use of samples showed how the age and sex of a bird could be determined by examining its wing and tail feathers. These samples are collected through the voluntary efforts of hunters and sportsmen in sending in these items from the birds they have killed.

It is not necessary to send in the whole bird, Mr. Biddle stated but advised that if whole birds were sent in they usually formed the basis for a meal as well as contributing valuable statistics for the game count.

Currently, a harvest field count method is used to establish the population of waterfowl since a system of determining the sex and age of these birds has yet to be completed, he advised.

An active question and answer session followed Mr. Biddle's remarks with those present querying the Tweed resident on many different types and phases of wildlife. During this session Mr. Biddle stated that more and more deer were coming south of Highway No. 7 and that several moose had been spotted in this area also.

Kiwanian Dick Lumbers introduced the speaker and Charles Cox expressed the thanks of the club.

Vice president Ralph Graham conducted the meeting in the absence of president George Hume. It was announced that the annual father-son dinner would be held next week with Maurice "Rocket" Richard as the special guest of the club.

Four Cars Involved In Mishap

The truck driven by Douglas A. Cooney, 5th concession of Sidney township, skidded off the highway after striking the Way vehicle and bumped into two parked autos. No one was injured.

Provincial Constable R. J. Grieve investigated.

Dunsmore, I.P.S. addressed some encouraging and congratulatory remarks to the contestants and parents. Each speaker was the recipient of a silver dollar, presented by Mr. Montgomery, on behalf of the township council, who also presented a silver trophy to the teacher of the class, of which the winner is a member – Mrs. Teskey for the junior and Mr. Jenkins for the senior winner. The Township Teachers' Association, represented by Mrs. D. Spencer and Mrs. H Bates, presented souvenir trophies to the winner, while Mrs. D. Redner, president of the Association, moved a vote of thanks to all who had contributed to the success and especially for the efforts of the contestants.

The winner and runner-up in each of the Junior and Senior Divisions will compete in the Inspectorate Finals, which will be held at Queen Alexandra School, Belleville, on Wednesday evening, March 7th, 1962.

Canadians Travelling Spend Much More Than Received

MONTREAL — Canadian travellers on the average are now spending more money abroad than people from any other North Atlantic country and this has resulted in a significant deficit in Canada's tourist account, according to the Bank of Montreal's Business Review for February, just issued.

"The deficit in 1960 amounted to over $200 million", the B of M review points out. 'By that year, Canadian tourist expenditures abroad had risen to an all-time high of $627 million nearly three times as great as the total spent in 1950".

Receipts from foreign tourists to Canada in 1960 reached $420 million, which constituted a larger source of receipts than any commodity export, except newsprint.

The major part of the country's international tourist income arises from travel between the United States and Canada, but it also accounted for $87 million of the 1960 deficit, since Canadians spent $462 million in the U.S. and Americans spent only $375 million in Canada.

Visits to countries other than the United States have also been increasing the review observes. In this category, Canadians increased their spending from $33 million in 1950 to $165 million in 1960 and preliminary indications are even higher for 1961.

Most expenditures in overseas countries in 1960 were made in the United Kingdom and continental Europe, as a result of some 118,000 visits to the United Kingdom and about 100,000 visits to other European countries. In addition, visits also increased to Bermuda, the Caribbean and Central and South America.

In Oran, western Algeria, two Moslems were killed by unknown gunmen behind the cathedral in the city centre and 10 simultaneous explosions rocked the fringes of the Jewish and Moslem districts. No casualties and only minor damage were reported in the blasts.

In Algiers itself, one Moslem was killed and two other persons, one of them a European, were killed in gun and grenade attacks.

Security forces were reported to have killed three persons and wounded 10 Tuesday when they opened fire on a crowd of 300 young Moslems shouting "Algerian Algeria."

In violence throughout the country Tuesday 27 persons were killed and 51 wounded, military officials said.

New Ice Device Protects Hydro Crews in N. Ontario

A device that gives fast, accurate readings to pinpoint loads that may safely be carried over ice has been developed to protect Ontario Hydro workers driving over frozen lakes, rivers and muskeg in Northern Ontario.

Known as the safe ice load meter, the little instrument, battery powered and packed in a metal box, was designed by Jack Willmot of the Ontario Hydro Research Division's Structural Department.

Before driving on ice, the vehicle operator sets four main control knobs on the meter which correspond to ice and weather conditions, depth and type of ice, cracks, and continuous days of thaw. Field crews can get quick, accurate information with an ice-coring tool, also designed by Willmot. It's driven by a truck battery whirs through ice up to four feet thick in a minute or two.

Once the knobs are set, the meter registers the safe load the ice is capable of carrying and the driver proceeds accordingly.

A printed table with the meter gives maximum safe speed on ice in relation to depth of water beneath. Typical figures —Water 4 feet deep, 5 miles per hour, — water 16 feet deep 10 miles per hour.

Easily-memorized instructions tell drivers what to do if ice cracks under vehicle. Emergency measures are brief, to the point. Example: several cracks — vehicle standing still. Move it, slowly, in low gear.

Willmot designed the meter in the fall of 1960 after combing hundreds of articles, papers and other material from three major sources — Canada, the U.S. and the U.S.S.R.

His research turned up reams of facts on ice and ice travel. It soon became clear that ice thickness, vehicle weights, temperatures and loads were only basics of the affair.

Some of the major points Willmot's studies revealed:

If temperatures hold steady around the 32 degree mark, ice wil weaken at the rate of five per cent a day.

Most dangerous cracks are those intersecting at 45 degree angles; safest are those directly beneath a vehicle, between and parallel to the wheels.

Ice starts to contract, becomes brittle, and cracks after the air temperature falls 5 to 10 degrees in the late afternoon and remains unsafe until the air temperature rises by 5 to 15 degrees next morning. Don't drive on ice at night, in early morning, or in extreme cold weather.

Milky ice is only half as strong as the clear kind and is formed when water pushes up through cracks, spreads through covering snow layer and freezes.

Waves set up under ice by a vehicle on the surface can cause dangerous conditions if the speed of the vehicle attains more than two-thirds that of the waves.

The meter developed as a result of these investigations was tested successfully last winter at Hydro's Little Long Rapids power development, 42 miles north of Kapuskasing.

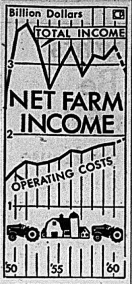
Fear Poisoner May Claim Child Victim

WAUBAUSHENE, Ont. (CP) A poisoner has killed 15 dogs in this Georgian Bay resort area and parents fear a child may be the next victim of strychnine.

Parents are accompanying their children to school and supervising play in case the youngsters should pick up pieces of poisoned meat.

Police said drug store checks in the area have failed to turn up any clues as to who is buying strychnine.

Veterinarians said several animals killed in the last three months were valuable hunting and show dogs. Two other poisoned dogs were saved by veterinarians.



FARM INCOME DOWN

Estimated total Canadian farm net income for 1961 is $1,006,000,000, lowest since 1957 and some 24 per cent down from $1,319,600,000 in 1960.

Farm operating expenses continued to rise but the Pairie drought loss in grains, plus reduced farm grain supplies, was mainly responsible for the big drop from 1960. Graph shows net farm income — total income minus operating costs — for 1950-61. — (CP Newsmap.)

United Appeal Directorate Holds Meeting

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the United Appeal was held Monday night at the Y.M.C.A. with an exceptionally fine attendance. This was the first since the election of new officers and directors at the annual meeting, February 7th.

The appointment of A. L. Gnaedinger as permanent executive manager for this year was approved. Mr. Gnaedinger had already acted in this capacity on a temporary basis during the latter part of last year.

A report of the midwinter conference of the Community Funds and Councils of Canada held February 14th to 16th in Montreal was presented by the executive manager. Registration involved some 500 delegates representing an extremely large cross-section of those recognized groups interested in health and welfare services throughout Canada. Interchange of ideas among the various fund representatives formed a most interesting and important part of the convention program, it was reported.

The outstanding event was the conference banquet at which the Governor-General addressed a capacity audience. His Excellency spoke on "Voluntary Work in Social Welfare" and pointed out that voluntary service is a boon to the individual, a blessing to the community, an indispensable adjunct to the welfare agency and a complement to the labors of the professional social worker.

Organization of the various committees is going ahead and it is expected that each will be in a position to proceed with its particular function in the near future.

TORONTO STOCKS

Although plus and minus signs were almost evenly divided on the industrial board, losses were sufficient to overshadow gains.

International Nickel dropped ¼, as did Shawinigan, while Bank of Montreal dropped ⅜, Bank of Nova Scotia ⅛ and CPR ⅛.

Pipelines showed strength with Trans-Canada and Interprovincial each ahead ¼. Trans-Prairie Pipelines jumped two points to a 1962 high of 37 on news the company plans a five-for-one stock split.

On the exchange index, industrials slipped .18 at 612.40, base metals .26 at 205.11 and western oils .40 at 126.57. Golds added .10 at 89.82. The 11 a.m. volume was 656,000 shares compared with 731,000 at the same time yesterday.

Base metals were quiet. Hudson Bay Mining dropped ⅛, while in speculatives, Lake Dufault slipped five cents to $5.45

Dome Petroleums weakened western oils with a drop of 1⅛ to 11¾. The company has announced its planned $42,000,000 sale of assets to Sinclair Oil has been called off.

Industrials halted a five - day losing streak Tuesday.

However, no industrial group could claim the day's strength as stock gains appeared to take no set pattern.

Federal Grain led industrials higher with a four-point advance at 55. Canada Iron Foundries moved ahead 1½, United Fuel Investment, B 1⅜, and Holt Renfrew, Trans - Prairie Pipe Line and MacLaren B all one point.

Imperial Life took the day's biggest loss, down three points. Hamilton Cotton lost 1¼, Minnesota and Ontario Paper 1⅛ and Anthes Imperial A and Consolidated Building a point.

On the exchange index, Industrials gained 1.29 at 612.58 and base metals .97 at 205.37. Western oils dropped 1.28 at 126.97 and golds .66 at 89.72. The final volume was 2,838,000 shares compared with 3,551,000 Monday.

Key index stocks on the industrial board to move up were Aluminium up ½, Canadian Celanese ⅝, Consolidated Paper ¾ and Walker-Gooderham ⅝.

International Nickel and Falconbridge led senior base metals, both with gains of 1¼. Calgary and Edmonton led western oils lower with a ¾-point drop.

Tax Incentives In Next Budget Is Possibility

By ALAN DONNELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — A federal budget, probably with tax incentives for increased industrial production, appears likely to be put before Parliament during the first half of April, informants said today.

This schedule would have Finance Minister Fleming present his budget before the Commons rises for its Easter recess in mid-April.

Mr. Fleming has finished hearing a series of economic and tax-change briefs from various organizations and his department officials now are busy sorting out and evaluating various proposals.

Although federal finances still are in a tight position—a $650,000,000 deficit was forecast in the last budget for this fiscal year—it is understood that the idea of strong tax incentives to business has been accepted in principle.

WASN'T ADOPTED

This idea was put forward a year ago but was not adopted then. Instead, Mr. Fleming chose a course of reducing the exchange value of the Canadian dollar to a discount to give Canadian exports a better competitive price edge on world markets and discourage imports.

It is understood that no precise formula of business tax incentives has yet been worked out. Presumably it would be linked to additional profits made through increased production by an industry.

An earlier proposal for tax reductions on profits resulting from increased exports has been ruled out, informants say, on grounds it would discriminate against industries producing only for the Canadian market and also against those which have already pushed their export sales to the limit.

Meanwhile, Mr. Fleming is keeping mum on the exact date of his budget speech. Asked about it in the Commons Tuesday, he said only that it won't be this month.

Five Coaches Of Empire State Express Derailed

ST. THOMAS (CP)—The eastbound Empire State Express of the New York Central Railway was derailed today 31 miles west of here.

No injuries were reported and first reports said no ambulances had been called out.

Site of the accident is one mile west of the village of Rodney.

St. Thomas is the headquarters of the railway's Canadian division.

Early reports said five coaches left the rails. The train, which runs between Detroit and New York City, usually hits speeds up to 80 miles an hour in the area where the accident occurred, but there was no immediate estimate of its speed at the time of the mishap.

The Empire State usually has five to seven passenger coaches plus a baggage or express car.

Senator Defends Canada's Trade With Cuba

OTTAWA (CP)—Senator Gunnar Thorvaldson said Tuesday night the overwhelming majority of Canadians do not believe that Canada's foreign policy toward Cuba should be a servile following of the United States position.

The Manitoba Conservative spoke in the Senate in defence of Canada's trading position with the Castro regime. He was replying to Liberal criticism, including a statement last week by Senator David Groll (L—Ontario) that Canada is asking for trouble with the U.S. by continuing to export strategic goods to Cuba.

"Canada has acted in a responsible, honorable and correct manner in its trading relationships with Cuba," Senator Thorvaldson said.

He denied that Canada is exporting strategic goods to Cuba. The federal government adhered strictly to the NATO list of strategic goods whose shipment to Communist countries is banned.

Senator Thorvaldson said statements by Senator Croll and other Liberals amounted to hysteria and appeals to passion and prejudice. Prominent Canadians could always produce headlines by besmirching Canada's name abroad.

Fur Auction Topped All Expectations

NORTH BAY (CP)—Sales at a fur auction sponsored Tuesday by the Ontario Trappers Association topped all expectations, sellers said today.

Sale of 9,997 skins brought some $45,000, officials said.

Before the sale, third of the 1961-62 fur trapping season, officials had expressed hopes of hitting the $40,000 mark.

Board of Education Opens Tenders for New Building

TRENTON — The Trenton Board of Education met with three representatives of the Toronto architectural firm of Barnett and Reider last night to open tenders for the construction of the new technical addition to Trenton High School.

Mr. W. E. Barnett told the board that nine contractors had examined the specifications but that only four had tendered. The five who had dropped out said that they did so because of the size of the project or the fear that they would not be able to complete the job on time. In order to qualify for provincial and federal government underwriting of the cost of erecting and equipping the addition, the entire project must be completed by March 31, 1963.

The four tendering firms were M. Sullivan and Sons of Arnprior; Andre and Sons of Kingston; McFarland Construction of Picton and Ball Brothers of Kingston and Kitchener. The lowest bid was a shade under the architects' estimate of what it would be and a shade over a department of education guess of $941,400.

Reporters were asked not to reveal the exact bids, at the moment. T S. Ketcheson, chairman of grounds and buildings with the broad, won a box of chocolates, donated by Mr. Barnett, for the "educated guess" closest to the lowest bid. Mr. Ketcheson's figure was $1,112,000.

A snag developed when it was revealed that the board had had a certain amount of trouble with one of the tendering firms. This firm was responsible for the construction of the original high school building and while Mr. Ketcheson said that the work on the building had been satisfactory, there had been a great deal of controversy about the date of completion. At one time there had been a suggestion that the board and the firm in question might have to go to arbitration over the deal.

Mr. Barnett said that he would look into this matter and contact board members within a few days. As the firm had tendered the lowest bid he said that the refusal of the bid might be hard to explain to the department of education. The department must approve the awarding of the contract.

Sub-contractors' bids for the installation of electrical fittings and plumbing, heating and ventilating units were read.

Board members asked that as much as possible such work be awarded to local contractors and that the architects examine a bid from Central Bridge for structural steel supply.

Representing Barnett and Reider were Mr. Barnett, Mr. R. J. Creighton and Mr. A. S. Haskett.

Board members present were L. G. Phinney, board chairman; T. S. Ketcheson, George Greer, Mrs. G. Griffiths, Gerald Farrar, Louis Knack, E. D. Topping and Dr. T. A. McNally. Also present was high school principal W J. Houston.

After the architects had taken their leave, the board met with Lorne Myles of Murray Township, who had asked for an interview.

George Greer, chairman of finance, read a letter from Mr. Myles, in which he said that he thought the enforcement of a rule, whereby out-of-town residents whose children attend Trenton High School must pay $30 a month, per child, if the parent does not own property in town with an assessment value of $6,440, was unfair. At least, wrote Mr. Myles, delay the enforcement of this ruling until next September.

Mr. Myles said that he had been led to believe that his assessment of round $4,000 on his town property was sufficient. Then, on Feb. 15, he had received a notice that since his assessment did not come up to the new assessment (laid down by the department of education), he must pay $90 a month or withdraw his children from the school.

Mr. Myles said that he had decided that his older boy must be allowed to remain at the Trenton school but that he could not afford to pay $30 a month for each of the other children. He said that he had sent the youngest child to East Northumberland High School last week and that he had to pay $11 for new text books. The boy had also been forced to drop two subjects from his course as these were not given at the Brighton school. In three days, he had returned the boy to Trenton.

Mr. Myles said that his daughter, an honor student in Grade 11, would not be able to continue with a German language course at Brighton and that Mr. Houston had written to the East Northumberland school board asking that the board pay her tuition at Trenton.

"Put the shoe on the other foot," said Mr. Myles ,"If any of the board members received a demand to pay $90 a month for their children to attend school, it might be a hardship."

Mr. Ketcheson said that he was inclined to agree with Mr. Myles and that he thought the board might have been a bit hasty in enforcing the ruling.

"Legally, we're right," said Mr. Ketcheson. "but educationally we're wrong."

Mr. Greer pointed out that in the case of a student from Sidney Township, the board had been unanimously agreed to enforce the rule. The parents of this child have withdrawn him from the Trenton school rather than pay the stipulated $30 a month.

"If we don't change Mr. Myles, we can't charge this other boy," said Mrs. Griffiths.

"Then too," said Mr. Ketcheson, "we have to consider that the town's proceedings for annexation of parts of Murray and Sidney townships are coming up. If Mr. Myles starts his children to the Northumberland school now, and annexation takes place, he would have to send them back to Trenton. This could result in the children changing schools three times in one year."

No final decision on the issue was reached, but Mr. Myles was told that the board would meet again on Wednesday (tonight) and try to resolve the matter.

Four Students Receive Awards

TRENTON — Four Trenton students who competed in the Royal Canadian Legion Zone F2 public speaking contest at Colborne last weekend, received awards over contestants who had won local Legion contests in Brighton, Campbellford, Cobourg and Port Hope.

Winners in their respective classes were: John Garrett, St. Peter's School (Grades 5 and 6); Andy Pipe, Marmora St. Senior School, (Grades 7 and 8) Isabel Williamson, Trenton High School, (Grades 9 and 10), Barbara Pickell, Trenton High School, (Grades 11, 12 and 13) achieved second place, standing in her class.

W. E. Donaldson of Trenton, past zone commander, acted as chairman for the zone contest.

Winners will go on to compete in district competition in March.

Another Reformation Due?

At a recent meeting of United Church people in Toronto a Reverend Kyle Haselden of Chicago warned the gathering that "United States culture has turned Christianity into a nationalistic cult of patriotism and respectability" and that the same threat existed in Canada.

Many will seriously doubt the possibility of this, or, at least, that any particular culture is responsible for it. We concur, however, that there is a trend toward certain people adopting Christianity as a vehicle for patriotism and respectability.

This practice has been due to the efforts of individuals rather than a culture, however. Too many have used Christianity and its unwritten laws of conduct to promote their own personal interest or to reinforce the narrow thinking and demands of some small but energetic group. They have sacrificed the love, charity, brotherhood and, if we may use the word apart from its onerous implications, toleration of Christian thought to promote a strangulation brand of holier-than-thou righteousness which is basically the antithesis of Christ's examples.

The thought of Christ washing the feet of a sinner either has never occurred to their warped and debased interpretation of what is the true Christian spirit or else it sends as much of an unpleasant shudder along their spinal column as would the thought of a churchman giving some innocent teen-ager a copy of Lady Chatterley's Lover.

Which brings us to what we consider a reinforcement for our analysis that it is individual human beings, not a culture (which is the end result of the mores and concepts created by a group of individuals), which is debasing the true concept of Christianity.

Even within their own group examples can be found of how individuals can misconstrue Christianity. Whether this action is deliberate or innocent on their part it is not within our power to ascertain. It does appear to be present nevertheless.

Christianity is a religion for free people. Christ himself noted that salvation or the adoption of the better way of life had to come from the individual himself—not from without. He recognized the weaknesses of man but He made no effort that we know of to attempt to legislate these weaknesses away. Rather He sought to show his fellow men the way of His own example, a better way of life.

Too many have adopted the garb or cloak of Christianity without having grasped the true spirit. They have attempted to present a respectable or patriotic appearance while promoting thoughts most unworthy of their presumed position.

It is this individual who is most in need of Christianity, even more so than those whom he is attempting to impress or change. His trend of thought has been affecting and influencing many who perhaps do not realize the true implication or nature of his actions.

This trend, as Mr. Haselden has in part identified, is a serious one and is quite evident in Canada and has been practised here for many years. It is up to those charged with the provision of setting a good example of Christian spirit to take a serious and searching look about them.

Christianity is a religion for free men and individuals to better themselves and others through practising and living the better way of life. This most important aspect of Christian life has been too long overshadowed in this world of today.

Perhaps a modern Reformation is required if mankind is to prosper spiritually.

No Turkish Delight

It is common practice, or so it seems, for people to criticize or accept the fact that the wheels of government grind exceedingly slowly at times (election years excepted). The criticism or acceptance depends, of course, as to what side of the fence one is on or whether one is a free thinker.

Our citizens should take heart at the sorry situation which fomented the recent attempt to overthrow the government in Turkey. This should make our own criticisms appear most insipid by contrast and our own government a veritable speed demon in the execution of its legislative duties.

The current Turkish National Assembly has been in session since November (of 1961) and has yet to pass a single act of legislation.

Santayana's Aphorisms

Baltimore Sun

The works of George Santayana, counting poetry, novel, and memoirs as well as philosophical books, must run to 20 volumes or more. Yet he is in the process of becoming, for the average general reader, a one-sentence author. That fate overtook Lord Acton — "Power always tends to corrupt . . ." must be quoted a hundred times for every passing glimpse into the essays and lectures. And, thanks to Hemingway, it has overtaken Donne, of course — "No man is an island . . . for whom the bell . . . it tolls for thee." In the case of Santayana, it is "Those who cannot remember the past are condemned to repeat it."

Santayana was probably not a deliberately aphoristic writer but his works abound in highly quotable short passages. Indeed many years ago, decades before his death in fact, a number of excerpts ranging from some of several pages to single sentences were collected by Logan Pearsall Smith in a volume titled "Little Essays" and although it, of course, included nothing from the many books the philosopher wrote late in life, it abounds in things quite as good as the observation on history.

Here is a handful on a variety of topics for the use of speakers:

"Beyond this planet and apart from the human race, experience is too little imaginable to be interesting."

"The mind celebrates a little triumph whenever it can formulate a truth."

"Fanaticism consists in redoubling your effort whenever you have forgotten your aim."

"For an idea ever to be fashionable is ominous, for it must afterward be always old-fashioned."

Had No Copy Of BNA Act

Montreal La Presse

For many years, M.P.'s journalists and cabinet ministers have been talking about bringing Canada's constitution, the British North America Act, back to Canada.

Only a few people knew exactly what all this meant. For most, the term "repatriating the constitution" remained an enigma.

But this month a great light dawned. Radio commentator Leo Trepanier discovered that Canada doesn't possess an official copy of the agreement made between the provinces under British rule nearly a century ago.

Archivists, historians, judges, parliamentary officials and the national library all looked high and low — but they couldn't find a copy of the precious document.

Finally, the Dominion archivist had to send to London for a photostatic copy of the celebrated Confederation agreement.

Canadian are truly a singular people. After almost 100 years, they still don't possess the original text of their contitution; they still haven't got an official flag; and, they're still squabbling among themselves over the national anthem, or national anthems.

Is it any wonder that national unity still hasn't been achieved, that patriotism is still more a provincial matter than a national one, that separatist movements are hatched by each new generation?

The Americans have built a vast stone monument to shelter their constitution, which they keep under glass in Washington for visitors to view.

And us? We have a photostat!

GOOD AND EVIL FACTORS

There are three evil things which we will encounter any place on this planet which we happen to visit. These three things are filth, conflict, and pain. There are three good things, however, which we can always be sure of confronting. These three good things are kindness, diligence and love. A clamorous conflict appears at all times to be going on between the good factors of life and the evil. These is a peace which passeth all understanding and this, the Bible confidently claims, is the result of religious faith. Surely the only peace we can have in this tumultuous world of ours is an inner peace.

There is no substantial peace between nations. There is no permanent peace between social classes. The dust is always rising, the curse is always being flung. Is it any use, we say to ourselves? Why not get off in an ivory tower somewhere, if we can manage to do so, and forget the whole sordid mass? Because of the good factors. This is sufficient reason for staying right down in the midst of the battle, exchanging blows when they have to be given, but trying to make it ten acts of kindness to one smiting of the heavy hand. Love will solve everything if we allow it to do so.

Don't forget those good factors. They have more potency than the evil factors and we can rely upon their power.

Although Bermuda has North America's lily market for the asking — and the taking — it cannot do much about it. Recipient of numerous wind falls since the war began, this colony soon discovered that one of these, the establishment of the United States defence bases played havoc with th lily supply. Bermuda has been deluged with orders from Canadian florists for supplies of lilies for this year's Easter season. Canada stopped buying lilies from Japan (former controller of 90 per cent of the world's market) about a year ago, and the United States decreased its imports in the spring of 1941. Most of the Island's lily crops have been planted and reaped on the fertile red clay of St. David's Island; nowhere else in the colony do lilies bloom so rapidly and so beautifully. The situation is complicated by the fact that a major part of this Island is now the site of the United States army base.

Reds Claim Beethoven

Montreal Gazette

Communist East Germany has made a new discovery, which will come as a considerable surprise to musicians and historians around the world. An East German magazine has informed its readers that the famous composer Ludwig von Beethoven, was a Communist.

It might seem that it would not make much difference what Beethoven's political opinions were (they were certainly not Communist since he died in 1827). It might seem that anyone who enjoyed his music would regard his political opinions as relatively unimportant.

But the East German authorities take a different view. To them it is a grave mistake to argue that "Beethoven is Beethoven wherever the program comes from." It is a particularly grave mistake for East Germans to listen to Beethoven broadcast by Western stations: "To listen to Beethoven over Rias is to approve a rape that freezes the blood in the veins." A good East German Communist should find it morally impossible and an aesthetic torture to listen to Beethoven, unless his music is played over a Communist radio station.

The article goes on to claim Beethoven as a prophet of the German Democratic Republic (East Germany): "Today Beethoven has his Germany, his German Democratic Republic. The work of this genius here lies in good hands." All in all, dedicated Communists had better be mighty careful to check their radio dial when they tune in a Beethoven program.

New Obstacle For Holmes

Montreal Gazette

Baker Street in London has been made a one-way street. It is all part of London's plans to speed up the movement of traffic. But, as everybody knows, it was on Baker Street that Sherlock Holmes lived—at number 221-B. What will such a new regulation do to the shade of Holmes?

When he slips out into the foggy night and hails a cab, he will be taken southward, no matter in which direction he may be headed. It is rather a problem, especially as he will be hurrying out, with his faithful Dr. Watson, saying to the doctor as they go, "There's not a moment to be lost!" But quite a few moments will be lost if they do not happen to be going in a southerly direction.

It is a problem, undoubtedly, even though one-way streets may seem quite "elementary."

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

I would like to extend my sympathy to your business in the loss of Mr. Len Taylor. My business with your paper is of a minor role, but on numerous occasions when I dropped into your office to have some work done on any community effort by Mr. Taylor's department, I always found him to be an exceptional type of personality in that no matter how small the job, he was always helpful with suggestions, and the matter received his whole attention and prompt fulfillment of the order could away be depended upon, as well as high quality of workmanship.

I feel the death of a man such as he is a great loss to the community, as well as to his family, with whom I am not acquainted.

I feel prompted to express my deep regret of his death as I think the community has lost one of its most sincere and cooperative business men, in community affairs.

Many Teen-Agers Worry Too Much Over Problems

I'm sorry for many of the teen-agers who write to me, worrying themselves sick over some fear or other which, in most instances, is actually a problem that can be very easily solved. The youngsters magnify symptoms too much.

The example today happens to be from a girl of 17 who is "ready to go insane" because she is afraid she has syphilis, even though she realizes, she writes, that "such a disease occurs most ofen through sexual contact, and I am a virgin."

(She's right; it is only very rarely communicated in any other way. It's possible but it would still require close and probably continued contact with a person who had the disease in communicable stage, so worrying about syphilis in the absence of sexual contact is far more futile than, for example, worrying about being hit by lightning when it's raining.)

Anyway, the girl writes that it's "impossible to talk to my mother," and that's something else I hear quite often. Whether the reticence is on the part of the parent, or the child, or both, in such cases doesn't matter.

The fact is that it's hard for a great many children to talk freely to their parents, and merely saying that the kids 'ought' to speak up is no answer at all. They think they can't, and that's that.

To continue about today's 17-year-old, she recites three or four "symptoms" which could — by abstract definition — be signs of syphilis. One, for example, is "skin trouble."

To someone who has merely read about signs of the disease, her symptoms are logical enough; she adds enough clues to make it clear to me that she hasn't anything that really resembles a sign of venereal disease. But she doesn't realize this!

So what's to be done about such teen-age worries, which can assume staggering proportions?

Well, it seems to me that perhaps one solution would be for youngsters (or this girl, in particular) to write a note to the family doctor. Maybe it's hard to speak up, face to face, but if she can write to me, she can also write to her own family doctor. Her letter to me would be excellent. Or she could modify it to add, "Next time I come in for anything, would you make whatever test is necessary, because I'm really worried about this."

I'm sure the doctor would go along with the little plot. If he's been in practice for more than two weeks, he's already learned a lot of family secrets which he has tucked away in the deepest part of his mind, to be forgotten.

The age of a patient isn't important. To a doctor, a confidence is a confidence, and will be kept as such. It's a means by which our children, I think, can stop worrying themselves crazy about things that could be solved and dismissed quickly, once brought into the open.

Grand mal is one type of epileptic convulsion. It is called that to differentiate it from "petit mal," which is an extremely brief (but often an extremely frequent) spasm which lasts only a split second.

Both are "convulsive disorders;" both often can be controlled indefinitely by use of various combinations of the fairly new anti-convulsant drugs which are a priceless boon to people with this sort of trouble.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

VALUES

Probably the greatest achievement in this life is for one to be able to properly appraise life's values.

For it is upon this appraisal that rest all the hope and desire of the human heart. One's measure of success and happiness is wholly dependent upon it.

So finite is the mind and so molten is the heart, however, that these values often lose their contour and as a consequence the individual is thrown into a state of groping, like a sheep that has wandered from its mates.

But the values remain, and if the appraisal has been properly made, they are bound to loom in the mind and heart and give courage and light when most needed.

He who lives from day to day without the faintest conception of these values, can look forward to nothing more than a life of floundering and disappointment.

Money, finery, streaks of fortune, convivial companions, flattery — these are only as the chaff which the wind drives away from the gold of the wheat, or as the tares which seek to choke the life of that which is good.

The navigator must know his course, and the only way that he can know it is to know his chart and to consult it all along the way.

That's something of how it is in this little journey of ours. The right values, once impressed upon the mind, though temporarily confused, come back.

But you have to have them in the first place. And they must be rightly appraised.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Botany-walking is the sister sport of bird-watching. It is another of the fast-growing hobbies associated with the cult of amateur naturalists. These are people of all ages who are a little weary of the confinement of our modern way of living, in which it is generally accepted that we do not move anywhere, not even over to the corner store, except on four wheels, and that we do nothing from morning to night that is not done with push buttons, switches or other manacles of the mechanized age.

To escape from these meshes of what so often feels like a great smothering net, many people are trying, one way and another, to come into intimate contact with the natural world which they only see in passing, as they swish at sixty along the highways and through the fields and woods. To be a bird-watcher you have to get out and walk. To be a botany-walker, you take a little book, like the Queen's Printer's Forest Flora of Canada," price, $1.50, or any one of the pocket manuals to be found in book shops, and at a slow pace, over field and woodlot, you undergo the fantastic experience of getting to know the name, nature, personality and individuality of every living thing rising out of the earth.

Varied Reaction Seen on State Of Economy

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal financial critic William M. Benidickson said Tuesday that "muddle, squabbling and disunity" in the government had slowed the Canadian economy.

"We have expedients rather than policies," he said in the Commons. "This is the main roadblock to confidence in the country today."

M. Douglas Morton (PC—Toronto Davenport) said the Liberals are blind to the growth that has taken place in Canada. "They are so blind they cannot see the new things this party has done."

They spoke in the closing stages of a two-day Commons supply debate.

Two non-confidence motions, both critical of economic developments, were defeated at the evening sitting.

DEFEAT LIBERAL MOTION

A Liberal party motion calling for policies to "ensure an adequate rate of growth in the Canadian economy" was defeated 133 to 39, with the Liberals gaining support from the eight-member CCF-New Democratic Party group.

But the CCF-NDP got no Liberal backing for their motion proposing expansion of "public and co-operative ownership" in utilities, resource development, monopoly situations and in major enterprises affecting the entire nation. The motion was defeated 164 to 8.

Mr. Benidickson said the Liberal party couldn't support the CCF-NDP proposal because it was too restrictive. Incentives were needed for both private and public enterprise, but emphasis on public and co-operative ownership would not create the greatest stimulus to the economy.

The Liberal critic quoted H. George De Young, government-appointed chairman of the National Productivity Council, to support his contention that the Canadian economy "has not even been standing still but has been going behind." Mr. De Young had described Canada as "the losing team limping sadly behind the competitive pack."

PC REPLIES

Mr. Morton said present problems had developed during the 22 years of Liberal government, but the Liberals during the years of prosperity had paid no attention to what was happening. The present government had inherited the causes of unemployment and had done much to correct them.

John R. Matheson (L—Leeds) said the Common Market countries have achieved a rate of sustained economic growth never before seen in Europe. Yet in Canada there had been "a frightening downtrend" in the economy.

Mr. Matheson accused the government of "an insidious campaign of anti-Americanism." It had raised tariffs against Britain, Canada's second largest market, and by various restrictions had made it almost impossible for Japan—Canada's fourth-best customer—to earn trade dollars to buy Canadian goods.

Walter Pitman (NDP — Peterborough) said he was disappointed that the Liberals decided against supporting the CCF-NDP amendment to the Liberal non-confidence motion.

CITES PACT VIOLATIONS

LONDON (Reuters) — Communist North Viet Nam's foreign ministry published a memorandum today citing numerous instances of violations of the 1954 Geneva agreements on Indochina by the United States. The Soviet news agency Tass said the memorandum reaffirmed North Viet Nam's charges of "undisguised military aggression" by the United States in setting up a military command in South Viet Nam.

NEW SERVICE — The first electronic stencil cutting service to be offered in the Quinte district will utilize the $2,000 machine shown above with Frank Walker, sales manager of the duplicating and stencil cutting division of the Hastings Typewriter Company. The machine, an Electro Rex line scanning stencil cutter, is capable of handling any problem or feat in cutting stencils, including both color and half-tone material.

Electronic Stencil Cutting Service First in City

An electronic stencil cutting service, the first to be offered in the Quinte district, has been established by the Hastings Typewriter Company of 23 Campbell Street it was announced by proprietor C. A. "Tony" Lepore yesterday.

Frank Walker, formerly of the Gestetner company, has been appointed sales manager of the duplicating division, Mr. Lepore stated, and will be in charge of this serivce as well as the sales and service of the machines used for it.

The machine, an Electro Rex electronic stencil cutter valued at $2,000, is capable of producing the ultimate in office duplicating technique. Technically it is capable of reproducing any material, especially photographs and line drawings, in an endless variety of original forms ranging from a direct copy of any printed material or artwork to a paste-up copy of the material wanted reproduced by a customer.

Fast service and efficiency at low cost will be the highlight of the new service. Local users will now be able to have stencils cut on either a same-day or an overnight basis where formerly anywhere from a couple of days up to a week was required when the nearest source of such service was Toronto.

The machine will cut stencils for any size of material up to legal foolscap size on stencils to fit any style or type of duplicating machine. It can also produce stencils for multicolor work where desired.

Mr. Walker describes the machine as ideal for producing work where high quality is required at a low price by either the occasional user or by an organization where intensive use is made of duplicated material. Due to a variable continuous line scanning system, adjustable from 125 to 750 lines per inch, the machine will even satisfactorily handle any type of previously reproduced material, including half-tone cuts, without any of the annoying side-effects which have plagued other designs available.

For those who have a heavy schedule of duplicating in their business the Electro Rex stencil cutter is available for sale and will be serviced by the Hastings Typwriter Company, he advised.

Bd. Recommends Railways Be Allowed to Eliminate Many Thousands of Jobs

By NORMAN WALKER

WASHINGTON (AP)—A presidential commission recommended today that labor unions give United States railroads broad leeway to streamline operations and eliminate thousands of jobs found unnecessary to run the trains.

But the commission, reporting to President Kennedy following a year-long study, said the carriers would have to be prepared to ease the blow on displaced workers by providing them with partial pay for periods up to three years as well as schooling for other jobs.

The report agreed with industry complaints that the railroads have been saddled with costly "featherbedding" rules and practices, requiring pay for unneeded work. Most locomotive firemen were found to serve no useful purpose and gradual elimination of their jobs was recommended.

TELLS OF PLIGHT

But the commission also had much to say about the plight of the U.S. rail workers, whose ranks have dwindled from more than 2,000,000 in 1920 to less than 800,000 today. The study was concerned only with the problems of the 200,000 rail operating employees—those manning the moving trains.

The report brought an angry dissent from the commission's union members who said it may lead to a country-wide strike. It was also disappointing to the rail industry, which had hoped for greater savings than will be immediately possible.

The rail industry quickly accepted the recommendations but the unions rejected them.

The Association of American Railroads, speaking for the industry, said the commission findings represent "an important contribution to the welfare of the country" and when made effective should stabilize employment and enable the carriers to improve service.

The unions said they stood to lose 80,000 jobs by conservative estimate and expressed determination that "the railroad operating employee will not become the 'sacrificial lamb' who must be destroyed in order to subsidize managerial incompetence."

The five unions involved called emergency meetings over the next two weeks to consider strike votes among their members.

These are the principal recommendations:

1. Abolish firemen gradually beginning next July 1 from all freight and yard service locomotive crews. This alone would wipe out some 35,000 jobs within a decade — at eventual savings and carriers have estimated at $250,000,000 a year. Firemen would continue on passenger train locomotives.

2. Give the railroads "an unlimited right to introduce technological change," subject to the continued pay and other protections provided for employees losing their jobs.

3. Eliminate crew change requirements at inter-divisional terminals.

4. Overhaul the complex operating employee pay system, so workers will be paid both for the time and mileage on their runs.

5. Shorten work hours for many workers.

6. Require more overtime pay to discourage management from working men long hours. This would help spread jobs.

France May Not Attend Conference

PRIS (Reuters) — Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville is "most unlikely" to attend the 18-nation disarmament conference opening in Geneva March 14, a foreign ministry spokesman said here today.

Although France is one of the countries scheduled to attend the conference, the spokesman said his country has still not decided whether it would even send an observer.

The United States and Britain have called for the conference to begin at foreign ministers level but Soviet Premier Khrushchev has countered with a proposal that it be started by heads of government in a disarmament "summit."

War Refugees In Korea in Bad Plight

OTTAWA (CP) — A soaring cost of living and unemployment combined with a fall in government assistance have placed Korean war refugees in a worse plight today than several years ago, says the director of a Canadian overseas assistance organization.

"A relatively very small number of Korean refugees have been able to rehabilitate themselves since 1953. Most of the others are more wretched today than a few years ago."

This opinion is expressed by Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, executive director, Unitarian Service Committee of Canada, in her annual report for 1961.

Dr. Hitschmanova, whose organization last year shipped $240,000 in food and clothing to Korea, said unemployment figures are constantly rising and prices increased by 30 per cent in 1961.

"United Nations and United States help have ceased to exist. Voluntary agencies and churches do what they can, but they can never hope to fill the gap, while aid from the Republic of Korea government is pitifully inadequate, since the largest portion of the Korean budget goes toward defence."

There was a continuing need for warm, practical, sturdy clothing for refugees.

"How can a refugee who has lost everything he once owned and now barely subsists in a shack in a slum, afford to buy an urgently-needed blanket or coat? He often does not have enough money to feed his family once a day."

AUTO VICTIM

The world's first recorded auto fatality was the death of W. H. Bliss, a pedestrian, in New York in 1895.

McMASTER — THOMPSON

Blue delphiniums and other lovely spring flowers adorned the chancel rail, and tall, white candles in candelbra the sanctuary on Saturday, February 10, at 3.00 p.m. in Lawrence Park Community Church, Toronto, for a very pretty winter wedding when the Reverend Douglas E. Bradford, united in marriage, Joan Thompson, of Toronto, daughter of Mrs. James R. Grand and the late Mr. Thompson, to Donald A. McMaster of Trenton, Ontario, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Douglas McMaster.

Given in marriage by her step-father, Mr. James R. Grand, the bride was radiant in her bridal gown of antique satin fashioned with a flowing panel of heirloom Chantilly lace from her grandmother's wedding dress. The princess line bodice featured a portrait neckline trimmed with appliques of matching lace, while the long slender sleeves ended in lily-points over the wrists. The full skirt cascaded into a chapel train. She wore a satin crown with veil of appliqued lace and carried a cascade of Johanna Hill roses mingled with hyacinth bells and trailing ivy.

Miss Jane Furness was maid-of-honor, and the bridesmaids were, Miss Susan Thompson, sister of the bride, and Miss Margaret McMaster, sister of the bridegroom. All the attendants were gowned alike in apricot duchess satin with semi-bell skirts in three-quarter length. The molded bodices featured scoop necklines and three-quarter length sleeves, while crushed satin roses accented the back waistlines. They wore satin rose hats and carried crescent bouquets of matching tones.

Mr. Conrad Rupnow, of Toronto, attended the bridegroom, while Messrs. Robert Thompson of Toronto, brother of the bride and George McMaster, brother of the bridegroom, were ushers.

Following the ceremony, the reception was held at the University Women's Club, where the guests were recived by the bride's mother, wearing a beige chiffon crepe with beige accessories and corsage of bronze roses. The bridegroom's mother assisted in the receiving line, wearing a light-blue taffeta sheath in two-piece design, with corsage of yellow roses.

Guests attended from Trenton; Palmerston; New Liskcard and Ottawa.

The bride previous to her marriage, was entertained by her grandmother Mrs. R. J. Wilson, at a luncheon held at the University Women's Club; at a trousseau tea given by her mother; at a rehearsal party held at the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Dr. and Mrs. Ross Lord; at a dinner given by Mrs. P. F. Grand, and Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Grand. Mr. and Mrs. J. R. M. Wilson also entertained in the bride's honor at a tea.

Two Policewomen Being Added to London Force

By WARREN McDOUGALL

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—A lawbreaker caught in the act here in the future will not always see a pair of boots under the flashlight. The constable may be wearing high heels.

Two policewomen are being added to the city force with others to follow.

However, they won't have the duties of their sisters in other cities. They will not stand on Friday nights at main intersections directing traffic or trudge the ticket beat.

"Ours will be strictly investigators," said Deputy Chief Finlay G. Carroll. "They won't direct traffic or check parking meters."

Dressed in plain clothes with a gun in their handbags, they will assist detectives or morality officers. The theory is that in some cases, especially ones involving women or children, they will be able to get the facts more readily.

FIRST FROM RCAF

The first policewoman, due to start work in March, came from the RCAF where she had a similar job. The second has yet to be selected.

Although qualifications for entry, with the exception of height, are the same as for a probationary constable, at least 70 unsuccessful candidates were interviewed during the last 10 months.

Police officials, anxious that the first women to join the force be the best, are wary about passing out the handcuffs and whistle.

The second problem? The attitude of the city's 218 hard-nosed policemen.

Chief Carroll said the men are bound to feel some resentment.

"There is always a little of it," he said. "Fifteen years ago there was the same feeling when girls were brought in to do office work. But it worked out well."

4,000 IN U.S.

To dispel any apprehension, police officials had Geraldine Schneider, a sergeant with the women's division in the Detroit police department, speak at a training seminar here.

Miss Schneider said there now are about 4,000 policewomen in the United States, and, far from being glamorous, their duties are "very hard work and at times very frustrating."

She said the Detroit policemen and their female counterparts now get along well, although the women were not welcome when their division was established in 1921. "The men felt, perhaps, that we were trying to take their jobs away . . ."

The story of how one individual helped an 18-year-old boy who had drifted into delinquency. The other film entitled "Community Responsibilities" was interesting.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

OVER-SENSITIVITY HINDERS THE WOMAN IN BUSINESS

Life probably was simpler when women stayed home and left it to their men to bring home the bacon and an occasional bottle of champagne.

Perhaps it was the desire to vary the diet and have champagne more often that drove women into the business world.

Whatever the reason, women now are an important part of the business community in almost every city. More girls are graduating from college and pursuing their professions after graduation, and more wives are working. In 1961, about 25 million women held jobs, compared to 50 million men workers, or a ratio of one woman to two men.

Obviusly, the cold practicalities of business life have created problems of behavior — and manners — that don't exist at home. The unwary working woman may be horrified to see professional pitfalls turn into personal disasters.

An employer told me the other day that he was thinking of "encouraging" a woman executive to look for another job. "Every time I criticize one of her ideas, or raise my voice, she breaks into tears," he said. "And if she doesn't cry, she looks like she's going to, and that's just as bad. I get the feeling that I'm insulting her womanhood when I speak my mind, as I have every right to do."

Sensitivity to criticism is only part of the story. Many women entering the "man's" world of business insist first and foremost that they be treated like women. This could lead to chaos in the business world if every man in it insisted on being treated like a man.

The fact is that everyone earning a salary has a job to do. While personalities often enter the picture, the average employer is solely interested in how well you are doing the work he is paying you to do.

I am not suggesting that women forget they're women the minute they enter the office building. But in the clash and exchange of ideas at the office, the woman worker must remember that she does not enjoy a special feminine status in the traditional give-and-take of a business discussion.

I know of a woman who is absolutely horrified if male employees get off the office elevator before she does. Another always experiences a sense of shock when she has to pull back her own chair at office conferences. Still another expects her fellow employees to bow from the waist when they meet her in the hallway. And a fourth retreats into a stony feminine silence if her ideas are not treated with proper resepct.

Of course, there is no excuse for any employee, executive or otherwise, to park his good manners when he hangs up his hat in the morning. But it is understandable that a man can be so wrapped up in his job that he will often overlook the little social graces he practices at home or after work.

So, gals, keep this thought in mind: With more and more women working, business life is becoming less and less of a man's world. But it hasn't become a woman's world yet.

QUESTIONING NEARS END

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interregation of U-2 pilot Francis Gary Powers today was reported nearing an end with an indicated conclusion he conducted himself about as well as possible on his spy-plane flight over Russia. Officials said he may appear in public within a few days — before a congressional committee with a press conference possibly to follow.

Machine Will Help Reduce Early Births

WINNIPEG (CP) — An electronic device known as a tocodynamoneter has been installed at a Winnipeg hospital in a step toward reducing premature births.

Doctors say that of all babies who die in the first 24 hours of life, at least 60 per cent of the deaths result from premature births.

They add that many patients at first thought to be in labor were actually contracting.

With the tocodynamoneter, labor can be more easily recognized. The $1,800 machine enables doctors to determine the amount of pressure developed inside the womb. From graph readings they can ascertain the type of contractions and whether there is anything abnormal.

It helps them determine when labor is premature and enables them to take measures to modify it by treatment.

The card report was given by Doris Pound and thank-you notes read. The group in charge of the next meeting was given. It was decided that the group sort the Sunday School papers to be sent away.

The president, Barbara Smith, tendered her resignation and Vera Mitchell agreed to take over her duties. Barbara will assume the duties of program secretary.

The worship period was conducted by Doris Ellsworth, Alice Day and Barbara Smith. They chose as their theme, "What is the Task of the Church?"

Refreshments were served and a social half hour enjoyed.

Frenchman More Convinced Than Ever That Science Can Take Gamble Out of l'Amour

By EVELYN KAYE

PARIS (Reuters)—A Frenchman who developed a mechanized mate selector 10 years ago is more convinced than ever that science can take the gamble out of l'amour.

Marriages with a psychological base are the best safeguard against the ever - increasing world divorce rate, said psychologist Louis Jentel, director of l'Institut d'Orientation Nuptiale.

The institute is staffed by psychologists and graphologists. Hopeful men and women are given expert psychological, graphological and psychomorphological analyses—and then paired with members of the opposite sex who perfectly complement their personality.

A confidential form sent to all applicants asks such questions as: "What are your principle reasons for living?" "What was the most moving moment in your life?" and "What are the principle qualities and faults of your best friend?"

More orthodox questions are asked about favorite pastimes, books and music, and types of vacations taken. The replies are analysed and collated on a punch-holed index card.

CARDS MATCHED

A typical "perfect harmony" description card—on pink paper for a girl—described Micheline as a non-religious, brown-haired Parisienne, with details of her occupation, salary, education, favorite pastimes and authors. She was described as "accurately intelligent, serious, orderly, sensitive, economic, punctual and discreet, with a gentle, sweet nature."

Micheline will receive blue cards with personality outlines of men who complement her sensitivity with understanding, appreciate her neatness and fidelity and would like to meet a petite, 21-year-old French secretary with grey-blue eyes.

Men who receive Micheline's —and other—cards then choose whom they want to meet and make a date.

Most applicants do get married, says Jentel.

Technologically - planned marriage advice demands greater financial outlay than the usual, haphazard methods of finding a marriage partner. The service costs 275 new francs (about $55).

A special speeded-up service is offered for "businessmen and women, doctors, lawyers, air hostesses, journalists and travellers"—people in a hurry.

Jentel himself met his wife in a tourist bus on vacation. But that was before the institute was founded.

"There is always a 50-50 chance that unpsychological marriages work out," he said, but added that he and his wife complemented each other perfectly.

Important notice to housewives who plan to buy an automatic washer within the next 6 months!

There are only two basic types of automatic washers. Those that load from the top and have a centre post gyrator (like the wringer washers). And those that load from the front and have no centre post. Front-loaders use a modern and completely different washing action to get your clothes thoroughly and uniformly clean. Read the check list below to see how the front-loading type saves you time . . . work . . . detergent . . . and water.

Friends Honor Bride-to-Be With Shover

WELLINGTON — Miss Linda McKenzie was hostess recently, at miscellaneous shower given in honor of Miss Karen Alyea at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Duncan McKenzie, Consecon Street.

The rooms were most attractive, decorated with pink and white streamers, pink bells, and white umbrellas. There were about 20 friends present.

Two contests formed the evening's entertainment with Mrs. Reg. Bishop and Miss Joanne Herrington, the winners.

Karen was seated in a decorated chair. Miss Linda McKenzie read a short address, while the guest of honor was showered with confetti falling from balloons overhead. The Misses Sharon McNeill, Kathy Alyea and Elaine Bishop carried in the many lovely gifts in a decorated basket.

After the gifts were opened and admired, Karen graciously thanked everyone and invited all to visit her in her new home.

Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess assisted by her mother, Mrs. D. McKenzie, Miss Diana Dick and Miss Rhonda Cleave.

Honored guests at the party were, the bride-to-be's mother, Mrs. Baden Alyea and her grandmother, Mrs. Ben Bishop.

Many Enjoy S.S. Supper

MINTO — The supper which was held in the Salem United Church hall on Thursday night, sponsored by the Sunday School, was well attended.

Following the meal the superintendent, Mrs. Mel Wickens, welcomed everyone, making special mention of Mr. and Mrs. Alton Haley, who were so kind to give of their time to show their pictures, also Mrs. Fargey and the pupils of the school who sang four numbers, after which each teacher presented to her class their award-winning pins.

Mr. and Mrs. Hadley showed a number of interesting pictures taken while in Africa which everyone thoroughly enjoyed.

A collection was taken and an encouraging amount realized for the Sunday School.

Changeover To Spring

by Mary Moore

The sight of pink rhubarb at the fruit market gave me such a lift I bought a big bunch and came home with it like a sheaf of flowers in my arm.

My little granddaughter Sue is with me for the month of February so I made half of it up into a bowl of steamed rhubarb for her and me for lunches (see below) and the other I made into a high class Rhubarb Bread Pudding. This I served for dessert on Sunday evening when Margy and Pete and my sisters were coming — they pronounced it good enough for you. That means pretty good indeed.

WEDNESDAY: (Guests)

Dinner Menu

Breaded Baked Lamb Chops; Mint Jelly; Dauphine Potatoes (see Tuesday); Buttered Mixed Baby Limas and Kernel Corn; Celery and Radishes; Cherry Cobbler with Cream; Coffee

RHUBARB BREAD PUDDING (serves 6):

1 cup white sugar, ¾ cup water, 2 tablespoons butter, 3½ cups (½" pieces) pink rhubarb, washed but not trimmed, 1 egg, beaten, ½ teaspoon almond extract, 4 cups soft, ½ " bread cubes, (5 standard slices of white or 60% whole wheat), 1 cup flaked or dessicated coccanut.

Make a syrup by combining sugar and water, and bring to a boil. Remove from heat. Add butter and rhubarb and cover tightly. Let stand until rhubarb is slightly tender, about 15 to 20 minutes. Drain and save liquid. Blend liquid with beaten egg, add almond flavoring. In a well-buttered casserole or baking dish, combine breadcubes and rhubarb in layers, sprinkling ¾ cup of the cocoanut between layers. Pour over egg mixture evenly. Sprinkle remainder of cocoanut evenly over top. Bake at 325 deg. Fahr. for 40 minutes or until firm and lightly browned. Serve warm with pouring cream or rich milk.

ROSY STEAMED RHUBARB (double boiler):

Mix 4 cups of washed, unpeeled, rosy, cut-up rhubarb with 1 cup granulated sugar. Turn into top of double boiler and cook over boiling water, covered, until tender — about 20 minutes. Do not add water. Do not stir again. Do not remove lid. It will be juicy and yet the pieces of rhubarb retain their shape. Pour into bowl, cover and chill if desired. If you have some very rich cream on hand pass some at the table for this.

NOTE:

If you are preparing an oven dinner, rhubarb may be mixed with sugar in above proportions, turned into a buttered baking dish and covered tightly and baked until tender, without stirring for about 30 minutes at 350 or 375 deg. Fahr.

NOTE 2:

If desired sprinkle with a little cinnamon or nutmeg.

Successful Living

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

I'm Just Not Good Enough

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—I am a young man 20 years of age. My biggest problem is that I am very shy of girls. I do not make a date with them because I figure I am not just not good enough.

Another thing is I haven't got much to talk about. It takes me a long time before I say anything to a girl. I've got an eye on a girl and I think she's got one on me; how can I make a date with her?—WORRIED.

DEAR WORRIED:—Many young fellars of 20 are scared stiff to ask a gal for a date. Say they would jump out the window first.

Second secret—Many young girls who want a date are scared too.

Solution—You learn by doing. Spruce up, straighten up, and speak up. Go ahead and be embarrassed. Next time it will be easier.

If you will write again, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope, I will send you the name of a little book which can give you some useful tips about dating.

• • •

DEAR DORIS:—I am a widow with only grade 9 education which I completed 36 years ago. I have always felt that I would like to make the world a better place to live in and love to try to figure out why people act the way they do, especially our present teen-agers.

I have thought of some kind of social or welfare work. Could you tell me what education would be required? —H. E. C.

DEAR H. E. C.:—For social work you need university graduation and one or two years of post-graduate study.

But there are other ways to help. My sister has a teen-agers' Sunday School class which keeps her jumping to find the answers. Another friend got into welfare work by being a volunteer with the Canadian Red Cross.

Find a place for yourself with the young people. You'll keep young in the bargain. Write again, sending name and address, for the name of some books on understanding teen-agers.

• • •

DEAR DORIS:—Could you tell me where I can get my birth certificate? I was born in England.

My mother is 86 years old. I cannot get her to understand that I need it as I am 64. I have lived in Canada since 1926 and I think I should try now to find it.—DAUGHTER JANE.

DEAR DAUGHTER JANE:—Have you got seven shillings and sixpence? Then send it in a money order to England and they'll send you back the proof that you were born.

Enclose full name, date and place of birth, name of father, name of mother (and her maiden name). The one you write to is the Registrar-General, Somerset House, London W.C. 2, England.

• • •

DEAR DORIS:—We have been told that when decorating the pews for the guests at a church wedding, only white flowers are correct. Can you tell us if this is true or is it permissible to have white ribbons with colored flowers? —MRS. D. R.

DEAR MRS. D. R.—Colored flowers with white ribbon are quite correct.

• • •

CONFIDENTIAL TO MRS. M. S.:—Since you think mail is being intercepted, write again to your daughter-in-law and tell her so, asking her to please write again and register her letter. Be sure she has your proper address. The first thing is to know how she feels about her husband. If you still don't hear from her, call her long distance at evening rates.

It looks as if the Other Woman was "saving" him for herself. Seek marriage counselling through your regional welfare officer.

• • •

(Is it a point of etiquette that bothering you? Ask Doris about it).

Family Honors Parents on 58th Anniversary

WELLINGTON — Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Weir, Hillier, gave a family surprise dinner party at their home on Sunday evening in honor of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Way who were celebrating their 58th wedding anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Way were surprised on their arrival to find their family all present and all sat down to a delicious dinner. The highlight feature was the lovely decorated anniversary cake.

The honored couple were presented with a beautiful bouquet of chrysanthemums.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. James Way; Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Weir and Linda; Mr. and Mrs. Warren Chase of Cobourg; Mr. and Mrs. Jay Sprague, Mountain View; Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Way, Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. Eddy Lott, Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. Roger Sprague Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. David Rowe, Ameliasburg and Mr. Bob Adair, Consecon.

Wife of Police Director Deeply Religious Woman

MONTREAL (CP)—Mrs. Joseph A. Robert, wife of Montreal's new police director, is a shy, deeply religious woman who has a special reason for being pleased she is back in Montreal.

"I'm one of 10 sisters and they all live here. So do my two brothers. That means a lot of visiting and that is what I missed in Hull."

Her husband accepted the director's job here last fall after 24 years as police chief in Hull, Que.

The Roberts have no children and that's another reason she likes Montreal. She can see all her nieces and nephews.

"Our mother brought us up to appreciate one another. There were so many of us we never really needed any outside friends. When we went to Hull I missed seeing them. Also I'm shy and don't make friends easily."

Born in Chambly Basin, Que., one of 18 children—six of whom have died—Mrs. Robert has relatively little contact with her husband's job as head of Canada's largest municipal police force.

NO SHOP TALK

"We never talk about police department work. What I know I read in the newspapers. He doesn't arrive home for dinner until 7:30 or eight o'clock. When he does, he wants to talk about other things."

She doesn't worry about any danger that might be associated with police work. "First of all, I feel my husband is well able to take care of himself. And it would be no way to live. Terrible things happen to people who are in other professions too."

She hates receptions but "I go because my husband wants me to."

Mrs. Robert starts each day by going to mass. She plays bridge and swims as often as she can. She has a yen for travel and "can pack a suitcase at a moment's notice." She hopes to visit Europe this year.

POLICE DIRECTOR'S WIFE —Mrs. Joseph A. Robert, wife of Montreal's recently appointed police director, comes from a family of 18 and lives a quiet religious life. She is not fond of civic or other social functions. She has no children herself but spends time with the families of her nine sisters and two brothers living in Montreal. (CP Photo)

Family Court Topic at W.R. Club

The February meeting of the College Hill Wedding Ring Club was held in the lower auditorium of the church with Don Dafoe presiding.

Mr. and Mrs. L. McMullen's group was in charge.

The theme of the devotional was "We Are Ambassadors, Therefore, on Behalf of Christ."

Boyd Moorcroft favored with a solo, entitled "The Love of God."

Mrs. E. Waite introduced the guest sepaker, Mr. D. I. MacKinnon, who spoke on "The Operation of the Family Court." The topic was interesting to all as the members were bringing up growing children.

A delightful lunch of jellied desserts, coffee and sweetbreads were served.

HEAVY INFLUX

Canada's peak immigration year was 1913 when more than 400,000 settlers arrived.

ONTARIO

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

about your

ONTARIO HOSPITAL INSURANCE

The need to obtain a bed in hospital is a matter of urgency to a seriously ill person. It is vital, therefore, that every hospital bed in Ontario be used only when it is essential in the treatment of a patient. Proper use of hospital beds is a matter of concern to every resident of the province.

To help make more hospital beds available...

the Commission now will provide Ontario Hospital Insurance benefits to an insured person who receives hospital care, as an out-patient, for which he or she, otherwise, would require admission as an in-patient to stay in hospital overnight.

IMPORTANT

These benefits will be provided only if the hospital has the required facilities and after these facilities have been authorized for such out-patient use by the local hospital board on the advice of its medical staff.

Here are the details:

- Benefits will cover only the hospital charges for medical and surgical treatment procedures which, otherwise, would require the patient to be admitted to hospital. Examples of these procedures are certain minor operations, electro-shock treatments, blood transfusions, etc.
- It is up to the patient's doctor to decide whether the treatment will be given on an in-patient or out-patient basis.
- Visits to established regular clinics in hospital out-patient departments are NOT covered.

Extension of EMERGENCY Out-Patient Benefits

Effective March 1, 1962, when an insured person has received emergency hospital treatment for a fracture within 24 hours of an accident, Ontario Hospital Insurance also will cover subsequent out-patient services for check X-rays and the change or removal of cast, until treatment of the fracture is completed.

Hospital treatment for emergency conditions other than fractures will NOT be covered beyond the first visit to hospital within 24 hours of an accident.

POINTS TO REMEMBER

1. Ontario Hospital Insurance in-patient benefits cover the regular and usual hospital services (use of operating room, X-rays, drugs, laboratory services, etc.) in standard ward accommodation for as many days as such services are medically necessary.
2. Dependent children cease to be covered under the parents' certificate when they reach age 19, or marry. They must then register separately at the applicable Single or Family premium. Application forms are available at all hospitals, most banks, and all Commission offices.
3. Married persons must pay the Family premium.
4. There is no change in Ontario Hospital Insurance premiums: they remain at $2.10 a month for a single person and $4.20 a month for a family. More than 6,000,000 Ontario residents (over 95% of the people) are now insured in the plan.

Ontario Hospital Insurance does NOT cover...

- any hospital charges for semi-private or private accommodation.
- any diagnostic services which are not part of insured treatment procedures or which do not, by themselves, normally require admission as an in-patient.
- any medical, surgical, or private-duty nursing fees, take-home drugs, home care, or ambulance and other transportation charges.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Ira F. — I dread coming home to the human question mark I'm married to.

Penny F. — All I do is express the natural interest a wife should have.

• • •

Ira F. — Maybe the Council can keep Penny quiet long enough for me to get in an appeal. After seven months of marriage I dread coming home. I'm married to Mrs. District Attorney. She meets me with a battery of questions: "How's business? Who'd you have lunch with? What'd you eat? How many cocktails? Did you stop somewhere or come straight home? How come Mr. Jones got in an hour earlier?..."

All I need is a Bible to put my left hand on, while I raise the right one. Home is a regular witness stand.

Well, I've rebelled. I plead the Fifth Amendment. I either don't answer her any more or I say I don't know. She doesn't like my silent treatment but I don't like her inquisition. A man has to have some private life.

• • •

Penny F. — Is this what you call sharing? Ira is so secretive, so close-mouthed that you'd think he was a fugitive and I was the F.B.I. on his trail. No matter what I ask him, he answers me in a monosyllable. Naturally I have to ask him again, just to get the little information I need so I know where I stand. A wife must know a few facts so she can organize her household and make plans.

And besides asking Ira practical, straightforward questions, I want to know more about his work. I'm very interested. I try to draw him out, get him to talk. What else should a loving wife talk about? Most of the time I'm just trying to work up an interesting conversation. Why should it annoy him? How would he like it if I just said, "Hello. Here's your supper"?

• • •

The Council: That last question Penny, was a leading one, and a good lawyer must avoid them. In Ira's present mood, he'd answer, "Yes, I'd like it fine if all you said was, "Hello, here's your supper." But there'll come a time, once you learn how to question and he learns how to answer, when he'll prefer hearing, "Hello. How are you?"

You're impaled on the horns of a familiar debate between newly-weds: what's "sharing" and what's invasion of privacy? The more you press for sharing, the further Ira retreats into his precious "private life." Again we invoke the basic law of science: To every action, there's an equal and opposite reaction. Your action is bombardment. I'ra's reaction is flight.

How can matters be improved so that Penny becomes nice-to-come home-to and Ira welcomes her show of interest? First, by Penny watching her tongue. Letting it wag mindlessly can become grating to a weary, preoccupied man. Next, her questions must be kindly and appropriate, not tricky! "How many cocktails?" isn't the question she needs to help her organize and plan. Insisting upon a minute-by-minute accounting isn't exactly pleasant conversation.

Third, Penny must show that she's not just picking Ira's brains but is really interested, really listening and really impressed by the information he shares. What's the use of him telling her business is bad if it makes no noticeable effect on her spending program?

Once the tone of Penny's question changes from "Don't try to put anything over on me," to "I'm on your side, so let me help you," Ira will open up more. She may not even have to lead into a conversation. Usually a man will share confidences with a wife he trusts, without being pumped. That's one of the built-in bonanzas of marriage, wherein joys are doubled and troubles are halved.

Paris Clothes More Fitted And Shaped

By JOY MILLER

NEW YORK (AP)—It'll be a great spring for North American women—and their admiring men—who are in favor of feminity in fashion.

Paris designers have caught up with them.

Pictures just released of the spring - summer collections of French couturiers show that women who insist on looking like women will find themselves in the height of fashion.

French designers haven't been able to refrain from a little Gallic lily-gilding. Hence they bared and belted and beruffled in individual, yet all quite French, definitions of femininity.

MORE FITTFD

Generally, Paris clothes for spring are more fitted and shaped to the body. Tops are small, but skirts run the gamut—square shaped, controlled panel, flare, pleated, gored and circular.

Decolletage is pretty sexy on occasion, with Nina Ricci's plunging necklines the most open to censorship. Marc Bohan of Dior revives the deep V neckline, while Yves St. Laurent comes up with a bra-cut front and completely bare back for short evening dresses. Maggy Rouff shows a side decolletage extending from under the arm to the waist.

Leather, buckled and often wide belts cinch everything—dresses, suits, coats—at almost any place from the hips to under the bosom. Sometimes they nip waists to the vanishing point.

Frilly Victorians would look understated alongside many of the French fashions. Ruffles riffle down backs, wind around hems, rise from hemline to waist, float in tiers, frame necklines.

The Experts Say

Common Fault in Preparing Fish Is Overcooking It

By EDNA BLAKELY

OTTAWA (CP) — With Lent beginning March 7, many homemakers will be buying and cooking more fish.

The most common fault in preparing fish is overcooking it say home economists at the consumer branch of the fisheries department.

"Fish is really a convenience because of its short cooking time," said Margaret Myer, who heads the home economics section. But when it's overcooked it becomes dry and tough.

"It's easy to tell when fish is cooked because the color changes. White fish becomes much whiter and pink fish lessens in color. The flesh flakes readily and is easily pierced with a fork."

Like meat, some fish is processed in government-approved plants. Fish from these plants is stamped with a maple leaf. Fresh fish bears the label Processed Under Government Supervisor and frozen fish is marked "Canada Inspected."

GLAZED FILLETTS

Ingredients: 2 pounds fish fillets; 1 tbsp. prepared mustard; 3 tbsps. lemon juice or juice of 1 lemon; ½ tsp. grated lemon rind; ¼ cup brown sugar; 1 tsp salt; thin lemon slices.

Cut fillets in serving size pieces. Marinate fillets for half an hour in mixture of mustard, lemon juice, lemon rind, brown sugar and salt. Place fillets on greased broiler rack and place two to four inches from heating unit. Brown one side of fillets. Turn, baste and brown the other. During the last few minutes of cooking time, top with lemon slices. The glaze should bubble and brown. Allow 10 minutes cooking time for each inch thickness for fresh fish. If fish is frozen, lower broiler rack in oven and double the cooking time. Makes six servings.

All species of freshwater fish can be used for the lemon glazed fillets. Probably the best known to homemakers are perch, pickerel, pike, smelt, trout and whitefish.

QUICK GOURMET MEAL

Gourmet-fried pickerel is the enticing name for another recipe.

Pickerel appears on the market both fresh and frozen and is known by a variety of names including wall - eye and pike-perch. In French Canada it's known as dore.

Ingredients: 2 pounds pickerel fillets; 1 tsp. salt; ½ tsp. garlic salt; 1-3 cup instant mashed potato powder; ¼ cup fat for frying; ½ cup chicken broth; 1 tbsp. chopped parsley; and 1 tbsp. chopped green onion.

Cut fillets into serving - size portions. Add salt and garlic salt to instant mashed potato powder. Dip fish in potato mixture. Brown fish on both sides in fat. Reduce heat and add remaining ingredients. Simmer in a covered frying pan for five to 10 minutes until fish is almost cooked. Remove cover for last few minutes of cooking for a crisp coating. Serves six.

Want to Buy a Dream Home? All You Need Is $350,000

TORONTO (CP)—For sale Dream house. Price $350,000.

The David Rushs are looking for buyers. Onetime millionaire Rush is faced with interim receivership of his company. John Northway and Sons Ltd., a department and variety store concern being pressed by creditors.

For years, Mrs. Rush says, she and her enterpreneur husband drove past a lovely 2½-acre wooded location in Toronto's plush Bayview area.

"I'd say 'Dave, that's where I want my house.' He'd say 'It's too far, I don't want to commute.' "

Last summer, she says, he gave in. Mrs. Rush took over as designer and assistant architeot of her dream home, a long and pleasant two-storey structure with Corinthian pillars at the entrance.

Now for sale, it is still not fully furnished, though most people wouldn't complain.

WHITE MARBLE

There are floor-length windows with a view, upstairs and down. White Italian marble steps lead into the 20-foot hall, partly paved in marble. A wide staircase with wrought iron balustrade rises from the hall.

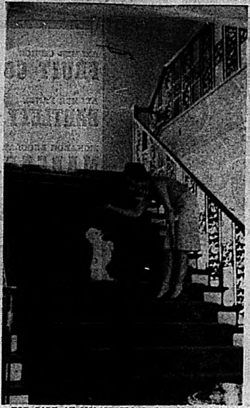
"I had dreamed of my daughter coming down these stairs the day she was married," Mrs. Rush says.

Paintings by Turner and Constable hang in the hall. A terrace of Indiana cut limestone has a long view of lawn and city in the background.

"I thought all these things, this house, these pictures, would be something to leave our children . . . My people came from Russia. They lost everything, so they have nothing to leave me."

Some other appurtenances of the house A Roman type sunken bath with 22 - carat gold swan-shaped faucets; marble-topped dressing table and basin with 22-carat faucets; servants, quarters; three-car garage; radiant heat; tennis court; a priceless Louis XIV sideboard and hall table in gold, ebony and tortoise shell.

There also is a small white poodle called Gigi, not for sale.



FOR SALE AT $350,000—This is the wide plush-carpeted staircase in the suburban Toronto home of onetime millionaire David Rush which now is up for sale for $350,000. The home also features 22-carat gold faucets and a sunken Roman-type bath. Mrs. Rush, who designed her "dream home," plays with pet white poodle Gigi on the stairs which rise from a 20-foot hall partly paved in marble. (CP Photo).

TIBERIAS, Israel (AP)—Two Jewish synagogues dating back to the fourth and sixth centuries have been excavated at the site of ancient Hammat by archeologists of the Israeli antiquities department. The floor of the older synagogue was decorated in Hellenistic style with Hebrew and Greek inscriptions, indicating that the place was used by the Sanhedrin, the ancient Jewish trial court.

Proper Portrait of Late Premier R. B. Bennett May Soon Be Hung in Gallery

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliament may yet have a proper portrait of the late R. B. Bennett to fill the only gap in the gallery of former Canadian prime ministers.

The only portrait of the Conservative prime minister of 1930-35 known to have been painted from life now is hanging in Prime Minister Diefenbaker's private office in the East Block.

Its donor himself admits it is "very bad," and it is much smaller than the massive oil portraits of the other 11 prime ministers framed in heavy gilt and displayed in the rotunda of the House of Commons.

If a new portrait of Mr. Bennett is presented to Parliament, it will be obtained as the result of a curious set of circumstances involving one of Mr. Bennett's closest friends and one of his severest critics.

OFFERS PAINTING

Lord Beaverbrook, the British publisher and philanthropist, who remained one of Mr. Bennett's intimate associates after the former prime minister took up residence in England and became a viscount, has offered to provide "a posthumous painting" suitable for the public corridors of the House of Commons.

The offer was made in a letter to Senator Jean - Francois Pouliot (L — Quebec), who started two years ago asking why there is no Bennett portrait on Parliament Hill.

Senator Pouliot, as an opposition member of the Commons, was one of the keenest interrogators of Prime Minister Bennett and repeatedly denounced him and his regime long after the Liberals regained power in 1935 and Mr. Bennett had retired to England.

Today, the senator has mellowed and regards himself and Lord Beaverbrook — whom he doesn't think he has ever met— as the closest old friends of the late Mr. Bennett left in public life.

Lord Beaverbrook arranged to have a Bennett portrait sent to Ottawa last year from the University of New Brunswick, of which the publisher is chancellor.

NOW HANGS IN OFFICE

Prime Minister Diefenbaker told the Commons Tuesday the painting was presented to the people of Canada and now hangs in his office.

Senator Pouliot's contention is that there should be a Bennett portrait hung in the public halls of Parliament. He has received a letter from Lord Beaverbrook, which he made public in the Senate Tuesday night, offering a new one.

"The painting of Bennett is very bad," Beaverbrook said. "If a posthumous painting would suit the corridors of the House of Commons, I would be glad to provide it."

Columbia River Group Asks Renegotiation of Treaty

VANCOUVER (CP)—A group of professors called Tuesday for sweeping changes in plans for the Columbia River hydro development and a delay in construction of the $880,000,000 Peace River power project.

In a report on a three-month study of British Columbia's power resources, the University of B.C. group made these recommendations:

Re-negotiate the international Columbia treaty with the United States to permit indefinite postponement of construction of the proposed Mica Creek Dam, one of three storage dams to be built under terms of the agreement, or alternatively;

Ratify the present agreement if surveys show power could be generated at Mica;

Delay the Peace project, already launched by the provincial government, until it can be assured that its costs compare favorably with those for the Columbia and two other hydro sources in B.C.

The other two are a high-level dam at Moran, on the Fraser River and the Hat Creek coal reserves for steam - generated power.

The survey was made by five professors and E. F. Wilks, a retired mechanical engineer.

The university group comprised law professor C. B. Bourne, Dr. J. D. Chapman, professor of geography, civil engineers Dr. Eugen Ruus and J. F. Muir, economist A. D. Scott and Dr. H. B. Warren, a geologist.

The treaty for the proposed $458,000,000 Columbia project calls for construction of dams in Canada which would store water for generation of power in the United States. Canada would recieve 50 per cent of the power generated as a result of such storage.

While arguing with the federal government over the financing of the Columbia project the B.C. government has instructed the Crown-owned B.C. Electric Company to proceed with the Peace River development.

Labor Trying to Recruit 500,000 White-Collar Men

OTTAWA (CP) — Organized labor in Canada has decided to embark on an all-out drive to recruit more than 500,000 white collar workers into trade unions.

In what may prove to be an historic decision, some 20 major unions agreed Tuesday to pool their efforts through the Canadian Labor Congress for a long - range, co-ordinated campaign of white collar organization.

Labor's new goal, which will stand for many years, is to provide collective bargaining for the expanding elite of the labor force, the workers of the automation era.

To reach the white collar class, labor may have to abandon some of its time-hallowed traditions, refashion a brighter public image and develop trained, sophisticated organizers.

PLAN SLOW PROCESS

The campaign is not planned as an overnight "blitz" but as a slow experimental process of developing new methods of approach and communication with white collar workers.

The first step was creation of a six-man steering committee to draft preliminary strategy. A formal committee of major unions will likely be established later to advise the CLC executive council on the new campaign.

The congress is also expected to set up a special agency within its department of organization to direct the general attack.

CLC President Claude Jodoin indicated Tuesday that some of these preliminary steps may be achieved within the next six weeks, in time for a general report to the congress convention in mid-April in Vancouver.

Queen Is Not Expecting Says Prince Philip

LA PAZ, Bolvia (Reuters)—The Duke of Edinburgh, asked by Bolivian reporters at a press reception here Tuesday night if the Queen was expecting another baby this year, replied: "No, it is not possible."

Bolivian journalists asked the question after rumors were published here that the Queen was expecting a fourth child.

One reporter asked him why he had not brought his brother-in-law, Lord Snowdon, with him on the tour as official photographer.

The duke said "he has another job."

Then he added:

"Britain is a democracy. I get what photographer I'm given."

Asked what he thought of Lord Snowdon as a photographer, the duke replied "I think he is very good, but what answer do you expect me to give to that question?"

The duke arrived in this capital city, nearly 12,000 feet up in the Andes, to an enthusiastic welcome from 150,000 Bolivians Tuesday.

It was the greatest welcome he has recieved on his tour of Latin American countries.

President Victor Paz Estenssoro greeted him at the railway station and the two men drove in an open car along a four-mile route lined with people shouting a welcome to "El Principe Felipe."

One police officer said "These are the biggest crowds I can ever remember in La Paz."

Convicted Sons Of Freedom Get Long Teams

NELSON, B.C. (CP)—Prison terms ranging up to 14 years were imposed Tuesday on six more convicted Sons of Freedom Doukhobor terrorists by Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton, bringing to 20 the number imprisoned since January for burning and dynamiting in the Kootenays.

Mr. Justice Wootton said society must be protected as he imposed a 10-year sentence on Tim Jmaeff, 46-year-old sect youth choir leader and father of five, for a dynamite attack on the former RCMP building here in January, 1961.

Jmaeff, who Monday told the special assize court that the Sons of Freedom Fraternal Council had been supporting terrorism in the Kootenays, was given a further four years concurrent for illegal possession of dynamite. Both sentences are concurrent with one for 12 years given Jmaeff at an earlier trial for placing a bomb on a railway track.

Paul Zaroubin, 23, who police said was Jmaeff's chauffeur on the night of the dynamiting, was given six years for his part in the blast and four years for illegal possession of explosives. The sentences are concurrent with five years imposed previously for illegal possession of explosives in connection with a bomb found under a church at the village of Wynndel in April, 1961.

Brothers Mike and Larry Laren were given six years for blasting a power pole in the Slocan Valley in December, 1961, and a further four years concurrent for illegal possession of explosives.

For their part in the same power pole blast, Pete Legebokoff and George Perepolkin were given the same concurrent sentences — six years and four years.

Secret Mission For Satellite Put in Orbit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Discoverer 38 rocketed into orbit from nearby Vandenberg Air Force Base Tuesday on a secret mission.

The United States Air Force did not disclose the satellite's altitude nor the length of time it takes to whirl around the earth from pole to pole.

The Thor-Agena B combination usually reaches an orbit ranging from 100 to 500 miles high and completes a full swing in about 90 minutes.

Sometime in the next four days the rocket's orbital second stage is supposed to eject a capsule which Hawaii-based planes will try to catch in the air.

The record for this feat to date: Seven capsules caught in the air; four fished from the sea.

The air force would not say what kind of instruments the satellite is carrying.

MARKS BIRTHDAY

ROME (AP)—Elizabeth Taylor celebrated her 30th birthday Tuesday night at a dinner party given by her husband, Eddie Fisher, at a swank Roman restaurant. Miss Taylor seemed recovered from the attack of poisoning that sent her to hospital 10 days ago.

Mrs. Fran Miller's Rink Wins Ontario Intelligencer Trophy Second Year in Row

Winning a trophy at a bonspiel, whether it be in a man's or woman's tourney, takes some doing but when a rink wins the same trophy two years in succession they must have something on the "ball." This is what happened at the women's open spiel held at the Quinte Curling Club on Monday and Tuesday of this week. Mrs. Fran Miller of Kingston with Mrs. Laurie Guest, Mrs. Dot Vince and Mrs. Carrie Cole, captured the beautiful Ontario Intelligencer trophy and replicas, defeating a rink of Mrs. Geneva Muir, Mrs. Flo Reston, Mrs. Mavis McLean with Mrs. Gretta Peverley as skip, from the local club, in the final match of the spiel, 9-3.

Incidentally, the women curlers of the Quinte Club are getting better with each succeeding year. In the recent spiel the club had three rinks in the finals of the three events staged and two of them obtained convincing victories in the final matches. A rink of Mrs. Madge Cowley, Mrs. Hazel McNevin, Mrs. Edna Hume with Mrs. Dorothy Creeggan as skip, won the second event and accompanying prizes. They defeated a rink of Mrs. Barbara Neild, Mrs. Phoebe Goodfellow, Mrs. Sadie Bletcher with Mrs. Emma Lou Sands of the Peterborough Golf and Country Club. Another rink of Mrs. Jean Riley, Mrs. Heather White, Mrs. Agnes Benn with Mrs Jane Sheppard as skip, made a rink of Mrs. Ev Constantine, Mrs. Phil Fisher, Mrs. Marg Wight with Mrs. Grace Saint of the Cataraqui Club in Kingston quit after five ends of the ten-end final with the count at the time 11-0 against her.

At the conclusion of the games Claude D. Tice, representing the publisher and managing editor of The Ontario Intelligencer, presented the trophy and replicas to the winning rink. In making the presentation he complimented Mrs. Miller on winning the trophy in succeeding years and also the Belleville rinks for their excellent showing in the spiel. Mrs. Mary Mott, general chairman of the spiel, with co-convener Mrs. Martha Booth, and a committee of Mrs. Dorothy Walsh, Mrs. Vera Fairman, Mrs. Agnes Walker, Mrs. J. E. (Sunny) McArthur, Mrs. Louise Johnson, Mrs. Grace Carruthers and Mrs. Lenore Bateman, were also thanked for their organizational work.

OUTLINED HISTORY

Mr. Tice spoke of the early difficulties in forming the club in this city and stated that Mr. Charles Miller, husband of the winning skip, had assisted materially in the work of formation of the club. Mrs. Miller, in thanking the club stated that her rink had enjoyed the hospitality and good fellowship in the Quinte Club and that the members of her rink were especially grateful for the beautiful replicas. "They are delightful and will find a place on the mantel piece" said Mrs. Miller. Continuing she said "We will be back next year to defend this trophy". Mrs. Miller's rink had only one change from last year, Mrs. Andy McFie being injured while playing at Trenton the week previous to the Quinte spiel.

Mrs. Jean Smith, president of the women's section of the club, was master of ceremonies and thanked her committee for the wonderful job and the curlers for their attendance. She hoped that all had a good time and that they would be back again next year. Mrs. Peverley's rink made the game close until the seventh end when Mrs. Miller scored a big five and that was the ball game. Until that time Mrs. Peverley was only two down but her rink apparently lost weight and with the front end plugged up it was hard to get into the circles. Mrs. Sheppard had a runaway in her match and at the end of five ends the opposition called it quits for the night. Mrs. Creeggan in the other final event started away on the right foot with a two-ender and never looked back.

During the spiel there were many social functions at the several homes while on Tuesday afternoon, a tea hour was held for the visitors, which was very much appreciated. In all the spiel was a decided success and already plans are being made for a bigger and better spiel next year. The results of the draws on Tuesday:

Argue Prepared To Let Name Stand in Riding

REGINA (CP)—Hazen Argue said Tuesday he is prepared to let his name stand for the Liberal nomination in Assiniboia constituency.

Mr. Argue has represented Assiniboia for 17 years as a member of the CCF party. He quit the CCF-New Democratic Party group last week and joined the Liberal party.

A Liberal nominating convention has been set in Assiniboia for March 20.

"I would prefer to run in Assiniboia constituency — that is my first choice—but my possible nomination is conditional upon the wishes of the Liberal party supporters there," Mr. Argue said in an interview.

He said he considered it "presumptuous" for the Assiniboia NDP Constituency Association to ask for his resignation on party-switching grounds.

The association Monday asked Mr. Argue to resign and asked Prime Minister Diefenbaker to call an immediate byelection should he quit.

Outdoor Life Is Good, But This!

PAWTUCKET, R.I. (AP)—For three years now, Richard Scott, 15, has been sleeping outdoors, winter and summer, without even a hint of a cold.

Each night at bedtime he says good-night to his parents, walks outdoors and crawls into a sleeping bag in an open lean-to in the backyard.

He has awakened on mornings after stormy nights to find a foot of snow covering his sleeping bag. And some nights it has become cold enough to freeze the alarm clock he takes with him. But he still would rather sleep outside than indoors.

Young Scott got into the habit when he decided three years ago the house was "too warm and stuffy" and he'd better do something about it.

He doesn't even use a campfire. "That's cheating," he says.

MAP IN ANTARCTIC

CHRISTCHURCH, New Zealand (Reuters) — Three ski-equipped United States Navy Neptune planes covered 106,040 square miles of previously unexplored territory on photo-mapping flights in the Antarctic aviation season which has just ended, American Operation Deep-Freeze headquarters announced here today.

Peace and Independence Will Not Solve Problem of Feeding, Clothing Algerians

Editor's note: Dave Oancia of the London bureau of The Canadian Press went to Algeria to report on the explosive situation there. In this story he describes the economic crisis that haunts the territory.

By DAVE OANCIA

ALGIERS (C) — A hidden crisis lurks beneath the violence and death that attracts most of the attention in strife-torn Algeria.

Stated starkly, it is the problem of ensuring enough food, clothing, shelter and other necessities for a growing population.

Peace and independence won't solve the problem. Paradoxically, a cease - fire between France and the Moslem rebels may mean that conditions will begin to deteriorate.

France now underwrites the territory's huge trading deficit and pumps millions of francs into public works programs and economic expansion.

The operations of the 440,000-man army against the Moslem nationalists have also contributed to the look of prosperity, bustle and activity seen in the main towns and cities.

These men had to be paid and maintained and the money thus spent does much to keep the cafes, hotels, stores and other service industries busy.

When many of them are withdrawn, as is expected under the cease - fire agreement, this source of income will disappear.

OIL PROVIDES BOOST

Income from oil and natural gas production in the rich Sahara fields is expected to increase rapidly during the coming years. This now accounts for roughly one-quarter of Algeria's exports.

This revenue will provide some of the capital needed for economic expansion to provide more jobs. But few believe it will even begin to approach the amount needed for new plants to create jobs and to pay for the imports an independent Algeria will need.

The general belief here is that outside sources will have to be tapped if a drastic austerity program is to be avoided.

And the availability of these will depend on the makeup of the new Moslem-dominated government expected to take over after 130 years of French rule.

Private investors won't put a franc into new plants until the current wave of violence expected to end with independence is a matter of history.

Even when this has happened, the foreign sources will likely hold off until they are satisfied that their capital will be safe.

SEEKS FRENCH TIES

Authorities predict that the anticipated Algerian government will want to maintain close ties with France.

What worries some Western observers, however, is the possibility that the small, but militantly powerful, left wing of the Algerian nationalist group may gain control and turn to Communist nations for help. This is what the European settler population fears.

Uncertainty is being reflected more and more in this city's business life.

The big hotels, garages and stores pay protection money both to the illegal Secret Army Organization, backed by the Europeans, and the Moslem nationalists' grouping.

Bankers here report hotel and restaurant activity has dropped by as much as 60 per cent. Yet this has not prevented operators of some of the biggest establishments, patronized by an international clientele, from raising prices.

Stores say sales of consumer durables ranging from stoves to vacuum cleaners have dropped drastically during the last year. In 1960 car sales were said to total only half the previous year's figure.

In the countryside conditions are described as virtually stagnant. Farmers are reported to be abandoning their lands in parts of Eastern Algeria.

Danube-Swabians Alliance Wants Payment for Loss Of Property in 3 Countries

OTTAWA (CP) — The government agreed Tuesday to do what it can to help some 60,000 Canadians of German descent collect compensation for properties seized by the Communist governments of Yugoslavia, Hungary and Romania.

External Affairs Minister Green gave this assurance after meeting with nine representatives of the Alliance of Danube - Swabians, an organization with branches in Toronto, Montreal, Kitchener, Leamington, Ont., Delhi, Ont., and Windsor, Ont.

Peter Seifert of Delhi, president of the alliance, told a press conference after the meeting with Mr. Green that members of the alliance want compensation for properties confiscated by the three countries before and after the Second World War.

Mr. Seifert said Danube-Swabians are people of German descent who first settled in Yugoslavia, Hungary and Romania as colonists more than 200 years ago. Those now in Canada fled their adopted homelands after the Communists took over.

ASK COMPENSATION

A resolution submitted to Mr. Green by the delegation said that Danube - Swabians in Canada have been unable to obtain compensation for properties seized after they fled their homelands and later migrated to this country.

The resolution asked the government to appoint an individual or a committee to open negotiations with the three nations.

Mr. Green told the delegation he would investigate the claims for compensation. He said that Canada has diplomatic relations with Yugoslavia, making it possible for the government to open negotiations with that country.

However, he doubted that the government could do anything with the other two countries with which Canada has no diplomatic relations.

1,400 APPLY

Mr. Seifert said that to date the alliance has received 1,400 applications for compensation amounting to some $16,000,000. He said that 60,000 former residents of the three countries now in Canada would have claims amounting to about $48,000,000.

The claims, he said, cover property, homes, businesses and farms confiscated after the Danube - Swabians left their homes and came to Canada.

The resolution presented to Mr. Green said the Danube-Swabians were citizens of Canada at the time their holdings were confiscated or became citizens of Canada after their property was seized.

Road Builders Told How To Cut Costs

TORONTO (CP) — Highways Minister W. A. Goodfellow Tuesday told municipal road builders they could cut costs by opening contract tenders publicly and awarding the job to the lowest bidder.

Mr. Goodfellow, who became highways minister in a cabinet shuffle four months ago, also called on the Ontario Good Roads Association convention to get the most for their money by keeping abreast of the latest in construction techniques.

Pointing out that his department is paying some $75,000,000 in subsidies to municipalities in the current fiscal year, Mr. Goodfellow said taxpayers have the right to demand that the money is used "in the most effective way possible."

The minister said that his department's policy of public opening of tenders and awarding the contract to the lowest bidder "has earned for us an enviable reputation . . . (and) would bring similar advantages to municipal jurisdictions."

On making the most of new techniques, Mr. Goodfellow told the gathering of municipal and commercial road builders that his department soon will carry out demonstration projects on township roads. Municipal road superintendents and engineers will be invited to watch the application of new methods.

The minister said that integration of the municipal roads branch of his department with the section responsible for provincial roads now is in its final stage. The integration program was started two years ago to make provincial engineering facilities available for subsidized municipal road building.

Anglo-American Leaders Remain in Basic Accord

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

While shades of difference have turned up in the replies of Britain and the United States to the Soviet summit appeal, American authorities maintain the differences are minor and that the Anglo-American leaders remain in basic accord.

They suggest Prime Minister Macmillan appears to be a bit more anxious for a summit meeting than President Kennedy but that in all likelihood a summit will emerge before June if Soviet Premier Khrushchev shows any serious intention of negotiating a disarmament deal.

The American concern is that Kennedy should not be forced into talks with Khrushchev if there are advance indications the talks will be fruitless.

They believe the appearance of the president coming away from a summit empty-handed might increase rather than lessen world apprehension about war and might damage his own political image.

DIFFERENCES ASSAYED

So there is caution in American quarters about showing early enthusiasm for a meeting of East-West leaders. American officials believe this caution is not shared to the same extent by Britain; that the British public may be more in favor of summitry than the American public and that British authorities traditionally employ summitry more skilfully than their American cousins.

The Anglo-American leaders are in agreement that every means should be used to persuade Khrushchev to allow the disarmament talks to start at the foreign ministers' level.

Kennedy says he wants to see some progress or prospects of progress at lower levels before world leaders meet. Macmillan agrees but he goes a step farther, suggesting a summit meeting might also be necessary if a major deadlock emerges preventing "further progress."

The suggestion in Macmillan's use of the words "further progress" is interpreted in American quarters as indicating that Macmillan—like Kennedy—would want to see some initial progress made before summitry begins.

But Macmillan goes on to suggest that progress or deadlock may arise "fairly soon" after the 18 countries outline their disarmament proposals. That seems to tie him down to a willingness to attend a summit under a variety of circumstances.

Kennedy says he hopes developments would make a summit useful before June 1, but the word "useful" would indicate he has reservations about the circumstances under which he would attend.

WILL TAP JORDAN

JERUSALEM (Reuters)—Plans to step up Israel's tapping of the River Jordan to water its dry southern regions were revealed Tuesday as the government presented its new budget to parliament. Israel already has spent £100,000,000 ($33,300,000) since 1953 on the project.

NEED SUBSIDIES

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Preparation of students for the priesthood is the Roman Catholic Church problem that most heavily "weighs on my heart," Pope John told a gathering of cardinals, archbishops and bishops Tuesday. He said: "The common preoccupation of all ought to unite us, to the end that youths called to the priesthood can find proper subsidies for preparation of the tasks that await them."

Debate Raging in India As to Whether Astrology Is a Science or a Fraud

By RUKMINI DEVI
Canadian Press Correspondent

BOMBAY (CP) — A fierce debate is raging in India as to whether astrology is a science or a fraud.

The participants range from college professors to rural traders and from seasoned politicians to peasant grandmothers. Prime Minister Nehru himself has given a sharp edge to the controversy with some pungent remarks.

Until 5:30 a.m. Feb. 5, the tide was running in favor of the pro - astrology group. At the fateful moment, a group of planets was scheduled to gather in a particular part of the sky in an astronomical event which takes place only 10 times in 1,000 years.

Astrologists predicted the event would be marked on earth by tidal waves, rising rivers and other catastrophes. The planets met, but nothing happened.

CALL FOR JAIL TERMS

The anti-astrology faction now says "a big fraud" was perpetrated on gullible people by astrologers. "Send them to jail," stormed The Free Press Bulletin, Bombay's leading evening daily.

Many leading astrologers say the fact the predicted tragedies did not develop does not mean astrology is not a science. "It only shows how effective our prayers have been," said one.

All over the country some 10,000 "yagnas" or congregational prayers were organized to ward off the calamities. Nehru has described the spending of vast amounts of money on the yagnas as "a national waste." Most papers have backed his statement that exploitation of public gullibility should not be permitted.

Some politicians do not agree with Nehru that astrology is misleading the people. Many are known to consult astrologers frequently. Finance Minister Morarji Desai, a devout Hindu, does not embark on any major step without knowing what his astrologer thinks of it.

CABINET INFLUENCED

But Nehru and most of the younger politicians and intellectual leaders feel the preoccupation with astrologers not only gives the country a bad name outside but hampers constructive work.

"In this age when man is circling the earth in spaceships and may land on the moon in the near future it is ridiculous that some people here continue to think that praying with folded hands will usher in national prosperity," Nehru said.

Pandit Ram Kishen, a Punjab astrologer, thinks Nehru should be "neutral" in the controversy. "If a powerful man like our beloved prime minister condemns astrologers what will the ordinary people think of our profession?" He asked in a letter to a New Delhi paper.

Tribal Hatreds Run So Deep Kenya Political Leaders Fear Danger of Civil War

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — A sense of foreboding stalks the conference on Kenya's political future now taking place in London.

"Uhuru" — independence—is the common ambition of the Kenya Negro leaders. But tribal hatreds within their two parties run so deep that they cannot agree on the kind of constitution an independent Kenya should have.

If these hatreds are not calmed down by a constitutional settlement, there is a danger of tribal war tearing Kenya apart. Europeans there would inevitably be caught up in it.

The talks, which started Feb. 14, proceed under this "shadow of the panga" — the fear of a fresh outbreak of butchery and barbarism in the land where Mau Mau terror raged from 1952 to 1956.

Eric Downton of the Daily Telegraph once a member of the Ottawa Press Gallery, is one of those who fear for the white settler under the rule of men once associated with Mau Mau.

'NONE LESS READY'

Writes Downton: "No country in the Commonwealth's history of evolving nations has been less ready for independence than Kenya today."

Kenya's economy, he says, is virtually in ruins and will collapse completely once the white farmers leave or are dispossessed of their land. Her future leaders he describes as "politically unstable, disdainful of economic realities, obsessed with personal ambitions and fractionally divided in bitter feuds."

How unstable are the Africans who one day will run Kenya?

At present both parties, the Kenya African National Union and the Kenya African Democratic Union, are ruling in semi-independence under a British governor, Sir Patrick Renison.

KANU, which wants a strong centralized government for Kenya, is the party of the Kikuyu, biggest of Kenya's 44 tribes and the one in which the Mau Mau terrorist society was hatched. The Kikuyu always have resented European occupation of the so-called "white highlands," Kenya's most fertile area.

KANU is led by Jomo Kenyatta, the leonine 72-year-old who was imprisoned for seven years for his part in managing Mau Mau, but has since regained respectability in the eyes of many Britons. Second in command is Tom Mboya, generally regarded here as a cool-headed, able politician. He has been criticized in his own ranks for pro-American leanings.

ONE IS WILD

There is also the "wild man" of KANU — Oginga Odinga, who makes no secret of his affection for Moscow. Odinga once declared:

"The African people will decide themselves what type of life they are going to live in their own country. And if they think that savagery is the most fitting, then they will choose it."

The opposition party, KADU, claims the allegiance of 41 of Kenya's lesser tribes. Led by Ronald Ngala, present leader of the House in Kenya's Legislative Council, KADU deeply distrusts the Kikuyu and wants to ensure this forceful tribe will not dominate independent Kenya.

KADU's constitutional plan is for a federal structure of six provinces to give each tribal area a certain amount of autonomy.

Some British commentators who used to think of KADU as by far the more moderate party of the two have been shocked by the violence with which some KADU men now are pressing their case.

William Murgor, a junior minister in the coalition, recently threatened that if the British don't meet KADU's wishes it would "sound the whistle for a civi war."

UNDERSTANDS FEAR

But it is generally felt that Colonial Secretary Reginald Maudling will favor the KNU plan as containing fewer risks of tribal warfare. He is, however, expected to sympathize with KADU's fear of Kikuyu domination and to insist on a bill of rights to safeguard all minorities, Negro and white.

This fear of one tribe by another, says the Guardian of Manchester, is what the London conference is really about. Patrick Keatley, The Guardian's Vancouver-born Commonwealth correspondent, says Maudling's task is "reconciling the irreconcilable."

Whichever party's constitution is eventually adopted, Kenya's 3,500 white farming families face the prospect of being dispossessed of much of their land. Both parties have promised that expropriation will be done selectively and under fair compensation. Most European farmers fear that once Britain has left constitutional promises will quickly be forgotten.

The view ahead for this lush green land looks even gloomier than that for Northern Rhodesia. This is partly because of the emotional associations Britons have with Kenya. Once it was their most prosperous and glamorous colony in Africa, land of big game hunters and gracious, spacious living.

Peanuts Provide 90 PC Of Republic of Senegal's Exports to Help French Aid

DAKAR (AP) — French aid helps the Republic of Senegal along, but it's peanuts that provide the main support.

The oil-bearing nut, in production here for a hundred years, accounts for 90 per cent of Senegal's exports. An export tax on peanuts yields about half the national revenue.

Senegal has a population of 3,280,000. About 46,000 of these are French, and French is the common language. Paris' influence dates from the 17th century This influence still dominates living, although the country is today politically independent.

Dakar, westernmost point of the African continent, has broad boulevards and paved sidewalks with colorful cafes. Shops feature French couture, coiffure, books, newspapers and magazines. You can buy French bread by the yard, French perfumes, cigarettes, automobiles, bicycles.

MEN GO MODERN

Senegalese say continued French influence in their country is logical because France has been "a truly loving parent." In 1960 French assistance to Senegal was estimated at $45,000,000, including $20,000,000 in subsidies to maintain peanut and peanut oil prices above world levels. The French government and individuals have several hundred million dollars invested in Senegal.

Like other recently-independent African countries, Senegal's pressing problem is to raise the low standard of living.

ALIGNED WITH WEST

Complete non-alignment is the official basis of Senegal's foreign policy. But apart from a Yugoslav charge d'affaires, there is no Eastern bloc representative in Senegal. Non-alignment in Senegal means no alignments with the Communist bloc; the government is solidly with the West as a result of its French orientation.

President Leopold Sedar Senghor, 55, often is described as a man who reasons as a Frenchman, but leads his nation as an African. He is a Sorbonne-educated poet and philosopher and a Roman Catholic in a predominantely-Moslem land. His wife is French.

The 50-year-old premier, Mamadou Dia, is a Moslem. He controls internal administration and security and is the most practical member of the ruling team.

The 1,300-mile microwave system under construction from Grande Prairie, lta., to the Alaska-Yukon border will have 42 relay stations.

Productivity Council Goal May Be Aided by Seminar To Be Held in Kingston

By ALAN DONNELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — A national effort to "work smarter"—with workers and employers jointly planning details of increased efficiency in more than 6,000 factories — is the dream of the National Productivity Council.

But after a year of activity, the council still sees this goal well in the future.

Instead, its first task is to change old attitudes and overcome mutual suspicions at the top levels of industries and unions, and hope this will filter down to the working levels.

The chairman of the 25-member council—Michigan - born H. George De Young, put the problem bluntly in a recent speech:

"How do we get to realize that we are not natural enemies but natural teammates? How do we communicate?"

FRANK TALK

The first big effort at communication, at fostering a team spirit, will be made in mid-March at Kingston, Ont. Company and union presidents, 40 from each side, have been invited to a two - day seminar at Queen's University, including heads of some of the big industrial unions who have been strongly critical of the council.

They will talk—frankly, it's hoped—behind closed doors. If the conference is successful, further such meetings will be held.

The council's executive director, 37 - year - old John Dickinson, emphasizes that productivity changes in a factory affect people, especially the big changes involved in automation.

"The problem is one of how to accommodate these changes," he said in an interview.

Mr. De Young told an audience recently that labor has an attitude of "real fear" at the prospect of workers being dislocated. But he emphasized that labor isn't the only reluctant party.

"In co - operation between management and labor, I find management as hard to convince as labor," he said.

'WORK SMARTER'

The Productivity Council was set up Feb. 28 last year with five representatives from each of four groups: Industry and commerce, labor, primary industries including agriculture, and the general public. Mr Dickinson and four senior civil servants are also council members.

Mr. De Young, president of Atlas Steels Limited, Welland, Ont., outlined productivity "Work smarter."

"We must take our plants job by job, department by department, and ask . .,. Why do we do that? What do we accomplish? Is it necessary? Why do it at all? Why there? Where else? When do we do it Why then? Who does it? Why does he? Why not somebody else? Why not do it automatically?

"And on through the plant, man by man, job by job, to management. And here is a grand place to ask, why do we have him? What does he do?"

He emphasizes that the council is not an economic planning organization with executive or even advisory powers.

"We hope to be the promoters and stimulators, and we know the individual Canadian firms and people must be the doers."

Mr. De Young, who came to Canada, 11 years ago and became a Canadian citizen in 1956, has been promoting and stimulating the productivity idea in nearly 20 major speeches in the last year.

SET UP COMMITTEES

He says the productivity effort must be based on in-plant committees where labor and management can get down on detailed cases.

The council has set its sights on 6,060 such committees across Canada. It is depending on provincial, regional and local organizations to foster their spread.

Mr. Dickinson said that as a starting point it is hoped to make use of more than 1,700 labor - management committees already in existence.

Almost all of these, he said are limited to safety programs in the plant, while a few provide a forum for discussion of technological changes and job training.

The council has in the works a program of courses to train men in productivity and work-study methods. A group of experts will make a cross-country tour in June to hold seminars in perhaps a dozen cities.

In his speeches Mr. De Young has repeatedly pointed to gains in productivity and competitive strength in the economies of other countries. National production per person in Canada had declined while that of other countries had risen.

PRODUCTION LAGS

"Unless all Canadians can be inspired to undertake a continuing long - term national effort to achieve an accelerating national economic growth, we must watch the competing nations surpass us in all standards.

"One wonders how bad must our economic conditions become before we can have a co-operative effort between management and labor and our government."

He has also referred—perhaps a bit enviously — to productivity councils in such countries as Greece, with a $300,000 annual budget, or in Japan with a headquarters staff of 200 and a budget of more than $4,000,000.

The Canadian council has a headquarters staff of seven, including two secretaries, and a $450,000 budget to spread over its first three years of existence.

Council members, who have held five meetings, receive no payment except for travel and living expenses. Legislation permits a $3,000 - a - year honorarium to the chairman, but Mr. De Young has asked that it not be paid him.

Allowances For Veterans, Widows Cut

OTTAWA (CP)—About 29,000 recipients of war veterans' and widows' allowances will take a $10 cut because of the extra $10 being paid as of Feb. 1 to all old age pensioners at 70 or more.

Officials of the veterans affairs department gave the estimate Tuesday. The reduction is to keep within the allowable-income ceilings for veterans and veterans' widows.

These were increased by 20 per cent last June. The maximum monthly rate that can be paid is $84 for single persons and $144 for married couples, subject to a means test.

These maximum payments are made only where they are necessary to bring total income up to the ceilings of $108 monthly for single persons and $174 for married couples. Less amounts are paid where other income—including old age pensions which now are $65 monthly—pushes the recipient's total closer to these ceilings.

Jumping to Conclusions, Do You Agree With Any?

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Jumping to conclusions (and how many do you agree with?):

Men are more willing than women to face up to the fact they are homely. One reason is mirrors. Beauty lies in the eyes of the beholder, and women look at themselves so often in the mirror that in time even the homeliest falls in love with the image of herself.

It became a woman's world when they took cuspidors out of barbershops and other public places. It'll become a man's world again when they put them back.

Why is it big fat women usualy prefer skinny little dogs as pets?

Somehow I always feel sorry for people who brag about how many words their parakeets can say. Anyone who goes around quoting a parakeet has led a starved life.

A daughter who can't wrap her father around her little finger by the time she's three years old will have a hard time getting married later in life.

LIVED-IN FACE

Audrey Hepburn has the world's loveliest feminine face. Anthony Quinn has the most masculine face in moviedom—because it looks like it has been lived in.

Crabgrass is the biggest cause of virtue in the suburbs. Fighting it keeps a fellow so busy his thoughts don't have time to stray to his neighbor's pretty wife.

Any bartender will bet you 10-to-1 that if three women come into a lounge together they won't all order the same drink. The odds are even that each will order a different cocktail.

Women detest any manly habit they themselves can't imitate gracefully. That's why so many object to men smoking cigars. They'd like to enjoy the soul - surrendering pleasure of puffing on a good cigar, but this is one masculine art they haven't been able to copy with an air of charm.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Six years ago, Peterborough, one of the best all-round sports centres in this part of Ontario, dived into the supposedly placid waters of junior "A" hockey.

Over a period of five years, reports have it, and despite clubs that were not all top calibre, the venture paid off.

But turbulent undercurrents have storm-tossed what was supposed to be smooth sailing, and the rumors insist that the franchise may be transferred to London, which is building a 5,000-seat auditorium.

And as Jack Gatecliffe, St. Catharines sports editor, who has been on top of junior hockey, lo, these many years, says, "unless the Montreal Canadiens can do a better job than they did in Kitchener and Peterborough, London is certainly not getting any huge bargain."

It seems that Peterborough fans, many of whom supported the junior "A" even in the lean years, are far from satisfied with the way in which the Canadiens' management has handled the player situation.

Peterborough sports editor Cec Perdue says, "Montreal's Sam Pollock keeps emphasizing how much money the NHL club has put into Peterborough the past five years. Possibly $60,000, maybe less. Pollock doesn't mention what Canadiens got back by selling players developed in Peterborough. Some estimate it as high as $100,000. It has been reported that two players alone, sold to other NHL clubs—Connelly and Spencer—brought $60,000 to the Habs. Not to mention Mikol in the AHL and others in minor pro clubs here and there."

"Local fans," says Perdue, "have been critical for some time of the way the Montreal club packs their junior 'A' team without giving much help to the Peterborough club. It is true the Habs brought interesting hockey to Peterborough and spent a lot of money here. It is also true that the Montreal club has made a lot of money out of the deal."

"The local executive," Perdue goes on, "with money from the fans, has spent plenty, such as paying salaries for coaches and players (a big item), buying certain players, handling all transportation, hotels, etc."

"It is a two-way deal and the sponsoring National Hockey League club has a duty in return for the development and support here."

And Gatecliffe adds: "What irks officials in Peterborough is that some of the best Ontario junior players in the Montreal chain have been shipped out of the province to the already well-stocked junior Canadiens."

Bill Plager, third in line of the hockey-playing Plager brothers from Kirkland Lake, could have been used by the Petes this year, but instead he was dispatched to the Lachine junior "B" club.

"Norm Dennis and Bill Inglis, brilliant members of the junior Canucks, are also Ontario-born and raised but were transferred to Montreal rather than staying in this province with the Petes."

"Not only," says Gatecliffe, "did the Petes apparently receive little consideration for players which they rightfully believed should be their own, but they have had less and less help from the Canadiens' stock of talent in Quebec."

"There is little wonder," he adds, "that the Montreal Canadiens at the present time are not the most popular team in the city of Peterborough."

Except for one season when they won the Ontario championship, Petes' teams have not been of top-flight calibre although they finished second in 1958-59. They were sixth in 1960-61 and have been playoffs-ousted this year. Attendance dropped alarmingly this year.

If the Peterborough caper is an example of NHL clubs modus operandi regarding junior "A" farm clubs, it might behoove hockey men of other centres who may be approached, to study the situation carefully—and read the fine print in the contract.

Hawks Face Leafs, Jinx In Toronto

Yet To Win In Gardens

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The National Hockey League heads into the last four weeks of its 1961-62 schedule tonight with games at Toronto and New York.

Both games are big ones as three of the four participants are involved in the scramble for final playoff berths.

At Toronto, the Maple Leafs are host to Chicago Black Hawks with both engaged in a struggle for second place. Leafs go into the game with a three-point edge and two games in hand.

Boston Bruins, winless in 14 starts and already out of the running for a playoff spot, are at New York for a go against the Rangers.

The Blueshirts are fighting for fourth place. They currently hold a three - point lead over fifth - place Detroit Red Wings, but after tonight's game they will have played three more games than the Wings.

HAVE LITTLE SUCCESS

The Black Hawks haven't had much success at Toronto so far this season. The same goes for Bobby Hull, their husky left winger who is making a run for the NHL's 50 - goal record in one season.

In five starts at Maple Leaf Gardens, Chicago has lost by 2-1, 6-4 and 6-3 scores and ties 1-1 and 0-0.

Hull has scored 24 goals in his last 21 games for a season total of 39. But none of his tallies have come on Toronto ice.

Hull needs 11 goals in Chicago's remaining 10 games to tie the record set by retired Maurice (Rocket) Richard of Montreal Canadiens in 1944-45 and matched by Bernie Geoffrion, also of Canadiens, last season.

The Maple Leafs, meanwhile, appear to have recovered from a slump that just about knocked them out of the running for the league title.

They won only two of nine starts before breaking loose for 7-2 and 8-2 routs of Boston and Detroit last weekend. They are still 12 points behind league-leading Montreal and each club only has 12 games left.

Boston has gained only two ties in its last 14 outings. The club also appears to be headed for an unenviable league record — most goals scored against one team in a season.

In 60 games, the Bruins have given up 274 goals, an average of 4.57 for each outing. At this rate, they'll have 319 goals against them when the season ends, breaking the mark of 310 set by Rangers in 1943-44.

Rangers may be without centre Camille Henry, who has been bothered by injuries for several months. Henry hurt a knee when checked by Bobby Rousseau of Canadiens Sunday night and his return to the lineup is indefinite.

There is only one game scheduled Thursday night. It's at Boston where the Bruins will face the Black Hawks.

Kingston, Pepsi's Tonight!

Lammy Lamirande's Belleville Pepsi's will be seeking their third straight victory in the intermediate "A" round-robin playoffs here tonight.

They meet the Kingston Automats in the second game of the home and home series and anticipate a tough battle from the Limestone city entry.

The big red team had to go all out in a third-period drive Monday night to grab the victory in Kingston. They won 8-2 after a driving last-period four-goal outburst.

The Pepsi's go to Lindsay Friday night for the fourth game of the series and a win tonight and a repeat Friday should practically sew up a spot in the finals for the Lamiranders.

The Kingston team paced by ex-senior players Clint Tinkess and Kenny Linesman will ice a strong squad, it is reported, in an effort to square the series and break into the win column.

The game gets underway at 8.30.

Quebec Peewees

QUEBEC (CP) — The annual East-West game of the International Peewee Hockey Tournament will be played today with the week-long carnival extravaganza half over.

A band of young Indians from southern Alberta will meet Chandler, Que., peewees in the match that pits the entries most widely separated by distance.

Neither team has had much luck so far. Southern Alberta, only Western Canada team entered, lost 2-1 to Murdochville, Que., Tuesday. Chandler lost 4-3 to Montmorency, Que., in overtime. Tournament officials later disqualified Montmorency for having players over the 12-year age limit.

Earlier, Chandler lost to Amos Que., 3-1.

Rockland, Ont., whipped Beaupre, Que., 9-2 in another game.

Only 32 of the 54 original entries are left in the running for the tournament championship, to be decided Saturday night in a game that last year drew 16,000 fans.

There has been a regular attendance so far of about 2,000. The tournament is a popular highlight of Quebec's colorful winter carnival.

'Win Title For Canada'

Terriers Win Trail 'Grudge' 3-1

TRAIL, B.C. (CP)—Manager Len Gaudette of Galt Terriers says his club, which carries Canada's hopes to the world hockey championships in Colorado Springs, Colo., next month, won't lose another game this year.

He made the prediction after the Terriers beat the 1961 world champion Trail Smoke Eaters 3-1 in an exhibition game here Tuesday night.

"After beating Trail right in their own back yard, we won't lose another game this year," Gaudette said. "We will retain the world title for Canada.

"Two months ago I stated the Terriers would only place a possible third in the world tournament, but our club has found the old form it has been looking for."

DOESN'T IMPRESS

Coach Bobby Kromm of the Smoke Eaters said the Terriers did not impress him.

"The Smoke Eaters could have played a much better game had they not lost star centre Hal Jones. We had to juggle our lines and this kind of killed the team."

Jones suffered a groin injury and left early in the game.

The game drew 3,800 fans in this Kootenay city. The Terriers, in the Ontario Hockey Association senior series, took a 2-1 first-period lead and added a goal in the third. Trail is in the Western International League.

Jackie McLeod, who played with the Smokies last season, scored twice for Galt. Butch Martin was the other Galt marksman. Gerry Penner scored for Trail.

70 Stitches Needed to Close Wound

OWEN SOUND (CP)—Seventy stitches were required to close a wound on the right leg of Waterloo forward Pete Brill after he had crashed into the boards during an Ontario Hockey Association Central Union B game Tuesday night.

The accident happened in the second period as Brill was carrying the puck past the Owen Sound net. After treatment in hospital he went home by bus with the rest of the team.

Waterloo won the game 10-0 to take a 3-1 lead in the seven-game series to decide the finalists in the league.

Winners of the series will meet the winners of the Kitchener-Hamilton series in the finals. At present Kitchener leads Hamilton 2-1 with one game tied.

Jay May Retire

'Oils Well' With Joey

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Ace pitcher Joey Jay says he's unhappy with Cincinnati Reds' $22,500 contract offer and is thinking about retiring from baseball at 26. He can afford to.

Jay has five oil wells pumping black gold for him and three more in the drilling stage in West Virginia.

However, the contract offer isn't Jay's main complaint.

"I don't think the ball club has been fair and I want to play where I'll be treated fairly," he said Tuesday.

About the salary offer, confirmed by Cincinnati general manager Bill Dewitt, Jay said:

"I had 6½ years in the big leagues, won the pitcher award and had a pretty good season. I made $15,000 last year. If this is as high as I can go, I figure I'll retire from baseball, at this rate, there's no future in the sport.

DESERVES MORE

"His (Dewitt's) point is that he wants to give me gradual raises. I know he's given more of a raise to others who made more. The point is, I think I deserve a better salary than he's offered."

Dewitt said he originally offered Jay $20,000 for the 1962 National League campaign but increased it to $22,500 last week.

"It is not our policy to discuss contract terms, but since he has discussed it I suppose I must also," Dewitt said.

"I sent him a telegram Saturday reconfirming the new offer and I have not heard from him. I don't know whether he intends playing baseball or not."

MONTREAL (CP) — Bobby Hull can wind up the present National Hockey League season with 50 goals if he maintains the torrid scoring pace of his last seven weeks.

If the husky left winger of Chicago Black Hawks gets 50, he'll become the second player in two years to tie retired Maurice (Rocket) Richard's record for most goals in one season.

Hull has been bombing opposing netminders with amazing regularity since Jan. 11, getting 24 goals in 21 games.

His season total stands at 39 and extension of the recent surge through Chicago's remaining 10 games would give him the 11 goals he needs to tie the mark, equalled by Montreal's Bernie Geoffrion last year.

Richard, a 544 - goal scorer during 18 seasons with Montreal, established the 50 - goal mark in 1944-45 in a 50-game schedule.

The Hawks' remaining games don't favor Hull. They must play three each against Montreal and Toronto, two against Detroit and one each against New York and Boston.

Two of the games against the Leafs are in Toronto, where Hull hasn't scored this season. Furthermore, two of the games against Canadiens are in Montreal and Hull has scored only twice there in five years of regular season play.

Habs, Petes Tie

Flyers Nip Royals 4-3

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Thrilling finishes marked both Ontario Hockey Association Junior A games Tuesday night.

At Peterborough, the league-leading Montreal junior Canadiens fired in a shot with just 30 seconds to go to earn a 1-1 tie with the last-place Petes. At Niagara Falls, the Flyers scored at 17:53 of the final period to edge Guelph Royals 4-3.

The Flyers share fourth place in the standings with Guelph, but have a game in hand. The other result had no effect on the standings.

A crowd of 3,756 saw Bob Jamieson give the Petes a 1-0 lead in the first period. They held their lead until the final moments, when the Canadiens pulled goaltender George Holmes and Jacques Laperriere broke through to score the equalizer.

A blazing 20-foot shot with just two minutes and seven seconds to go by Terry Crisp gave the Flyers a 4-3 win over the Royals.

Captain Billy Knibbs, Wayne Maxner and Howie Dietrich were the other Niagara Falls marksmen. Dave McComb, Mike McMahon and Duke Harris scored for Guelph.

In Metro Junior A action Tuesday night Brampton scored three goals in the final period to snatch a 7-6 win over Whitby.

Norm Cash Signs For $29,000

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP)—Norm Cash signed his Detroit Tiger contract Tuesday and learned the financial power of the home run.

Nobody finished higher than Cash in the American League batting derby last season. There were 27 players who qualified for the batting crown and finished above Roger Maris.

But the New York Yankees' slugger, who hit 61 home runs, will make about $43,000 more than Cash, the reigning AL batting king. Maris signed Monday for $72,000. Cash, who hit 41 home runs and batted .361—92 percentage points more than Maris—accepted a $29,000 offer.

"I won the batting race, but Maris won that other race—the money race," drawled Cash. "If he can make that kind of money, more power to him.

"As for me, I'm satisfied. We compromised and I got a nice raise."

Cash's raise was $16,000.

Star hitter Rocky Colavito is the only Tiger who has not agreed to terms.

Minor Hockey

The Rovers blanked the Untouchables 3-0 and the Riske Boys downed Bishop Six 4-2 in midget hockey playoffs held last night.

Brian Derry scored two goals to spark the Riske Boys to their 4-2 win. Bill Clapp and Flindall also scored with Chappell drawing one assist. Dyble triggered both Bishop Six goals, Rutherford and Hannah getting assists.

In the squirt league, the Maple Leafs edged the Rangers 5-4 while the Bruins topped the Macs 4-1. Other games were consolation affairs.

P. Muldoon scored three goals to lead the Leafs to victory. S. Reid and S. Muldoon had a goal each. T. Meagher scored twice, B. Cousins and K. Wilson one apiece for Rangers.

In consolation games, the Red Wings blanked the Flyers 4-0. Coughlin registered the shutout while D. Fobert scored three goals and A. Wilson one.

Steelheads Defeat Japanese

CHILLIWACK, B.C. (CP)—Chilliwack Steelheads beat the touring Japanese Olympics 10-4 in an exhibition hockey game before about 1,200 fans Tuesday night.

Japan's goaltender, Shoichi Tomita, was a standout, making 42 stops compared to only 22 for Chilliwack's Al Welsner.

The clubs split the eight penalties handed out in the game, which was played under international rules in preparation for the Japanese squad's competition in the world hockey championships next month in Colorado Springs, Colo.

Chilliwack led 2-1 at the end of the first period and 6-3 after the second.

CZECH LEADS SKATERS

GENEVA (AP)—Karol Divin of Czechoslovakia won a narrow lead over Alain Calmat of France Tuesday in official ratings counting toward the men's title in the 1962 European figure skating championships.

In compulsory figure competition, the two emerged as leading contenders for the title given up by France's Alain Giletti who turned professional after winning the European championship in Berlin last year.

Defeats Quinte S.S. in Playoff

BCI Wins Quinte Title

By PETER CARVER

Coach Stan Barbour's BCIVS Collegians captured their second consecutive Bay of Quinte senior "A" basketball championship here last night.

The Collegians defeated a fighting Quinte Secondary School squad 65-53 in a sudden-death playoff thriller at Moira Secondary School gymnasium.

The playoff game stemmed from identical records of the teams, both having won nine and lost one over the ten-game schedule.

Quinte, however, may get another crack at the two-time champions, both teams taking part in the COSSA championships in Oshawa on Saturday. BCIVS are the defending COSSA champions.

Moira S.S. and Quinte S.S. junior squads will represent the Quinte district in their division championships at Oshawa.

The game last night was a see-saw defensive battle for the first half but a combination of BCI aggressiveness and a Quinte lapse spelled the Saints' downfall.

The teams concentrated on defensive play in the first quarter. Many fine checks and rough play under both baskets limited the scoring. BCI led 11-10 at quarter time.

It was altogether different in the second stanza. The play was rough and tumble but this did not mar good shooting and driving, as play moved quickly from one end of the court to the other. BCI dumped in 22 points whilst the Saints were breathing hard down their necks with 20.

The winners cut loose in the last half as the Quinte defences let up and the Collegians drove through them at will. BCI backboard control and a fast-moving offence, allowed them to click for 20, while holding a shoddy Saint offensive movement to a half-dozen.

Quinte cut the margin in the final period of play but BCI picked up in the final five minutes to crush all Quinte hopes of rally, and to clinch the win and championship. The winners were outscored 17-12 in the last quarter.

There were no individual BCI stars as the starting five all turned in a tremendous team effort both on defence and while in the forecourt. Pete Weston was high scorer with 14 points while Bruce Regensburg had 13. Larry Campbell clicked for 12.

Wayne Gilroy sparked the losers, scoring 13. Jim Fair had 12 while Latchford and Hall hit for 11.

Lineups:

BCIVS — Campbell 12, McCabe 2, Regensburg 13, Burr 10, Roberts 11, Swan 2, Chick, McKibbon, Weston 14, Williams, Soule.

QSS — Gilroy 13, Fair 12, Hall 11, Latchford 11, Chatland 5, Marriott, Fisher, Thompson, Burley, Hatch, Irvine 2.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Time is running out on Quebec Aces in their bid to grab second place in the American Hockey League's eastern division.

The Aces, one of the league's toughest teams on home ice, blew a big chance Tuesday night when they outplayed Rochester Americans but had to settle for a 3-3 overtime tie in the only league action.

Frank Martin, Skippy Burchell and Guy Black scored for Quebec. Dick Gamble, Stan Smrke and Bruce Draper tallied for the Americans.

Women's Curling

BC Remains Unbeaten

REGINA (CP)—Three rinks, Quebec, defending champion Saskatchewan and Manitoba, dropped from the unbeaten ranks in the Canadian women's curling championships in Tuesday's three rounds.

Remaining undefeated, with a 5-0 record, was British Columbia, skipped by strong and consistent Ina Hansen of Kimberley.

Joyce McKee of Saskatoon and Anne Philips of the town of Mount Royal, Que., are tied with 4-1 records, while Manitoba and New Brunswick have three wins and two losses.

British Columbia knocked out both Saskatchewan, the pre-championships favorite, and Manitoba's Kathleen Hebert.

On the third draw, the first Tuesday, Mrs. Hansen handily dumped Mrs. Hebert 13-6. Then on the fourth draw she nipped Saskatchewan 11-10.

Quebec won over Alberta 9-3 and over Manitoba 10-9 to set the stage for a tight last-rock match with Saskatchewan on the night draw.

Brown Offers to Post Bond

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—Lightweight champion Joe Brown's manager has offered to post a bond guaranteeing his fighter will go through with a title bout April 21 against Carlos Ortiz, promoters said Tuesday.

Matchmaker Mel Greb of Las Vegas said the offer was telephoned to him by manager Lou Viscusi.

It was made, Greb added, because of rumors that Brown was not sick enough to warrant postponement of the Ortiz fight last week.

Doctors said the champion had tonsillitis.

Greb said he would wait a while before deciding whether to accept the offer.

Mets Seek Pitcher, Shortstop

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) George M. Weiss, president of New York Mets, said Tuesday he is dickering for two or three more established players, particularly a shortstop and a pitcher.

"Some of the clubs realize we have a league problem in New York and that it is essential to put a presentable club in there," said Weiss, for many years the mastermind of New York Yankees and now at the helm of the new National League team.

"I prefer to make outright purchases because we are not too deep in material now. I have been in touch by telephone in the last few days with several clubs, but everyone wants to wait a few weeks to see how their younger players are coming along."

Although manager Casey Stengel of the Mets has not named his starting team yet, he has repeatedly mentioned veteran players at seven positions as follows: Catcher, Hobie Landrith; first baseman, Gil Hodges; second baseman, Charlie Neal; third baseman, Don Zimmer and outfielders Richie Ashburn, Gus Bell and Frank Thomas.

Suspension Threat Wont Stop Bout

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A suspension threat against bantamweight king Eder Jofre of Brazil by a British boxing promoter apparently will have no effect on his world title defence here March 20.

Jofre will meet Mexican-born Herman Marquez of Stockton, Calif., in a 15-round bout.

Jack Solomons of London said Tuesday he will ask the regulating boxing bodies of the world to suspend Jofre if the Brazilian doesn't first go through with a return fight against Ireland's Johnny Caldwell.

Solomons said he sent a cablegram to Abraham Katzenelson, Jofre's manager, threatening to seek suspensions and a $100,000 judgment.

Katzenelson arrived in San Francisco Tuesday night and said Jofre will fight Caldwell, but not until after fulfilling contract commitments for the Marquez bout.

Co-promoter George Parnassus said he had a prior agreement with the Brazilian manager for the bout here.

The World of Sophia Loren Given Fan Mag Treatment

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Sophia Loren, a reigning Italian film queen, "Loves her work most in the world, her husband most in the world; she loves eating most in the world, and she likes diamonds most in the world."

This was the summary presented by her current director, Anatole Litvak, in last Tuesday night's portrait of a movie star during NBC's The World of Sophia Loren.

By giving fan magazine treatment to the biographical, marital and occupational details of Miss Loren's life, the program was a happy, hour-long press agent's dream. It not only contained lengthy, hefty plugs for her newest, unreleased film (even a little fill-in on the plot) but had some awfully nice things to say about an earlier one. Two Women, which, it just so happens, has Miss Loren nominated for an Oscar.

Bob Hope had an uninhibited, bright show on NBC Tuesday night. His sketches were as amusing as his opening monologue, due largely to the presence of Steve Allen and Jack Paar.

Richardson Top Fighter Of Month

NEW YORK (AP) — Dick Richardson, 27, European heavyweight boxing champion from Wales, today was named Ring magazine's fighter of the month for his one-round knockout of Germany's Karl Mildenberger in a title bout.

He was ranked 10th, replacing George Logan of Boise, Idaho

Mildenberger had won 19 straight bouts and had suffered only one defeated in 30 pro fights until he was flattened by Richardson.

Bob Cleroux of Montreal was listed fourth among the heavyweights behind champion Floyd Patterson of New York, Sonny Liston of Philadelphia, Eddie Machen of Portland, Ore., and Zora Folley of Chandler, Ariz.

SUGAR RAY SLIPS

The beating Denny Moyer handed Sugar Ray Robinson boosted the baby-faced youngster from Portland, Ore., to seventh place from ninth among the middleweights. Sugar Ray, former world welterweight and five-times middleweight king, was demoted to eighth from fourth.

Besides Patterson, Ring recognizes the following as division champions: Light-heavyweight Archie Moore of San Diego, Calif.; middleweight Terry Downes, England; welterweight Benny Paret, Cuba; lightweight Joe Brown, Houston, Tex; featherweight Davey Moore, Columbus, Ohio; bantamweight Eder Jofre, Brazil and flyweight Pone Kingpeth, Thailand.

The National Boxing Association recognizes Harold Johnson of Philadelphia as light-heavyweight champion and Gene Fullmer, West Jordan, Utah, as middleweight king. Both are listed by Ring as No. 1 contenders in their respective divisions.

Trappers Whip Hull, Beavers Tie

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A third-period goal by Joe Szura gave North Bay Trappers a 3-2 win over Hull-Ottawa Canadiens Tuesday night and a three-point hold on fifth place in the Eastern Professional Hockey League.

The Trappers gained their three-point margin by virtue of a 2-2 tie between Kitchener Beavers and Sault Ste. Marie Thunderbirds, the league's cellar dwellers, in Tuesday night's other action.

The biggest crowd of the season, 4,500, was on hand in North Bay to cheer the Trappers in their drive for the fourth and last playoff position. Sudbury Wolves, now in fourth spot, are seven points ahead of North Bay.

Goals by North Bay's Norm Waslowsky and Bob McCammon and Canadiens' Barclay Plager and Freddie Hiltz produced a 2-2 score going into the third.

Szura broke up the game when he stole the puck from Plager in front of the Hull-Ottawa net and slipped it past Cesare Maniago in the Canadiens goal.

Deborah Kerr in "The King and I", and "Love Is a Many Splendored Thing"

One of the most talented actresses in motion pictures today, Deborah Kerr stars in the role that won her an Oscar nomination, as Anna, the attractive governess in the court of a barbaric emperor, in 20th Century-Fox's glorious adaptation of the Rogers and Hammerstein's hit musical play, "The King and I". Costarring Yul Brynner in his Academy Award winning performance, and the lovely Rita Moreno "West Side Story" Moreno, the Cinemascope-De Luxe Color extravaganza is showing tonight for the last times at the Belle Theatre.

The worthy added feature, "Love Is a Many Splendored Thing", co-stars William Holden and Jennifer Jones, is in gorgeous Color and Cinemascope.

One complete show will be presented tonight starting at 7.00 p.m. The first Feature offering at 7.15 p.m. at the Belle Theatre in Belleville.

Will Ask Suspension Of Champion

LONDON (AP)—British promoter Jack Solomons said Tuesday he will ask the regulating boxing bodies of the world to suspend world bantamweight champion Eder Jofre if the Brazilian doesn't go through with his return fight against Ireland's Johnny Caldwell.

The undefeated Jofre stopped Caldwell in the 10th round of a fight for the disputed world title at Sao Paulo, Brazil, Jan. 18. Jofre is scheduled to risk his crown against Herman Marquez of Mexico at San Francisco, March 20.

"I think my cables will stop the Marquez fight," said Solomons. "If Jofre loses his crown against Marquez how can he defend it against Caldwell as we agreed?"

NEW COMEDIAN BOWS IN "CALL ME GENIUS"

When the English comedy hit "Call Me Genius" opens at the Park Theatre, Thursday, it will mark the debut here of Tony Hancock the latest in Britain's extraordinary bumper-crop of delightful comedians. An established personality on the British Broadcasting Corporation through his very successful TV series "'Ancock's Arf-Hour", his first film endeavor proved to have an amazingly wide appeal which ranged from hard-bitten movie critics to the general public, who made it one of the top box office attractions in England. Offering a different brand of humor, Hancocks fans includde Peter Sellers, Terry-Thomas and Ian Carmichael who go to see him when they want to laugh.

An intense and sincere artist who is completely absorbed in his work, the thirty-seven-year-old Hancock always worked closely with Alan Simpson and Ray Galton, the writers of the TV series. All three were responsible for the screenplay of "Call Me Genius", which according to the English reviewers, was probably the major reason for his successful transition from television to the screen.

Directed by Robert Day, who was responsible for Peter Sellers' hilarious hit "Two Way Stretch", the Technicolor film glorifies the dream-come-true of a bowler-hatted London office clerk (played by Hancock) who throws off the bonds of conformity and takes his chances as an artist on the famed Left Bank in Paris. Unfortunately, he has no talent for art—just a flair for talking himself into odd-ball situations.

Also starred in "Call Me Genius" is George Sanders who in a reversal of type-casting plays an art connisseur with a benevolent disposition. Rounding out the cast are some outstanding character actors who can be found in almost every top British film, including Dennis Price, Irene Handl and John Le Mesurier.

On the same program "Sands of the Desert" in Technicolor is a laugh tonic for old and young starring Charlie Drake, the lovable little comedian who cavorts through his many adventures with a smile to charm even his worst enemies.

See Surprising Omissions In Nominations for Oscars

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — What has the 34th annual Academy Award nominations wrought?

Some rather surprising omissions.

How come Maurice Chevalier was overlooked for his role in Fanny while Charles Boyer wasn't? Why wouldn't the academy take Jimmy Cagney's great comic performance in One, Two, Three seriously? How could voters ignore Albert Finney in Saturday Night and Sunday Morning?

Did Shirley Maclaine and Audrey Hepburn cancel each other out of contention for The Children's Hour? (Audrey was nominated for Breakfast at Tiffany's.)

And how come no recognition for Rosalind Russell's transformation in A Majority of One and Deborah Kerr's portrait of horror in The Innocents?

Why were veteran Oscar winners William Wyler (Children's Hour) and Billy Wilder (One, Two, Three) left at the post, their films largely ignored in major categories.

OFFERS NO ANSWERS

The inscrutable Oscar offers no answers.

If there is any dark horse among the nominees, it is young Stuart Whitman. He was convinced he did a good job in The Mark, and proceeded to convince Hollywood. The film had received critical praise, but created little stir locally and had no big studio to push it.

Whitman arranged to have the film shown to academy voters, and they were persuaded.

Hailed by many critics as one of history's great films, it managed four nominations, including writing and direction. But it couldn't make best picture. No foreign language film has yet been able to crack that category.

Leukemia Finishes Puck Career

HERSHEY, Pa. (CP) — The hockey career of Gord (Bucky) Hollingworth has been ended by a blood disease.

The 28-year-old defenceman and team captain of Hershey Bears of the American League is in hospital with chronic leukemia.

Hollingworth, a native of Verdun, Que., and a former National Leaguer, became ill during a game at Rochester last Friday and was sent to hospital.

Lloyd Blinco, general manager of the Bears, said Tuesday night that doctors told Hollingworth "that with proper care and medicine, he could lead a normal life. He will be unable to do anything strenuous from now on."

Astrological Forecast

By SYDNEY OMARR

For March 1

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Adhere to practical course. Daydreaming could prove quite costly. Nice to be generous, to seek honors, self-satisfaction—but even better to see true picture and act accordingly.

Taurus (Apr 20 to May 20): An evening for romance — or entertaining loved ones. Seek maturity — be lenient with those who appear anxious to quarrel. Some believe you have an immovable nature — it challenges them!

Gemini (May 21 to June 21): The coast is clear where ideas are concerned Let yourself go in connection with plans that could mean a more secure future. Partner may ask financial advice — be helpful, understanding.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21): Best to be extremely cautious when it comes to expressing opinions. Others may be sounding you out — with ulterior motives. Do more listening than talking.

Leo (July 22to Aug. 21): Conditions surrounding home, security, one in authority may not actually be as they seem. Look deep into recent events, statements — you could come up with valuable answers.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Best course is one that emphasizes originality . . . and expression of creative powers. To hold back today is to invite failure. Give your best — and demand the same of others.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): In order to get the most from the day — it is necessary for you to seek the best — in persons, situations, products. Do not be satisfied with second best! Key word: Achievement.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Be willing to see lighter side—a heavy-hearted attitude creates setbacks Evening excellent for entertainment Develop sense of humor. It's fun to be fooled — but not to be deceived.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Conserve energy. Provide for future. Delay signing contracts, agreements. If others try to push — be diplomatic but firm in saying "Not today."

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Lunar cycle high—you can count on your personality, abilities to receive recognition. Maintain air of dignity. If things go against you — smile — you will win out.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): The answer to a perplexing problem is within your grasp. You will not have to look far afield. The answer could be found within the family unit — in your own home. Listen to others.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Like Capricorn, it is essential that you display self-confidence —otherwise, tendency is for those in authority to look elsewhere. A social contact tonight could prove important.

• • •

If today is your birthday — you display a combination of independence and sympathy — you have a feeling for the classic — and also appreciate the modern. Much responsibility thrown your way. You can succeed if you handle one project at a time — and refuse to panic.

• • •

General Tendencies — Cycle up for Sagittarius, Capricorn, Pisces. Short-cut methods to be avoided by all signs. Those who attempt the hard-sell find that others maintain disdainful attitude. Sincerity frankness, honesty pays off best.

Tigers Win Over Athletics

WATERLOO (CP)—Waterloo Tigers scored two goals in the last five minutes of play for a come-from-behind 5-4 victory over Woodstock Athletics Tuesday night.

The win squared the senior Ontario Hockey Association best-of-seven quarter-final between the two clubs at one game each with one tied.

Fourth and fifth games will be played Thursday and Saturday in Woodstock with the sixth back in Waterloo Monday.

Pat Adair, playing his first game with the Tigers since returning from Holland where he played all season, sparked the victory by firing a goal and setting up the tying and winning markers.

Tigers got two goals from defenceman Tom Micallef and singles from Ralph Kosawan and Charlie Brooker.

Woodstock held a 4-2 margin midway through the third period but Micallef cut it with his second goal to set the stage for the windup.

Beryl Klinck, Don Myers, Wayne Litzgus and Toby Black were the Woodstock marksmen

Canadian Engineering Plays Major Role in U.S. Struggle To Reach the Moon, Stars

By HAROLD MORRISON

LANGLEY AIR BASE, Va. (CP) — Canadian engineering brainpower is playing a major role in the United States' struggle to reach the moon and stars.

A small band of Canadians and their British co-workers is quietly working on the design of space ships, solution of space travel problems, tracking of astronauts and safeguarding their recovery.

They are the engineers and designers of the A. V. Roe Plant at Malton, Ont., who were gathered as a team after the war to help create a new jet plane industry from Canada.

They were drawn to Malton to build the CF-100 jet fighter, the Avro jetliner and the Avro Arrow jet interceptor which was to have been one of the most powerful planes in its field in the Western world.

ARROW JUNKED

In 1959 the Canadian government found the Avro program too costly. Production plans were cancelled. The five planes built were junked.

"Collapse of the program was a shock," recalled Peter Armitage, 33-year-old native of Yorkshire, England, who had worked at Avro for six years, ending up as flight tester for the Arrow.

"I felt that when the Canadian government decided to switch to the Bomarc anti-aircraft missile, it was a bad decision. Bomarcs are obsolete. Canada lost some of her best engineering men.

"There is less opportunity now for aircraft design men in Canada. Canada has become more dependent on the United States for design. Rather unfortunate, the whole thing. I did like Canada very much."

HAPPY IN JOB

Armitage is happy in his new work, helping to solve problems involved in recovery of space capsules. So are most of the others snapped up by the U.S. space agency when the Arrow program was cancelled.

Of 28 hired three years ago, 21 remain. At least one may be leaving soon, not because of his work but because the space centre is being switched to Houston, Tex., and he doesn't want to live there.

Others said they would go anywhere as long as they can remain in space research and design. Many said they plan to remain in the U.S. A few yearn to return to Canada.

One said he would like to go back to Canada to teach at a Canadian university if there were an opportunity. Another said he would like to go back to Canadian aviation engineering if he could find a job.

While most, like Armitage, were disappointed when the Arrow folded, the extent of their disappointment varied.

"I didn't suffer very much," said James A. Chamberlin of Kamloops, B.C., and Toronto. The Arrow's chief designer, he now is engineering chief for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, heading the Gemini project to orbit a two-man space capsule, perhaps by 1964.

"If I had stayed with Avro I would have had to work on smaller problems and finer details. The work here is fascinating."

Bryan Erb of Calgary, a heat expert, commented: "I don't think I've lost Canada. I entertain hopes of going back some day to teach."

Stanley Galezowski of Toronto, a computer authority, said: "I've always thought of going back to Canada eventually but there doesn't seem to be much doing there—at least not in this field."

Tomorrow: Canadian heads half - billion - dollar space project.
